International :

The United States and Iran announced yes-terday that Iran planned to make $10 billion in military purchases from the United States as part of mounting trade between the two countries that would total about $50 billion. from last year through 1980. In an effort to emphasize the growing political, economic and military ties between Washington and Teheran, Secretary of State Henry A Kissinger and Iran's Economics Minister, Hushang Ansary, signed a communique in Telegran after a two-day meeting of the Iran-American Joint Commission. The communique set-forth ambitious goals of cooperation for the rest of the decade and showed no sign of a let-up in the arms sales, which were re-cently criticized in Washington in a Schare staff study. [Page 1, Columns 1-2.]

President Idi Amin of Uganda and President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya signed peace documents pledging to resume normal relations, reduce the threat of war and resume trade. The documents were signed in Kampala by President Amin, and in Mombasa by President Kenyatta Later, in a radio address, President Amin said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was the only "obstacle" to restoring relations between Kampala and Washington. [1:3.]

Calm was restored to Soweto, the black township in South Africa where eight people were killed and at least 41 injured in four days of rioting, but police across the country remained on an alert. The objective of the demonstrators was to prevent residents of Soweto from getting to their jobs in Johannesburg. It was believed that peace was mainly due to the exhaustion of the demonstrators, who have had little sleep, and the quieting influence of parents home in greater numbers over the weekend. Soweto soccer stadiums were packed and food deliveries from Johannesburg, which had been suspended, were resumed. [3:4-6.]

White South Africa, which prides itself on one of the highest standards of living in the world, was enjoying an open-air weekend. Only on Johannesburg newspaper billboards was there any sign that dozens of black youths were lying in hospitals with police bullet wounds nine miles to the southwest. After weeks of upheaval in Soweto, the black "shadow city" sprawling beyond aban-doned gold mines, the white community remains almost untouched. [1:1-4.]

The militants' success was reflected in interviews with Soweto parents published this week by the Raod Daily Mail. The paper found many parents facing rejectioo by their children for "collaborating" by working io whiteowned companies or in Governmeot offices. Teachers spoke of a new "black coosciousness" among pubils sioce the Soweto upheaval started, with studeots de-manding that the unrest be discussed in place of classroom lessons. Other parents complained that since the upbeaval began, their children bave cast off the respect for their fathers that is traditional in African society. A beadwaiter in a Johannesburg restau-rant said bis 16-year-old daughter who told him he should be "asbamed" of working for wealthy whites. Rise of the New Leaders The new radical leaders, most of them in their 20's and early 30's, emerged from student bodies at the country's four black universities in the late 1960's. They succeed an earlier generation belonging to the African Na-tional Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress, tha black-resistance groups out lawed by the Government after the 1960 incident at Sharpeville, south of Johannesburg, in which policemen fired on unarmed demonstrators who were protesting the "pass" laws, keeping blacks from white areas. Seventy-two peopla were killed at Sharpeville.

Almost all the earlier-geoeration activists were jailed or pla ecnderdu or placed under orders forbidding political activity. Some went into voluntary exile abroad. The African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela has been in a maximum-security prison on Robben Island, off Cape Town since 1964. His counterpart in the Pan-Africanist Congress. Robert Sobulwee.

The banning of the two groups in the Middle 1960's was followed by five years of relative inactivity among black radicals. In 1969 a group of black university studeots formed the South African Students' Organization. This, with its high-school off-short, the South African Students' Movement, was a major force in the formation in 1972 of the Black Peoples Coovention, the closest thing to a black political party that exists here. After the African National and Pan-Africanist Coogress were outlawed, they organized an external resistance. The Mandela group, with close ties to Moscow, and the Sobukwe organization, ties to Peking, both say they bave extensive underground networks. .The Government, denies that the oetworks are extensive but acknowledges that they exist, but periodi-cally announces the arrests said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was the only "obstacle" to restoring relations between Kampala and Washington.

'Friends in America'

President Amin said that it Mr. Kissinger left the Ford Administration "normal relations between the two countries would be restored."-

"Uganda has many friends in America and has bought a lot of things from there, including planes," President Amin said. He added that he would leave any mediation attempts with Washington to Presidents Mobut S eseSeko of Zaire and William R. Tolbert Jr. of Liberis. But he did not indicate if any new initiative was imminent.

The United States closed its embassy in Kampala in 1973 but stopped short of cutting diplomatic ties.
President Amin also said that relations with Britain, broken last month by London, should be restored because the remain ing Britons in Uganda were not happy with the decision. He asked President Kenyatta to help him restore normal ties with Britain.

with Britain.

Six-Nation Commission

The Foreign Minister of Kenya, Munyua, said a six-nation commission of neighboring countries would be established to help restore normal ties between Viscous and Kenyu tween Uganda and Kenya.

The documents signed under the accord covered three main areas—a reduction in east Africa, a resumption of normal trade ties and a halt to the kill-ing of Kenyans in Uganda. The two countries also agreed to end the current "state of bel-ligerancy," balt a war of words and withdraw "any troops stationed at the common border." They also agreed that "debts are to be paid"—mainly the $50 million Kenya says Uganda owes and that normal trade ties should be restored.

100 Students Reported Slain Observer Foreign News Service

LUSAKA, Zambia, Aug. 7— More than 100 students at Uganda's Makerere University have been slain by troops of President Idi Amin, according to word received here from Kampala, the Uganda capital. Five hundred to 700 others were reported missing and feared dead and more than 1,000 were wounded, the reports said. Students have been the most consistent and volatile center. of opposition to President Amin in Uganda.

Last Tuesday President Amin sent troops to the campus and in the words of a student who was reached by telephone, "a reign of terror began." The students were surrounded by troops armed with automatic apons, he reported. of the students were shot on the spot. Six died instantly," another student said. A second attack on Mackerere occurred at 3 A.M. on Wednesday, Uganda sources said, when a contingent of 200 troops led by a son of President Amin named Taban moved onto the campus. "Again there was terrific terror and violence," a witness said. President Amin sent an envoy to the campus, Gen. Mustafa Adrichl, the Defense Minister and nominal army commander. He was supposed to address students and staff but by Wednesday afternoon the stu-idents had fled from the cam-pus, fearing further attacks.

Clay Tablet in Israel Yields Early Example of Hebrew

TEL AVIV, Aug. 7 (Reuters)
—Israeli archeologists have discovered two fragments of a clay tablet inscribed with Hebrew letters they believe may be the oldest known example of the script.

Dr. Moshe Kochavi of Tel Aviv University and Dr. Moshe Garsiel of Bar-Ilan University said they had uncovered the fragments at Izbet Sarte, about 10 miles northeast of here.

They said the inscription

They said the inscription consisted of 80 Hebrew letters arranged in five lines, but could not as yet be deciphered because of the extremely shallow inscription. imprint.

The archeologists said the find up and to be a hundred years older than the Gezer Calendar of the 10th century B.C., until now the oldest known specimen of Hebrew

Bur-very-nice, in fact, because it has the inimitable A.K. air of casual confidence that says "Oh, this is just something I toss on when there's a nip in the air around Sutton Place."

And here's another in-fact.
This ad is classified "top importance." It's the beginning of a whole new kind of accessorizing; a new way to make your wardrobe (and your wardrobe budget) stretch out toward infinity.

Our Bur nice, you see, is the star of a new collection that the Anne Klein Studios have designed for a company called Robinson & Golluber, well known in the "the trade" for manufacturing fine accessories. The collection is called "Toppings" and it consists of a gamut of terrific new thingies that you'll wear on top of the nice clothes you already own to give a fresh new flair to your fashions.

This flauntable wrap-on, for instance, is a flowy, fleecy blend of acrylic and fluffy mohair (yards of downy delight). Has a romantic hood and a wood-button tab closing. Comes in a delicious shade of Honey or brave Riding Hood Red. And the wonder of it is, you can wear it over everything from tweedy trousers to slinky satin evening skirts. One size fits all, at a honey of a price, 65.00.

We're so impressed with Anne Klein Toppings" that we've set them up in a mini-shop of their own on our fashion floor (three). And here's what you'll find: swirl capes and vests and tabards and mufflers etc. in fine knits with fine tickets like 25.00 and 40.00 etc.

Now all you have to do is say "There's Altman's for you, right on top of things," then pop over to our place and pick your favorite tip-topper. We're having informal modeling tomorrow from 12:30 till 2, to help you choose Saeb Salam, a former moslem Prime Minister, crossed over to the Christian quarter of Asbrafiyah, where he met with Pierre Gemayel, the bead of the Phalange Party, Christian right-wiog organizatioo.

Mr. Salam said after the meeting, which was held at a Greek Orthodox church, that the inteotioo was to insure the the intectioo was to insure the reunification of Lebanon. He told reporters that after many mooths of fighting, the country is divided geographically, demographically and psychologically." It is the duty of every Lebanese to bring about reunification, be said.

Mr. Gemayel raised the ques-tioo of the Palestinian preseoca and said the basic problem was the loss of Lebanon's sover-eignty and security.

Weare oot opposed to the guerrilla movement, but no country in the world can tolerate seeing its sovereignty lost the way Lebanons was, he said.

Cease-Fire a Failure

The meeting iojected a glimmer of hope into a situation that had suffered yet another serback after an effort to enforce a cease-fire failed. A meetiog by a joint commit-tee of Syrian and Palestinian representatives and delegates from the rival Lebanese factions, which was to have taken place today, was postponed in-definitely at Syria's request. The session, which was schedued at Shtaurah io the Bekaa valley, was to have been under the chairmanship of Dr. Hassan Sabry el-Kholy, the Arab League's special envoy.

It was the second postpone-ment this week. The formation of the body had been provided for in the Syriao-Palestinian agreement reached in Damascus 11 days ago. The body was assigned the mission of enforcing a cease-fire in all of Leba-

STOLEN U.S. AUTOS END UP IN MEXICO

Several Theft Rings Work on Both Sides of Border

By EVERETT R. HOLLES

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 7---Jerome Conrad's shiny new Chevrolet sedan was stolen recently from in front of his home in the San Diego suburb of El Cajon where he had parked it overnight.

Before he discovered its loss the next morning, it was across the Mexican border in a Tijuana garage and body shop operated by an aotomobile theft ring, undergoing a transformation on thorough that he would oot be able to recognize it.

Overnight, it was repaioted a bright blue, reupbolstered and provided with different tires, hubcaps, chrome trim, insigoia and bogus engine number corresponding to the manufacturer's Mexican export series.

By means of a counterfeit sales slip, a Mexican registration certificate and license plates were easily obtained.

Within 36 hours after it was stolen, Mr. Conrad's oew $5,500

Within 36 hours after it was stolen, Mr. Conrad's oew $5,500 car was on a used-car lot in Mexicall, where it sold quickly fir $3,200, a bargain price in Mexico where few persoos can afford a new car.

Car Tracked Down

Mr. Conrad was luckier than most of the 6,000 to 8,000 Californians whose stolen sedans, vans and light trucks have vanished across the border in the last 18 mooths. His car was tracked down and returned to him a few weeks later by the Mexican authorities him a few weeks later by the Mexican authorities.

Officials of the California Highway Patrol and the San Diego police said that "hot" car dealers in Tijuana alone were probably handling close to $2 million worth of stolen American vehicles every mooth.

"Once a stolen car crosses the border, the chances of recovering it or even identifying it are very slim, particularly if it is driven into the Mexican interior for sale," said Harley Stoner, an investigator for the state patrol.

The "rapid transit" border traffic in stolen cars, as one official described it, is efficient and highly organized, with Mexican and American members of several rings operating on both sides of the border.

The Americans, many of them teen-agers, steal the cars. Their Mexican confederates, who sometimes pay for the vehicles in narcotics, give them "facelifts," obtain the Mexican registrations and market them at profits of up to 300 percent.

One of the Tijuana based operations, with sales outlets scattered throughout Mexico, was broken up last month by the Mexican Federal authorities with the arrest of the ring's 23-year-old leader, Jorge Carvallo Mesa, and 10 others, including two Americans.

'Chofers' Are Youths

The ring was said to have marketed at least 3,000 stolen American cars for $10 million. Most of the vehicles were driven across the border by American youths called "chofers," who received from $50 to $250 for each delivery

The San Diego Police Department reported that in the last year it recovered 260 stolen cars, vans and trucks and 20 motorcycles from Mexican cities, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation reclaimed 180 others. In almost all cases, the appearance of the vehicles had been radically altered.

Sgt. Lyle Ishmael of the State Highway Patrol said that eight out of 10 of the vehicles recovered in Mexico had been stolen from the San Diego and Los Angeles areas.

The flow of stolen cars across

The flow of stolen cars across the border has assumed such proportions that the Federal Bureau of Iovestigation has two agents in Mexico trying to combat the traffic, and the San Diego police recently assigned a special investigator to Tijua-

The California Highway Patrol has canducted several spot checks on weekends at the San Ysidro-Trijuana border crossing to intercept stolen cars.

One of the weekend checks turned up seven stolen vehicles, iocluding a 1973 G.M.C. pickup truck stolen io Phoenix three years ago and driveo by a Mexican couple who had owned it less than a month.

"Our investigator became suspicious and began tracing back through several sales of the vehicle, because the rivets in the serial plate differed from those installed at the factory," said Steve Malone, chief border investigator for the State Highway Patrol.

The favorite merchandise of the Mexican American auto theft rings are not pleasure cars, but sturdy light vans and pickup trucks better able to withstand the rugged Mexican

William Robinson of the San Diego police said that most of the 2,200 late model pickup trucks stolen here and in Los Angeles in the last year were believed to have been sold in Mexico.

A HUGE WINDMILL TO BE BUILT BY U.S.

Turbine Expected to Give Power for 500 Homes

Government agencies have announced plans to build a huge windmill with the potential to generate electric power for an estimated 500 homes.

The Energy Research and Development Administration will build the 1,500 kilowatt wind turbine at a utility company site still to be chosen, and the experiment will be directed by the National Aeronautics and 5pace Administration, according to Richard L. Puthoff, program manager of NASA's wind power office at the Lewis Research Center in Cleveland.

"Wind as a source of energy could provide 5 to 10 percent of the natioo's energy oeeds at its maximum efficiency and usage," Mr. Puthoff said.

The windmill, which is expected to cost $7 million, will stand 150 feet high, and two narrow, fiberglass hlades spanning 200 feet will rotate at 30 to 40 revolutioos per minute in winds in excess of 11 miles an hour. Maximum output would require 22 miles per hour wiods. At average wind speeds of 18 miles per hour, that energy ageocy estimated that the machine would produce enough eoergy each year to supply more than 500 homes.

17 Possibla Sites

Mr. Puthoff said that 17 possihla sites for the windmill had been selected and that the decision would be made hefore May, 1977, when the wind system design was expected to be completed. Since the high wiods occessary for the machine are a crucial factor, Mr. Puthoff said that the final site would probably he in an off-shore or plains area."

A 1,250-kilowatt wind turbine system developed 30 years ago in Rutland, Vt., failed hecause of structural problems and because it could not compete with the low cost of fossil fuels such as oil and coal. A spokesman for the energy ageocy said that because of the soaring costs of fossil fuels today the wind turbine could become a supplemental source of energy for Ooly one other wind turbice machine is curently in operatioo, a 100-kilowatt system that was built last fall by NASA's Lewis Research Cecter at the Plumn Brook test area near Sandusky, Ohio. It has been used as an experimental system in the development of the large windmill, Two more small wind turbine systems will be built to test the application of the machine to smaller utilities at two of the 17 sites under consideration.

About 6,000 of the bombladen bailoons were launched in the spring of 1944, and at least 235 are known to have reached North America. According to Mr. Adachi, hundreds of the balloon-bombs probably still lie unexploded in remote areas of North America.

REVIEW IS ASKED BY HARRIS JURORS

Panel Calls for Testimony Involving Miss Hearst

MARCIA CHAMBERS special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7-The jurors in the trial of William and Emily Harris, now in its reighth day of deliberations, broke their silence today and asked that testimony involving Patricia Hearts and the Harrises be reread to them.

The testimony concerns the first six counts of the indictment, assault with a deadly weapon, outside Mel's Sporting Goods Store here on May 16, 1974. The jurors had previously expressed confusion about the law governing these counts, and this morning at 11:10 A.M. two hours after they returned to the jury room, they re-quest the rereading. Judge Mark Brandler and the lawyers were summoned from their homes to the room in Su perior Court.

It was the first time since onday that the seven women and five men, sequestered since deliberations began, had given some hint of what was still troubling them in the state's case against the two self-pro-claimed revolutionaries.

Miss Hearst, whose trial on the same assault, robbery and kidnaping charges has been postponed until January, has admitted firing from two automatic machine guns at the sporting goods store and the street in a successful effort to help the Harrises avoid arrest.

Testified to Fear The 22-year-old Miss Hearst awaiting sentencing on her Federal hank robbery conviction, testified at her own trial in San Francisco that opened fire on the store but contended that she acted out members of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army that kidnapped Miss Hearst, never fired a gun at the store that day. They rested their case without calling any witnesses, contending that Miss Hearst instruction to fire any weapons.

Testimony from store employees showed that the were wrestling Mr. Harris to the ground after he resisted arrest on possible shoplifting charges when Miss Heart opened fire from a van across the street. Witnesses testified tha neither Mr. Harris nor his wife Emily shouted or gestured to Miss Hearst to help them.

In his summation, Samuel Mayerson, the chief prosecutor, told the jury there was sufficient circumstantial evidence to convict the Harrises of "aiding and abetting" Miss Hearst, be-cause they were the ones who provided her with guns. Referring to testimony that showed she had converted to the S.L.A., Mr. Mayerson reasoned that since Miss Hearst had been a kidnapping victim, "it had be members of the S.L.A. who gave her the idea of shooting."

Leonard Weinglass, the chief defense attorney, told the jury in his summation that Mr. Mayerson had presented no direct evidence—"not a single witness"—to show that the Harrises and Miss Hearst "aided and abetted" one another at in their flight fro mthe store, Miss Hearst and the Harrises commandeered two cars and later held captive two automobile owners as they drove around Los Angeles. The three managed to elude the author-siles for the next 16 months.

The Harrises are also charged with stealing the cars, which they maintain they "borrowed." They are also accused of kid mapping the two car owners.

Before the jury announced its requests, Mr. Weinglass and Mark Rosenbaum, Mr. Harris's legal adviser, said they were considering a motion for mis-trial on the assumption the panel was deadlocked. But the jury's request indicates might not be the case.

U.S. COURT AGENCY ACCUSED OF BIAS

Civit Service Panel Assails Administrative Office

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7-The Administrative Office of the United States Courts, whose leadership is appointed by the Supreme Court, has a poor record in the promotion of women and members of minori-ties, as well as other personnel problems, according to a report by the Civil Service Commis-

Most jobs in the office, which is the administrative office of all Federal courts expect the Supreme Court, are supposed to be competitive but the Civil Service Commission found that promotional procedures there resembled a "buddy system."

The private study of the administrative office by the commission is dated May 1975. A copy of it was made available to The New York Times by Representatives John E. Moss and Augustus F. Hawkins, Democrats from California, who obtained it from the com-

Most in Low Pay Levels

Based on an analysis of 242 competitive jobs out of the work force of 277, the commis-sion analysts found that mision analysts found that mi-nority group employees made up 32 percent of the staff, which, it said, "compares favorably with other govern-ment agencies." But 85 percent of the 79 minority-group persons were clus-tered in the lowest pay levels. And although 60 percent of the employees were women, many of them minority, 74 percent of them were in the lowest-paid jobs.

While women and minorities wee congregated in the clerical jobs, white men held the technical, supervisory and managerial jobs. Worse, the report said managers in the agency told interviewers that they thought responsibility for equal opportunity rested with the equal opportunity officer and not with "One high-level management official admitted that until re-cently he would not consider selecting a woman for a man's job, which is what he considered a supervisory position," the report said.

In other personnel matters, the commission found that employees were often informally put into higher level jobs, then later "promoted" to the posi-tions, the result being that "the competitive process is seen as a joke."

The administrative office also lacked a grievance procedure for servicing the complaints of employees who felt that they had been mistreated.

The Civil Service Commission recommended that the director of the agency establish contact with outside sources of personnel as a step toward opening.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7 (UPI)— Last month, J. Ralph Corbett gave the city $160,000 to install a new acoustical shell at Music Hall, home of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Symphony Orchestra.

This week, Mr. Corbett, a philanthropist, got a strange thank-you note for his generosity—a bill from the city for another $6,080 as a "service charge" for administrative handling of the gift.

Mr. Corbett, who has given the city millions of dollars over the years, said he was "as-

Mr. Corbett said he would, if he got a letter from the city manager and other municipal officials giving assurance that anyone making a gift to the city would not be charged for the generosity.

The bill for the extra $6,080 was sent to Mr. Corbett by Leo Krapp, commissioner of municipal facilities, who said he had been mismformed by other

CONTESTS CLOSE IN BRIDGE MATCH

Field in Summer Nationals Is Whittled Down to 8

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 7—
The quarter-final stage of the Spingold knockout at the American Contract Bridge League's summer nationals team championship began here this afternoon Saturday with three of the eight surviving teams still feeling the effects of desperately close struggling last night.

The battle between two old New York rivals, Edgar Kaplan and Sam Stayman, was perhaps the closest match ever played on such an occasion. After the first 16 deals, Stayman, who was teamed with Matt Granovetter, George Tornay. Neil Silverman, all of New York, and Bob Lipsitz of Potomac, Md., led by 2 international match points. At the half-way mark in the 64-deal match the score was unchanged.

With 16 deals left to play Stayman had increased his lead to 5 points. But Kaplan, together with Michael Becker and Roo Rubin, both of New York; Norman Kay of Philadelphia, Richard Pavlicek of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the team's captain, Bill Root of Boca Raton. Fla., snatched a victory by 3 points.

Almost equally close was a match in which a precision foursome led by Kathie Wei nf New York, the only woman still in the competition, won a striking victory. With Gerald Caravelli of Des Plaines, Ill., Hugh MacLean of Mioneapolis and Ron Andersen of Wheaton, Ill., she defeated the third-seeded Aces team, including Bob Hamman and Bob Wolff of Dallas and Eric Murray and Sam Kehela of Torooto, all international stars. Again, oeither team could develop a two-figure lead at any point, and the final margin was nine points.

Positions Consolidated

Three other teams beld small leads into the final quarter and consolidated their positions. Genrge Rapee of New York, with a group including John Solodar and Dave Berkowitz of New York, iocreased ao 8-point lead to 19 to defeat Curtis Smith of Pacific Palisades Calif. Victor Mitchell and a group that included three other New victor Mitchell and a group that included three other New York experts, Tom, Bill and John Roberts, raised a 14-point lead to 43 against a sextet including Peter Weichael and Alao Sootage of New York. And Peter Pender of San Francisco increased a 9-point advantage to 16, defeating a foursome including Michael Moss of New York and Paul Heitner of Hartsdale, N.Y.

Impossible Slam

Six of the eight players concerned had red faces on the diagramed deal from yesterday's Splogold. In the match between the Rapee and Smith teams, both North-South pairs reached an impossible slam, with two aces available to the defense. But both West players found a daring opening lead, which proved the only route to a slam.

In the auction shown North became excited—too excited—when his one-heart openiog bid received a response of ooe spade. His tremendous distributional fit made a jump shift to three diamonds an acceptable move, but he was oot entitled to drive the bidding beyond the game level. If he had contented himself with four spades South would probably bave hid five clubs, showing the ace of that suit and revealing duplication. The partnership would then have come to rest safely in five

Over the actual leap to five spades South had every reason to continue and showed his club ace at the six-level in the hope of reaching a grand slam. North signed off in six spades, but the contract was a hopeless one, unmakeable against any normal lead.

It did not occur to West that his partner might have an ace, and it was clear that dummy held oo clubs. So he made the "brilliant" underlead of his diamond ace, boping to find his partner with the queen of that suit but not the jack. With the king in dummy the declarer would surely misguess the situation at the first trick.

West knew that be bad done the wrong thing when South won the first trick with the diamond queen and began laughing. The diamond king was thrown on the club ace, and the space ace was the only trick for the defense. Astonishingly, this contract lead and result were duplicated in the replay, and only the two East players were without embarrassmeot.

about lawyers trying to settle

there is something very strange about attempts to publicly twist such discussions into a dirty word." The Mayor provided no explanation of what constitutional questions might have been discussed.

Ira M. Millstein, a lawyer for one of the two firms which are acting as special counsel for the city in the investigation, said the men "always intended to testify." Speaking of his clients, Mr. Millstein added: "Whatever did happen is a matter between us and the S.E.C."

Mr. Millstein this afternoon issued the following statement on behalf of the twn firms, Weil, Gotshal & Manges and Wachtel, Lipton, Rosen & Katz:

"We categorically deny that, nn behalf of any city official, any attorney for the City of New York requested immunity. At no time did any city official ask their attorneys to seek or obtain immunity."

Inquiry Public in January

The chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Roderick M. Hills, declined comment on the case as a matter that be accepted Mr. Millstein's assurances to him that the officials were not seeking to make their testimnny contingent upon a promise that action would not ultimately be brought Mr. Hills did not attend the July 22 meeting.

The S.E.C.'s inquiry involves more than $18 billion in securities issued by the city or nn its behalf by the Municipal Assistance Corporation. The commission took the rare step of announcing the investigation last January because of what it said was the danger of adverse market reaction if word of it filtered out inaccurately.

S.E.C. investigations are always civil actions, although allegedly egregious violations may be turned over to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution involving possible prison seotences.

Mayor Beame and Comptroller Goldin are believed to have been the last witnesses to be scheduled for hearings. Their appearances, once planned for late July and last Monday, are now set for Sept. 3 and Sept. 10.

Mr. Beame was City Comptroller from 1962 to 1965, when many of the securities were issued. He returned to private life before being elected Mayor to 1973. Mr. Goldin, the present Comptroller, is custodian of city financial records.

What happened at the New York meeting—the S.E.C.'s regional office in New York is leading the investigation—is a matter of considerable ambiguity and debate.

While it is agreed that the term "immunity" was not used, the sources say the city and the two nfficials sought to influence the disposition of the case in an apparent legitimate though ill-timed effort.

While the officials were apparently trying to negotiate commitments from the S.E.C. aides on the final disposition of the case, there was nn indicatinn the officials were trying to impede the S.E.C.'s fact-finding mission. The suit is geoerally regarded as a simple legal maneuver on the part of the city."

It was noted that the city failed to seek a temporary restraining order to balt the investigation, a remedy it might have used had it sought to wage an all-out fight to prevent the S.E.C. from obtaining the facts surrounding the securities.

Philadelphia, also under investigation by the S.E.C., has brought a similar suit against the commission challenging its constitutional authority to bring action against a city, an S.E.C. official coofirmed today.

On Friday, a commission spokesman estimated that the agency would arrive a decision same time this fall about what aactinn to take In the New York inquiry.

It might sue the city and its nfficials, it might move against others invulved in the sale, or it might simply write a report to be submitted to Congress ecommending legislation to give the S.E.C. specifically defined powers regrading municipal securities.

Federal laws require that a detailed prospectus be distributed in connection with corporate securities, but governmental bodies are explicitly excluded from this requirement. New York City amounced in

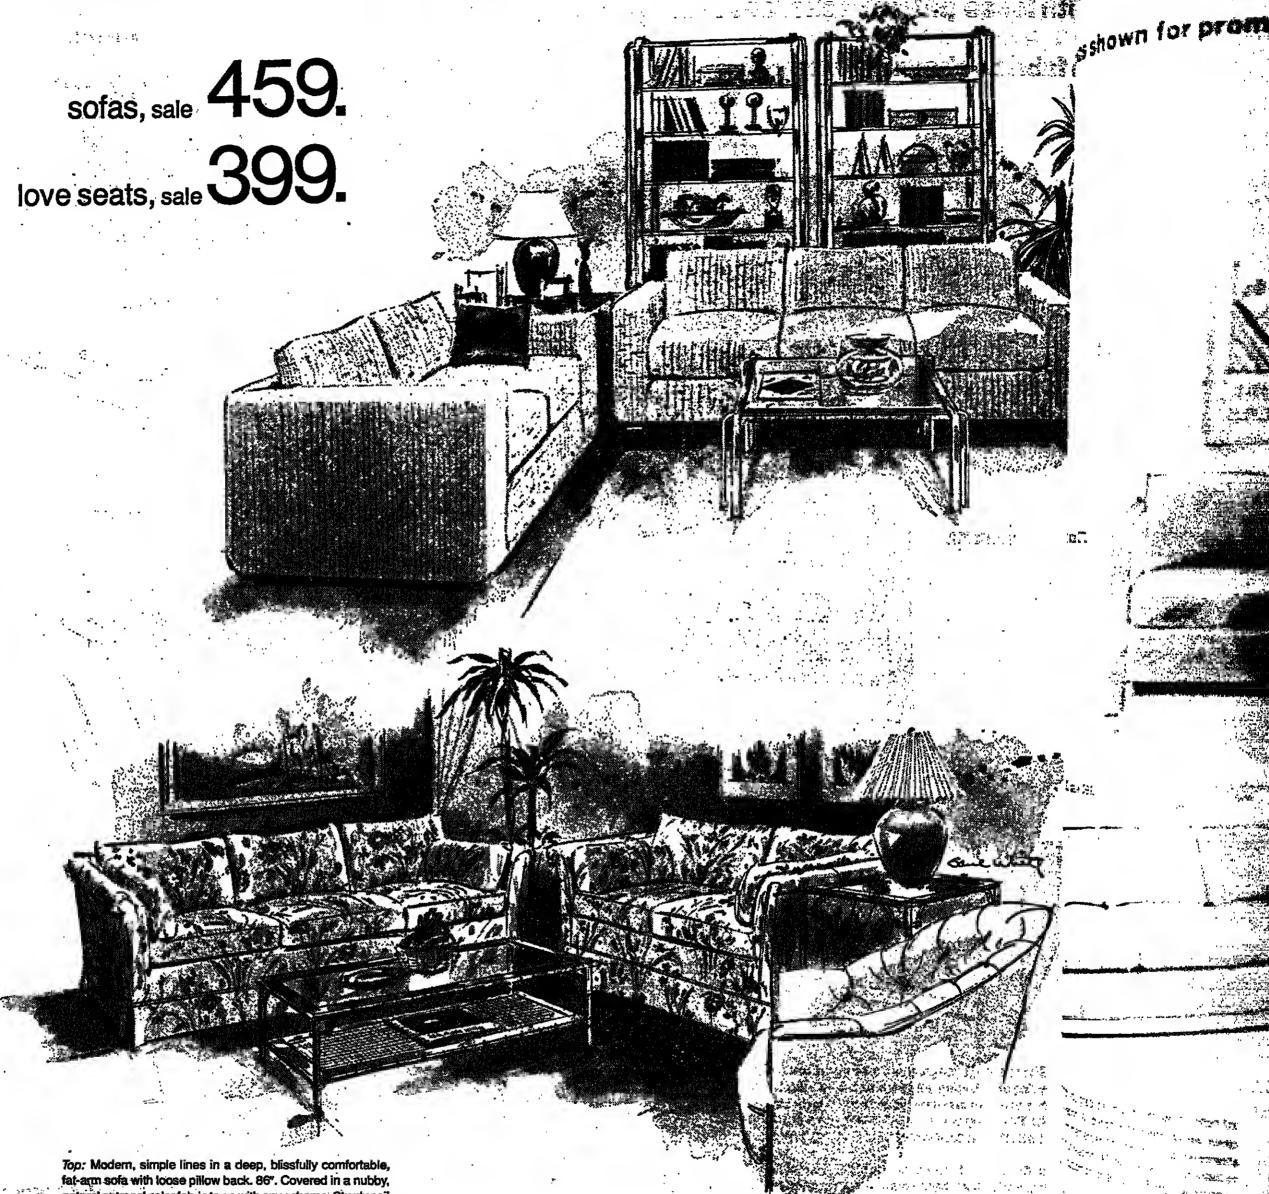

New York City announced in April 1975 that it would begin issuing a prospectus setting out its resources and said this document would "also clearly explain the city's financial procedores and problems."

ATOMIC CURB VOTE SET IN FOUR STATES

Limits on Plants Also May Go on Ballot in 2 Others

As the final state deadlines As the final state destinites for filing voter initiative prop-ositions to limit atomic power plant development passed this week proposals had qualified for the ballots in Washington, regon, Colorado and Montana. Two more states may join the group. In Arizona and Ohio, advocates of nuclear controls have filed petitions with enough signatures of reg-istered voters, but validation of signatures is still underway. The proposals in all the states resumble in some degree the stringent restrictions on atomic power expansion that were rejected 2 to 1, by Cali-were rejected 2 to 1, by California voters in June.

The California proposals made the licensing of any new plants contingent on public "proof" that all aspects of their operation would be safe, and that the public would be fully compensated in case of accidents. They also called for gradual phasing out of existing atomic plants until those conatomic plants until those con-ditions were met.

Electric utilities across the country and allied interests, such as equipment and en-gineering companies, contrib-uted to a $2.5 million publicity fund to defeat the California

That plebiscite was considered crucial by the industry be-cause, in the words of its trade organization, the Atomic Industrial Forum, a victory for the stringent restrictions "would have demoralized the nuclear community around the world."

But, the organization also acknowledged that the defeat "lanced the boil, but did not cure the infection" of public wariness of nuclear power.

In a Gallup national opinion survey, conducted in mid-July 71 percent of respondents said that they considered it "extremely" or "somewhat" importent to have more nuclear power plants. But only 34 per-cent believed current nuclear generating operations were "safe enough," and 40 percent believed there should be a cutback in operations "until more strict regulations can be put in practice."

The initiative campaigns have been promoted by a Los An-geles-based citizen-action or-ganization named the People's Lobby, in collaboration with environmental groups, such as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth and local groups of nu-

The campaign fran's first move was to make a computerized check of 79,000 petition signatures against voter registration lists. About 55,220 valid signatures are required.

Challenge Is Up To Foes Under Arizona law, it is up to opponents of an initiative proposition to challenge any insufficiency of signatures in court. Charles Winner, head of the consultant firm, said yesterday that the check had indi-cated that about half the signa-tures might be invalid, and that a suit probably would be filed

Ohio initiative sponsors on Tuesday filed 370,000 signa-tures with the Secretary of State, against a requirement of State, against a requirement of 307,000. If there are not enough valid ones, the law grants an additional 10-day period for signature collecting.

Initiative propositions — a form of direct voter legislation permitted in 21 states—had qualified for the ballot in Colorado. Washington and Orerado, Washington and Oregon before the June 8 California primary, and a Montana neasure was certified July 26. The main features of the initiatives are a requirement of waivers by utility companies of the $560 million Federal limit on damage liability from a nuclear accident, and proof of the essential safety of power generating operations and radioactive waste disposal provi-

In Washington, Oregon and Colorado, these requirements would have to be fulfilled to the satisfaction of two thirds of the members of each house of the legislature.

The Washington and Colorado proposals also call for the regular publication of public evacuation plans in case of a nuclear accident.

Northeast: Farm Belt and the Coast Likely Targets

> By LINDA CHARLTON dal to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7 ---When Senator Walter F. Mondale begins campaigning in earnest around Labor Day, his schedule is likely to emphasize his appeal to liberal voters and ethnic groups in the industrialized Northeast, the farm belt and the West Coast. "We're going to try to show the flag" all over the country, said Richard Moe, who is the campaign director for the Democratic Vice - Presidential nominee. But it is clear, he that Mr. Mondale's schedule, still only in sketch form, will be tailored to what is believed to be his greatest appeal.

This will mean, Mr. Moe said, that Mr. Mondale is likely to campaign heavily in the "key industrial states in the North-east and Middle West, as well as the farm belt and the West

"National's new lasy Come-Easy Go Fares to Florida!"

"National Airlines, take me, I'm yours."
That's what people are saying when they hear about our new Easy Come-Easy Go Fares.

The new discount fares that let you fly to Florida for 20% less during the day, without asking you to buy your ticket weeks in advance or stay for a minimum of seven days.

Things like our Easy Come-Easy Go Fares are one reason three out of four of our passengers have flown us before.

"When do I buy my ticket?"

Simply buy your Easy Come-Easy Go Fare ticket seven days before you leave. That's really just a few days in advance.

"How long do I have to stay?"

You can fly home anytime the first

Monday that follows your departure date. That means, for instance you could fly to Florida on a Friday, enjoy the weekend, and return anytime Monday. Or return at your convenience within 30 days.

"How much do the Easy Come-Easy Go Fares cost?"

Nobody saves you more money than National when it comes to fares. Just check the table below.

You can fly our Easy Come-Easy Go Fares starting September 7 through December 18, 1976.

For more information about our Easy Come-Easy Go Fares, or for reservations, call your travel agent at the Vacation Store. Or call National Airlines. In New York call (212) 697-9000. In Newark call (201) 624-1300. And say, "National Airlines, take me. I'm yours."

Music: Ravi Shankar Stages an All-Night Raga Program

By ROBERT PALMER

If Ravi Sbankar bad doubts that New Yorkers would respond favorably to a lengthy concert of Indian music, featuring expositions of ragas stretching far beyond the durations of conventional concert half performences, he does not bave them now. About 2,500 listeners crowded into the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Friday evening for an all-night raga program, with Mr. Shankar as the host and star performer, and most of them stayed until sunrise.

The interior of the cathedral, with its imposing stonework and ringing acoustics, was a more apt setting for Indian music than a hall would have been. The audience was free to leave and come back, to wander outfor tea and Indiao snacks, or to nap on pews in the back of the cathedral, without disturning the serious listeners who were packed io around the stage or sitting in the first rows of folding chairs. And the musicians, freed of the uaual time strictures, developed pieces to their satisfaction, with some individual ragas lasting as long as one-and-a-half hours.

The evening provided more concentrated exposure to Indian music than most Westerners are used to and one of its fascinations was that one could isolate various historical and geographical elements that have gone intn the music's makeup. G.S. Sachdev's bamboo flute recalled the primordial sound of trihal India, while the vo-cal embellishments of Prabha Atre suggested the influence of the Near East. The sound of Vasant Rai's sarod, an instrument of the lute family, sang of the open steppe of Central Asia, and some of ond straight spring he was voted the Big Green's best golf-er with a 75.6 average for 18 boles.

Daly closed out bis Dartmouth career as the first golfer at the school to qualify for four National Collegiate champlon-ship tournaments.

Mr. Shankar's phrases had the close intervals and penetrating twang of some far Eastern stringed instrument music. All these areas have been influenced by Indian music, or have been influencing it, for centuries.

The most haunting performance of the evening was the very first, by Mr. Sach-dev. He hegan his first raga with a long "alap" or out-oftempo exposition in which he tempo exposition in which he sketched the piece's ascerding and descending melodic structures with a simple clarity, returning to the third interval above the tonic again and again as a kind of leitmotif. The sound of his flute echoed through the cathedral echoed through the cathedral, and he took advantage of the echo to materialize new phrases out of the echoes of old ones. Several of his upper register pitches, particularly the 11th or third above the octave, rang with an inde-scribable purity.

Vasant Rai, whosa Alam School of Indian Classical Music is located in Green-wich Village, is a former student of Mr. Shankar's teacher, the late Allaudin Khan, and now studies with Mr. Sbankar. He is a robust player, given to fast, coursing lines, with a resonant snund that resembles onthing so much as that of a frailed banjo. Miss Atre, the vocalist, has drawn from a number of singing styles for her presentations. Her two long ragas struck this reviewer as being souewhat severe, true to tradition in their overall lacking in warmth and hard rather than melodinus. She was at ber hest singing a song of yearning for Lord Krishna in a semi-classical "thumri" style.

Alla Rakha, the player of the table drums who has accompanied Mr. Sbankar for almost 20 years, offered a storming, spectacular per-cussion solo, something seldom heard in the West, and in a relatively difficult rhyth-mic cycle of 13 beats, divided 4,4,2, and 3. Miss Atre sang after him, there was an intermission and finally, at 3:45 A.M., Mr. Shankar appeared and began a morning raga, boura drone instruments. He developed the raga for an bour, through its slow, medium-fast, and fast sections, without tabla accompaniment, and theo he hrought Mr. Rakha out for another

To some traditionally minded listeners, the music was rather boisterous for e predawn performance, but rapid, spirited, rhythmic playing is Mr. Shankar's and Mr. Rakha's forte, and they cose as a rhythmic cycle (an inter-esting) 13-beat configuration, divided 4,4,4, ½ and ½. It was almost 5:30 when they brought the performance to who is a glutton for Indian music, had had enough. Mr. Shankar was planning to per-form another morning raga after taking a brief intermis-

Earlier in the evening, Mr. Shankar had told the reviewer that he hoped to make the concert an annual event. Next year, he promised, be will bring artists from India who have never been beard in the U.S., and he will spread their performances oot over two or three evenings. This would be wise; eight or nine hours of music is too much stances. And it is to be hoped that some of next year's artists will exemplify the peaceful, meditative aspect of Indian music, a supremely important aspect which was explored in satisfactory depth only by Mr. Sachdev.

A Commuter Hovercraft Makes Trial Run in Harbor and Stays Above It All

Roaring down the East River at 40 miles an hour on a three-foot cushion of air yesterday, an orange and white hovercraft called Excalibur raced past the hulking freighters along the Brooklyn shore, dashed ont to Ellis Island, veered south, and 12 minutes later was just off Staten Island.

With a capacity of 60 passengers and by three diesel engines that provide lift and forward thrust, the Excalibur is expected to begin this month the first commercial hovercraft service in the United States, according to Hovertransport of Bridge-port, Conn., which ownss and operates the craft.

Although exact destina-tions are still to be determined, two runs, between southern Connecticut and Long Island and between Long Island and Wall Street,

A one-month ticket for the hovercraft is expected to cost $120. The run across Long Island Sound takes about 40 minutes; the run into Wall Street from the North Shore or Long Island near the Nassau-Suffolk line will take about an hour.

Flotsam No Problem

As be piloted the Excallbur down towards Governors Island yesterday, James Farnan explained that floating debris, which posed a threat to hydrofoil operation in New York Harbor, was not as great a worry for hovercrafts. This, the craft's skipper said, was because it rides above the surface of the water on a pocket of air created by fans on the underside of the hull.

"We could probably run right over a canoe," Mr. Far-Vito J. Fossella, Commis-

Hovercraft Is Flown

A voyage on board a hovercraft is not called a trip; it is called a "flight." The master is not called the ceptain, he is a "pilot." And when a passenger steps into the cab-in of the Excalibur, which was huilt by the Hovermarine Corporation of Pitts-hurgh, what he will find may seem more like an airplane than a boat.

The deck of the cabin is covered with gold carpeting, passengers sit in red airline seats, and are tended by a stewardess, who will serve coffee and danish pastries on commuter runs. The cahin is air-conditioned and equipped with a stereo music system.

A passenger feels th light chop of the waves and occasionally the sudden lift of a sizable wave, hut riders who paid $3.50 for a half hour ride from Pier 15 at the South Street Seaport Museum generally agreed that the ride was smooth. Some passengers complained about noise.

One of the riders, Stanley Boehm, a resident of Westchester County, said he had found his first hovercraft ride memorable.

"It's a different kind of sensation. This is the new world coming into the old," he said pointing at the masts of the South Street museum's square rigged ships. "There's 1911 and here's 1976."

Hovertransport hopes to have up to eight craft in opcration by next year. Excalibur will be taking passengers for rides from South Street today as wil. Children's tick-

Continued Rail Run to Montreal Urged

Governor Carey instructed Raymond T. Schuler, State Transportation Commissioner, to negotiate with Amtrak, the national rail passenger system, to continue New York-Montreal rail passenger service via Albany-Rensselaer and the Champlain Valley for another four years. Since August 1973, Amtrak and the state have sponsored daily service in each direction by the "Adirondack" with the state paying for two thirds of the losses. Under a new Federal appropriation, Amtrak and the state would share losses equally in future contracts. Mr. Schuler said that he would press for better promotion of the train and for a speedup in running times north of Albany, where track improvements have been under way.

3 State Workers Win Suggestion Prize

Three employees of th New York State Department of Environmental Conservation have shared a $12,000 award -the largest ever made in a state-worker suggestion program-Victor S. Bahou, the president of the State Civil Service Commission, announced. The winners devised a system for issuing tickets to people ac the Environmental Conservation Law. Sharing the award were Lieut. John J. Leupp, a supervisory officer at the Cortland office; Robert C. Sinclair of the Avon office, and James K. Webb, an officer on the staff at Olean. Mr. Bahou said the system had already resulted in savings of about $150,000.

Carey Names Deputy Commerce Chief

Leroy W. Sinclair of White Plains was named executive deputy commissioner of the State Department of Commerce by Governor Carey. Mr. Sinclair, who is 33 years old, is a co-founder of Technimetrics, a Manhattan concern that provides information on investors and hrokerage firms to corporations. Mr. Sinclair, who graduated from Cornell University in 1966, is the author of three books on venture capital and small-business financing. His new position carries a salary of $43,259 a year.

family/style At Her Parties, the Names Must Have Brains

Jan Cushing is a young, attractive blonde, and she would not object to being described that way. She is not a feminist, and she shrugs off feminism. It is, she says, not for her, although it might be fine for some. Only her voice indicates that the "some" might be women who don't know any better.

Mrs. Cushing fikes to be surrounded by intelligent, in-teresting men, knowledeable about the world and current affairs, and pretty, vivacious women who kies cheeks and are knowledgeable about people and their current affairs.

with bright, interesting men," she said candidly. "I don't feel women are as intelligent as men . . . I put men on a pedestal still."

Talkers and Listeners

She likes men to talk, and women to listen, and her formula—plus a backbone of iron sheathed in curves, a talent for entertaining, a genuine desire to have people enjoy themselves, and an income that makes most things possible—has made her East Side apartment the newest place to be.

She has, in less than a year, built an impressive reputation as a hostess. It is so impressive that some of the city's older party-givers are making sounds that are less than flattering. In the world in which Mrs. Cushing operates, it is a sure sign that she has arrived.

When Mrs. Cushing, who was born Jan Golding and whose grandfather owned Sterling National Bank and Essex House, returned to New York last year after several years in France, she had more than the usual oumber of qualms. A separation from her husbaod, Frederick Cushing, was immineot (it is now fact). She was, too, well aware that another unattached woman oo the New York scene was the kind of lagniappe almost everyooe could live without.

"Let's face it, I'm oot exactly a 60-year-old dowager, she said with the youthful assurance of one who will celebrate her 30th hirthday later this year,

The assurance did not. however, extend to the kind of receptioo she might meet. more difficult as a single woman," the said. "I used to think, 'How can I manage to do what I want without a husband?'

There was no concern about escorts, or invitations to chic parties. Both are usually in adequate supply for pretty, affluent and vivacious women. What Mrs. Cushing wanted was what used to be called a salon, with stimulating men, attractive women and good conversation. The ambition was somewhat of a change for a girl who once admittedly "lived for parties." She attributed the change to Henry Kissinger, whom she met while they were both single but whom she has not seen aince his remarriage.

"Because of Henry, I all of a sudden realized there was more to life than debut parties and dances in Newport and Southampton . . . life took on a different scope," she said.

Her friendship with Mr.

Kissinger flourished during her years in Paris, after she had told him she was remarrying (an earlier mar-riage to Del Coleman was an-nulled after six weeks) and moving to France.

Politics a Fascination

"Henry used to come for dinner . . . and that's when I started being fascinated by politics," she said. "Just listening to him was so interest-ing, and pretty soon I started having another type of guest ... people who were involved and knowledgeable."

These days, there are apt to be a number of involved and knowledgeable people in the pink-walled dining room, eating steaks or lamb chops.

"Fancy food impresses women, but the men don't eat it," said Mrs. Cushing, who has a live-in French cook to make certain that the food, simple though it may be, is well prepared and

The cook is also responsible for the dessert, but takes oo credit for the iced cupcakes that often appear simultaneously. The cupcakes carry a message, varying ac-cording to the guest of honor. "H.K. And so she tells her female guests, who are allowed to ask questions, and contribute a few remarks, hut are expected, oo matter how bright they themselves might be, to know when they've contributed enough.

"I don't mind," Miss Bransford said. "I'm not that interested in politics any-

I know I shouldn't tell the women to keep quiet but I do," said Mrs. Cushing, curled up in a quilted chair in her cream and apricot living room, and sounding not whit abashed at her temerity.

Mixing Professions Mrs. Cushing's favorite recipe for a dinner party is mixing professions, but making certain that one man's profession or activity will in-terest another. She also makes certain that the men are not stuck with one dinoer partner; she has the women change places before the dessert course. Each woman finds a little piece of paper in front of her telling her where she goes

It is an idea that apparently meets with approval from both men and womeo, aithough occasionally the women have been known to wonder why they should be the ones to move. Unlike a great many New does not ask strangers to dinner, no matter how fa-mous they are. She will ask someone unknown to her only if the stranger is a friend of a friend, and has been suggested.

She admitted that she would be sorely tempted if Adela Rogers St. Johns came "She's the woman I admire most in the world," she said. "She fascinates me and cycle, something special had been expected. And something special the audieoce did get, though it may not have been exactly what many gulars had in mind. Wolfgang Wagner, the comdson, is the boss of Bayreuth, and for this very

A Critic's Valedictory: The Americanization of Modern Art and Other Upheavals

ARTS AND LEISURE

Dominating the New York art scene in the 1950's, Abstract Expressionism was "the transplanted end result of a European development." Above, Franz Kline's "Mahoning."

1965: With its "European orientation," the Museum of Modern Art was reluctant to accept Popart, "the first essentially American modern art." Above, a detail from James Rosenquist's "F-111."

Photorealism, the antithesis of Abstract Expressionism, is today "the strongest contender for the title of Latest Thing."

The example is Richard Estes's "Supreme Hardware."

By JOHN CANADAY

Seveoteen is hardly what you would call a round number. It is a downright shapeless number for measuring spans of years, which we block out in units of 10, 25, and 100. But if you had come to The Times as art critic in September, 1959, and were leaving it as I am doing with these valedictory notes in August, 1976, theo 17 would look very round to you lodeed.

A lot has happeoed. In terms of mooumeots as witnesses, the Guggenheim Museum opened in 1959, and a steady flow of exhibitions ranging from large and sober to small and giddy have aomehow been jimmied into Frank Lloyd Wright's soail curl. Asia House beld its first exhibition in its new quarters in 1960, the beginning of a new public awareness of Far Eastern art, augmented in 1971 by the opening of Japan House. In 1966 the Whitney Museum of American Art moved ioto its first satisfactory building, where it continues its efforts to make seose of the 20th century and catch up with the 19th. The Metropolitan Museum and the Museum of Modern Art added oew wings, testifying to the expansion of our cultural borizoos. And as a tribute to the selectivity of whatever forces operate for the general cultural good, Huntington Hartford's reactionary Gallery of Modern Art, ill-cooceived in the first place, was born, struggled, and died during this period, leaving the curious building that housed it standing as its funerary stele oo Columbus Circle.

Io 1959, Abstract Expressionism was at the zenith of its popularity, to such an extent that an unknown artist trying to exhibit in New York couldn't find a gallery unless he was painting in a mode derived from one or another member of the New York School. Willem de Kooning, Mark Rothko, Robert Motherwell, Barnett Newman, Clyfford Still and their successful colleagues were already beginning to be referred to as "the new Academy" instead of the avant-garde, a term already beginning to lose viability except as an historical reference.

But still, at that time, a critic not eotrenched in the New York scene could find himself in a painful situation when he suggested that Abstract Expressionism was abusing its own success and that the monopolistic orgy had gone on long enough. It is painful for anyone to be declared a pariah hy colleagues whose opinions, even if they contradict his own, he respects; it is unpleasant when an anonymous voice tells you to watch out because "we're laying for you

when you leave the office." Anonymous letters are always oasty. But in 1959, for a critic to question the validity of Abstract Expressionism as the ultimate art form was to inspire obscene mail, threatening phone calls, and outraged letters to the editor signed by eminent artists, curators, collectors and critics demanding his discharge as a Neanderthal throwback.

As things turned out, the idea that Abstract Expressionism might be riding for a fall was more advanced than atavistic. Artists, led by a few rebels from the school (such as Frank Stella in ooe direction and Richard Diebenkorn in another) began taking the aituation into their owo haods. Today the atrongest contender for the title of Latest Thing in the mixed scene of 1976 is Abstract Expressionism'a antithesis, Photorealism, along with aeveral variants. In between we have had Pop art, which was the major revolution of the period, as well as Op art, Minimal art, Conceptual art, Earth art, Color Field painting, Sys-temic Abstraction, Post-coostructivism and a lot of others, geouice and specious, rising and falling, ovarlapping and interhreeding and still going oo, with museums, commercial galleries, and art publications deciding which portions of a vast overproduction the public should be instructed to enjoy.

It has taken most of these 17 years, give a few at either eod, to complete a change that would be recognized as drastic if it had not come about gradually-the transposition of functions betweeo the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan, by which the Metropolitan has takeo over from the Modern as the city's cultural midway while the Modern has settled into a conservative historical stance. The questioo "What's new at the Modern?"-if "oew" means something audacious and unfamiliaris answered these days by "Not much," a comment that sounds disparaging only because the policy of the museum itself, until recently, has conditioned us to equate "oew" with "good." Gertrude Stein's comment early in the game to the effect that you can be modero or you can be a museum but you can't

INSIGHTS INTO INDIA--Asia House Gallary has o film series under way as a complement to its abow of Victorian photographs of Iodia. This week (Tuesday through Thursday, at 2), "The Delhi Woy" will he shown, a documentary written, photographed and directed by James Ivory in 1963. The portrait of the city is, in fact, o revelation of India both past and present. Next week, the series will conclude with Mr. Ivory's "Autobingraphy of e Princess," which premiered at the New York Film Festival last Octobar. Concerned with the declining rule of the Maharajas, seen through the relationships among an old English tutor, an exiled Rajput princess and har tyrannical father, the film is, according to Vincent Canby's review, "a dalicate, autumnal satire . . . illuminated throughout by the kind of appreclation for lost civilizations that is shared by all of Mr. Ivory's films about India."

"I'm the person rock critics ove to hate the most!" says Elton John, perhaps the most commercially successful rock. quite revel in it." he adds with relish, "You see, there is currently a trend among rock critics: only if you are genuinely bad, will they love

John is revving up for the anticipated critical darts that will accompany his sevennight run in Madison Square Garden this week and next (Aug. 10-13, 15-17). These performances are expected to gross 1.5-millioo dollars and mark the English composerkeyboardist as the biggest single draw ever to appear in the giant area. Rock critics, nonetheless, are for the most part hard pressed to work up much enthusiasm for this resoundingly popular performer. John Rockwell of The Times, for example, has labeled his music "rock middle-of-theroadism." Village Voice rock critic Robert Christgau bas written ". . . he might pass for a garbage processing plant." Of long-time John collaborator, lyricist Bernie Taupio, Christgau adds ". . . half the time ha does not bother to make himself uoderstood, which given the middlebrow claptrap he is capable of when ha does . . . often seems a blessing

According to her Broadway prodocers, Fritz Holt and Barry Brown, "Ho!Ho!Ho!" makes "a positive statement about life which audiences want to hear these daya, It's full of wonderfully crazy, eccentric people who are all enthusiastic about something and it has Ruth Gordon as its focal point. It can't miss."

Her busband Garson Kanin who will direct the play thinks it is "a marvelously imaginative examination of the entire subject of wishes." He adds: "When you wish, does your wish come true or doesn't it? And if it does, is because you wished it or was it something you thought or did or felt?"

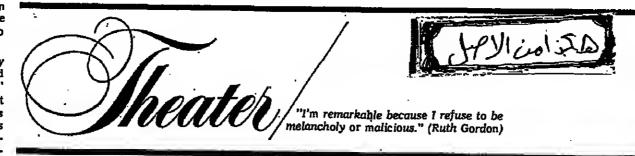

"Ho Ho Ho P' is set in an East 49th Street hrownstone reminiscent of the one Ruth Gordon and Kanin still own. ("It's practically next door to Kate Hephurn and it has a hig spacious kitchen nn the ground floor.") The entire action of the play takes place in the kitchen. The time is Christmas Eve. Ruth Gordon plays Gladys, a cook from Woodshole, Mass. The owner the brownstone and Gladya' employer is the most successful Broadway produc-

At the start of the play, Gladys is bomesick and depressed, but then Santa Claus drops by the kitchen with a terrible stomach ache from eating a pepperoni pizza. He agrees. Her first wish is "I want an idea." She gets an idea, and, as the play progresses, the rest of ber wishes mysteriously are granted. A wild assortment characters move in and out of the kitchen, some of them seeming to help the wishes along.

These characters - there are eighteen in all ("I wrote a big cast 'cuz actors need work") include: a New York cop, the richest lady in the Ruth Gordon has alwaya worked bard. She contends that imagination and endurance are what matter most in work and in life and she cultivates both assiduously. She wanted to be an actress from the time she was aix and saw Hazel Dawn at the Colonial Theater in Boston.

After coming to New York she flunked out of the Academy of Dramatic Art. "They told me I had no promise. But I wouldn't give up." In 1915, she appeared in one of Maude Adams revivals of "Peter Pan" and received a much-quoted review from Alexander Wolcott: "Ruth Gordon was ever so gay as Nibs."

It was during the run of "Three Sisters" in 1942 that she married movie director Garson Kanin. She got the idea for her first comedy "Over 21" shortly after their marriage when she and Kanin were living in Washington D.C. during the war.

"It was perfectly natural for me to start writin' plays in my spare time-much more natural than, say, to start hammerin' silver. Garson and Thornton Wilder were sweatin' it out in Officers Candidate School. They were havin' a helluva time. They both thought they were going to flunk, I thought how csn this be? Two of the smartest gents I know unable to pass a couple

"Anyhow I got this idea Paramount lot. "I sat in Pau- for a play but Garson said it did not sound very good so I marched over to see my best friend Madelaine Sherwood. She was washin' her husband Bob Sherwood's socks and Boh and Judge Sam Rosenman were workin on a speech for Roosevelt in the next room. I talked. Madelaine listened. Afterwards she said 'Bob will love it' so I went home and told Garson Boh Sherwood thinks my idea for a play is great' so he said, 'For God's sake tell it to me again."

"So I said it's about celebrities and how they cope in the Army. It's about a witty famous lady writer sort of like Dottie Parker who spends six weeks in Miami while her husband-a combination of Thornton Wilder and Garson Kanin-struggles through OCS.

"When I finished the story Garson said. That's a good idea. Why didn't you tell it to me like that in the first place? For the next few weeks he helped me hlock out scenes and dialogue. He also told me that I had to play the part of the witty

"Over 21" was eventually directed on Broadway in 1944 by George S. Kaufman with Miss Gordon as its star and it was an enormous hit. Later she wrote three more plays, the last one, "A Very Rich Wnman," adapted from the French.

What does she intend to do after "Ho! Ho! Ho!" fishes its summer run? "Well, I have a hig book tour for my autobiography. Then, of course, "Ho! Ho! Ho!" is comin to Broadway. I'll scream if it don't! Later on, I'd like to do Mrs. Malaprop for Joe Papp. I'm not bashful and Bob Altman wants me to play Eliot Rosewater, the richest old man ithe world, in his movie of Kurt Voonegut's 'Breakfast of Champions."

You'd play a male part? "Why not? Sarah Berohardt played Hamlet, So did Judith Anderson and that beautiful French actress, Yvonne Prin-temps, played Mozart once. You gotta think positive."

But doesn't that cause you to make mistakes?

The Production's the Thing At Vienna's Burgtheater

ienna's Burgtheater—the second oldest permanent legitimate theater in the world (second only to the Comedie Française) is celebrating its own hicentennial this year by presenting an extraordinary assemblage of productions by some of the world's foremost directors. at the Burg, because, in the 18th century, the emperor felt that he, the founder and patron of the theater, was more deserving of applause than his unworthy servants, the actors. This practice has been only slightly modified since then, even though the last emperor decamped in 1918. In my week at the Burg. I observed not one curtain call. When the play is over, a very few will applaud for a couple of seconds, but most of those present jump out of their seats and run for the exits with-the impetuous speed of first-night New York

The Burg's present home (completed in 1888) certainly helps to put its audience in a state of awe. It is the most imposing and elaborate theater building I have ever seena vast congiomeration of stately entrances, red-carpeted stairways and corridors, galleries and niches containing countless paintings, statues and busts. And the auditorium itself, with its vast, deep stage and its numerous richly-furnished boxes and balconies, is not by any means an anticlimax.

What have the innovative hicentennial directors been doing? They make resourceful use of the Burg's well-equipped stage to show us astonishing things, creating great pictorial effects that support a coherent approach to the play in ques-tion. Consider Krejca's contribution, for example—Goethe's "Fanst: Part One," the last major production of the spring season. There is an innovation to start with-a Germanlanguage classic directed by a foreigner! And don't think the local press failed to take note of it. Krejca is continuing in a pattern he has been developing ever since I saw his "Romen and Juliet" in Prague in 1964: (He was prevented from working at home after the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia in 1968. More recently, he has been "forgiven," and, in the season to come, he will be a guest director in Dusseldorf.) His special stratagem is to show connections between scehes and characters by putting a variety of simultaneous action on the stage. He is likely to exhibit in one instant the scene the dramatist wrote, a pantomimed epilogue to the previous scene, and perhaps a silent prologue to the next scene, arranging these bits of action in the most striking contrast to one another. In "Faust," this technique legitimately underlines Goethe's original intention in writing so many short, vivid scenes. Accordingly, at one point Krejca bas five playing areas in simultaneous use, and he even permits two minor characters, girl friends of the tragically deserted Gretchen, to remain on stage and observe the Walpurgis Night-the wild, demonic celebration of the Witches' Sabbath; they are, understandably, puzzled, especially the one who recognizes Mephistopheles, the chief of the diabolical revellers, as a fellow she has been double-dating. Krejca makes the contrast between the two worlds more intense by keeping the devilish revelry going at the rear of the stage while the main plot is resumed; the pathos of Faust's visit to Gretchen's prison cell is all the greater when we can still view the empty glitter for which he abandoned her.

Strehler, in "The Power Game," his adaption of Shakespeare's "Henry VI, Part Three," uses strong visual effects to point up parallels in the continuing action, but he exhibits his scenes separately, mocking war and tyranny by showing successive stylized images of silhouetted armies advancing to fight and of their leaders, temporary victors in the Wars of the Roses, ascending to a perilous throne and posing briefly with orb, scepter and crown. He comments even more explicitly on the senseless pursuit of power in one scene which is of his own composition. It consists of a sardonic conversation between two grave-diggers whom the wars are keeping busy-

Trying to Make A Stalinist Sympathetic

LONDON "Weapons of Happiness" is the first new play the National Theater has presented in the concrete culture-palace that opened to the world back in the spring. It is also an answer of sorts to those Benedict Nightingnle writes about theater for the New Statesman.

who have accused the company of being too cautious, too unadventurous, and too close to the hearts, minds and pockets of the British establishment to stage anything provocative or controversial. The play defiantly allies itself with the have-nots against the haves; more disconcertiogly, it comes close to idealising the unrepentant Stalinist who is its main character. The author is Howard Brenton, too, has abandoned invites the audience to share city. The point presumably is an apocalyptic anxiety for Britain and British society. "Writers of my group all sense the enormous upheaval that is going to come," continues Brenton's manifesto. "It is difficult to define the nature of that upheaval, hut if you write a scene set in London today, that future upheaval will be present in that scene." One such scene would

comic snatch of "Weapons of Happiness" in which a furcoated boss picnics drunkenly on champagne outside the gates of his potato-chip factory, which has been occupied by bis rampaging employees. But then most of the play is about this industrial wrangle, this conflict of classes. Where it is not so concerned, it is busy filling us in on the background of an elderly worker, a Czech emigré once high in the Communist Party, then arrested, tortured, put on show-trial, imprisoned, and finally exiled to the east end of London. It is to his experience and wisdom that the potato-chip revolutionaries look, not without reward.

By now you should see what is meant by "upheaval." You should also have a better idea of what critics mean by "improbable" or "incredible." Brenton is a stylish dramatist, capable of turning imaginative and unpredictable dialogue; bnt, in this play at least, he thrusts it into the mouths of quirky phantasms. His characters are more like ideas for people than people. By the time his ex-apparatchik has been seduced on the floor of the London Planaterium by the ahrill Trotskyite girl who is trying to lure him back to political commitment, a fair proportion of the audience may be feeling that pressure." But it certainly as they are, to some northern that revolutions, especially British revolutions, have to start in the bumhlest way, among a few like-minded penple buddled together for warmth; but it remains fuzzy, partly because the characters lack substance, partly because there's no explicit discussion of the issues raised, and perhaps also because Brenton has no clear picture of what his raggle-. taggle runaways will actually do when they set up political shop in Manchester, Liverpool or wherever.

Still, the play has some theatrical impact. The stage is unusually broad and deep, and neither author nor director is afraid to exploit it. They whisk us from 1976 to-1950 at the flash of an arclight, suddenly transform an everyday interview with the London police into a last-gasp grilling hy East Euro-pean inquisitors, and even bring on Stalin himself, to crashing chords from some invisible giee club in the wings. A shahby factory yard. becomes a Thames wharf, then a Moscow square; the eye assents, even if the ear and mind resists.

The acting is spare, efficient and not particularly inveotive, though Michael Medwin is a lively factory-owner, tottering about with his champagne hottle, and Frank Finlay very imposing as the émigré with a past. He pads across the atage in a grubby overcoat, the picture of unsmiling endurance. But his retrained and brooding performance cannot conceal the vagueness of the character or the sentimentality of Brenton's attitude toward it. If we're asked to respect a man who still has a soft spot for Stalin, and even believes the party was right to purge bim, we would like to know rather more shout him.

The Olympics Of Ballet Crowns A New Champion

By WALTER TERRY

VARNA, BULGARIA The International Ballet Competition held every two years io this ancient city and modern resort oo the Black Sea bas been called "the Olympics of dance." This year, while the sports Olympics in Mootreal had its fans glued to television sets around the world, ballet buffs cooverged on Varna for the eighth presentation of the most prestigious of ballet competitions.

What makes Varna so prestigious (other competitions are held in Moscow and Tokyo)? Have a look at some past winners who went on to fame: Mikhail Baryshinkov (1966 Gold Medalist); the Bolshoi's Ekaterina Maximova and Vladimir Vasiliev; Hungary's Ivan Nagy and Canada's Martine van Hamel, now principals with American Ballet Theater; and, most recently America's Fernando Bujones, who not only won a Gold Medal in 1974, but caused the international jury to invent for him a citation of unusual technical achievement. Mr. Bujones had the competitioo audieoce screaming like rock fans and returned to his dance alma mater, American Ballet Theater, to co-star with the elite of the ballet world, including Mr. Baryshnikov, who defected from the Soviet Union at about the same time.

This year, from July 10-25, more than 100 contestants. divided into juniors (14 to 18 years old) and seoiors (up to 28) came here as representatives of 27 different countries -empires, kingdoms, democracies, and socialist states. They were graded on technical skill, artistry and individuality by a panel of jurors from 20 nations and chaired by Yuri Grigorovitch, artistic director and principal choreographer of the Bolshoi Ballet, with Allan Fridericia of Denmark and Alicia Alonso of Cuba (who rose to ballet stardom in America) as his first deputies.

To select the top taleot of the competition, a jury was almost unnecessary. For the momeot that young (just turned 17) Patrick Dupood of France vaulted goto the stage of the beautiful, ivied, moonlit, outdoor theater and pulled off his first sheaf of impeccably accomplished, multiple pirouettes, it was apparent to audience and jury alike that here was a dazzler, a winner, the newest candidate for international fame. Only unforseen technical disaster or a blatant breach of taste could have dislodged that instant triumph. Indeed, Mr. Dupond ultimately earned the highest percentage mark of the 27

n classic ballet, we are witnessing the trend toward a fresh internationalism. The National Ballet of Canada is about to stage Frederick Ashton'a "La Fille Mal Gardée," a work first giveo in London, later staged in Denmark and Germany. and now to be presented in Canada. Rudolf Nureyev's productions of the classics have been staged in many places; even John Cranko's "Eugene Onegin," a work tra-ditionally associated with Stuttgart, is to be performed by the Royal Ballet next season. All of this is most interesting, because between about 1930 and, say, 1970, the frend-was toward nationalism in dance. But this oew form of internationalism is an internationalism with a difference. Let me explain.

To understand the history of 20th-century ballet, it is ssential to realize that from 1870, when "Coppelia" had its first performance at the Paris Opera, until 1909 when Serge Diaghilev's Ballet Russe initially appeared in the West, ballet had virtoally died except in Russia and in Denmark. There were certainly considerable and significant schools of ballet in France and Italy—the Italians in particular produced a very high standard of technique—but as an art form those were ballet's dog days.

The impact of Disghilev on world art was formidable, but his immediate legacy was a kind of international dance company. Most, akhough not all, of the dancers were of Russian heritage. This was one of the sharpest theatrical instruments the world has ever known. It was a parade of international talents fawned over by international coonoisseurs. From this arose a new interest in ballet. When Diaghilev died in 1929, it seemed like the eod. But the vestiges of his company were picked up by such men as W. De Basil and Rene Blum, his repertory was largely maintained and many of his works continued to be performed. From about 1933 ooward was the period of the touriog Ballets Russes, which did a great deal to give dancers employment and started a wave of what their first spokesmen, the Eoglish critic Arnold Haskell, termed 'balletomania," in a direct translation from the Russian.

As time went on, the Ballet Russe companies became more Europeanized and later Americanized. The companies weot under various names, sobriquets and evasions. Indeed, two major groups survived: the Original Ballet Russe, which broke up in England in 1952 when it was fundamentally a British company, and the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, which, when it threw in the towel in this country io 1961, was for all intents and purposes American.

During this period, however, another fascinating phe-

nomecoo was happening in world dance: the taking on of new oational characteristics. This tradition, which had nearly died out, started to bloom all over the world. There were many people concerned-most of them, at the beginning, inspired by Diaghilev. Often they were former members of his company, later, another generation emerged, chiefly from the inspiration of Ninette de Valois, a Diagnilev protégé. In America, the work was accomplished by the likes of George Balanchine, Lincoln Kirstein, Mikhail. Mordkin, Richard Pleasant, Lucia Chase, Oliver Smith, the Christensen brothers, Ruth Page and, much later, Robert Joffrey. In Britain, it was, of course, de Valois, but also Marie Rambert, Frederick Ashton, Anton Dolin, Alicia Markova and, for a time, Mooa Inglesby. From de Valois there emerged John Cranko to reform the Stuttgart Ballet, Peggy Van Praagh and Robert Heipmann to start the Australian Ballet and Celia Franca to found the National

All these companies prospered. Their dancers got better and better, a new wave of Russian immigration-by-defection was led by Rudolf Nureyey, who immediately established himself as one of the great dancers of the century and one of the great influences on ballet in our time. But there was always a fly in the ointment. The number of indisputably major choreographers in post-Diaghiler classic ballet can literally be counted on the fingers of one hand. One of them is approaching 60, three of them are over 70 and the fifth is dead. Now this does not for one minute mean that there are not some important chorcographers eround: have made and are making lasting contributions to ballet repertory. I am talking here about the master-chorraphers, and they are, in alphabetical order, Fred Ashton, George Balanchine, the late John Cranko, Je Robbins and Antony Tudor

This paucity of major talent baa made repertory se thing of a problem. Hallet is, in some ways, organized opera; yet, it lacks that enormous and stable reperior. classics which opera possesses. There are national repen--you'll undoubtedly find more Janacek in Prague anywhere else, more Britten in England and outside Copenhagen, you'll probably have to search for Carl Nie operas. No matter—the principle is a general one opera houses perform the same repertory. The other heard one of Canada's emergent national opera comin Ottawa, and it was singing, edmittedly in Canadian, Marriage of Figaro" and "The Queen of Spades," and in its understated way, is one of the most nation countries in the world.

In ballet there really has never been, at les comparatively recently, a common repertory. The is rapidly changing, and this, indeed, represents the internationalism. Balanchine, who has the mappy ha almost always being a few decades in advance of his has been remarkably generous in permitting his works reproduced all over the globe. In Germany, France, everywhere you will find Balanchine ballets and rather well done. Yes, you may say, but products "Swan Lake," "The Sleeping Beauty," "Giselle," "Cor-can be found all over the world. What is the diff. Very simple, and yet very important.

ike other dramatic forms, the suspense film has its conventions, and like all conventions, these may be ignored or defied by a master, but woe be to the mere journeymen who falls to give them their due. One basic convention calls for a careful balance between the commonplace and the unlikely. Scare audience is not much of a trick; an assortment of rapes and shadows and sudden screechy sounds can only when evil intrudes upon ordinary life are ir erberations set off. To compare Aifred Hitchcock, even at his second or third best, with Brian De Palma is not fair sport; it's like putting Muhammad Ali in the ring with Andy Warhol. But De Palma or his publicists bave been asking for it, telling interviewers that Hitchcock is his "model." Granted, the Master has employed some of the elements that De Palma employs here. Hitchcock has often played out his tales in exotic settingsbut he has typically used the settings to heighten the menace to his characters nr to establish a sense of place or of mood, not to divert the audience from the plot. He has not been above plugging into star-power-when he has been lucky or shrewd enough to be working with the likes of Grant and Bergman, Stewart and Kelly. Hitchcock has been properly criticized for overusing the device of having an innocent caught up in machinations beyond his ken, reducing it to a formula, yet even at his weakest, he invariably brings wit to his work, the idlosyncracy that sets a character apart, the throwaway joke, the odd cameo, the playing off his own reputation. Even when he starts with a hokey idea, such as in his recent "Family Plot," he manages to keep things cracking by sheer ingenuity.

To say that "Ohsession" is wanting in wit is more courtesy than criticism. This movie takes itself so seriously that just when one ought to be gasping with surprise at the climactic turns on screen, one finds oneself chuckling at the exertions of the moviemakers—fuzzy pictures, wavy pictures, slow motion pictures, and, inevitably, the up-to-the-minute stop-action picture, all put to the service of a preposterous denoument. Whatever shred of credibility the movie retains is dispersed by the final, dead-serious directorial hocus-pocus. Alfred Hitchcock has been Hollywood'a champ tightwirewalker and juggler for a long time. Now Brian De Palma clumps ambitiously onto the wire and has a difficult time just staying there, never mind the juggling. The main suspense about "Obsession" Is what Hitchcock is cooking up for De Palma as punishment for dragging his name into

By THOMAS MEEHAN

As Myrna Loy once said to Asta, every dog bas his day, and that day seemed to have arrived last month for the millions of American movie freaks who have gone about for years with such seemingly worthless Hollywood trivia crammed into their brains as the fact that Judy Garland made her feature film debut in "Pigskin Parade" or that Ricardo Cortez and Warren William played Same Spade in a pair of pre-Bogart versions of "The Maltese Falcon." In any case, for knowing such stuff they could chow down for half price at McDonald's oo a double order of all-beef patties, special sauce, pickles, lettuce and onions on sesame-seed huns-i.e., on Big Macs, For as I discovered upon hlundering a few weeks ago into my local McDonald's, anyone who ordered a Big Mac at that time could win a second one if he could accurately answer one of the questions in McDonald's Big Mac Movie-Trivia Game.

And for movie freaks, of which I must shamefully admit I am one, the questions asked at McDonald's were ridiculously simple. For example, I was almost too proud to accept a free Big Mac that first day for being able to name the actor whose first film was "Johnny O'-Clock" and who later died while making "Merrill's Marauders." (Jeff Chandler, of course.) On the other hand, wasn't so ashamed that I haven't returned frequently to McDonald's in the past month to have myself a pair of Big Macs for the price of one, which may explain the fact that I seem both to have gained 15 pounds and to be suffering from a slight case of malnutrition.

McDonald's has. ceased giving Big Macs in exchange for useless information about old movies, but I'm hoping that they may have started a trend with their Big Mac Movie-Trivia Game, that remembering junk like Robert Taylor's real name (Spangler Arlington Brough) can be traded in the future not only for junk food but also for things of far greater value, like Gucci shoes, Jaguar V-12 sedans, or condominiums in Fort Lauderdale. Or at least for food of a somewhat more exalted quality than the Big Mac. The other day, for instance, I had a fantasy in which I'd dined sumptuously on hoeuf Wellington and a bottle of Chateau Margaux, at Lutece, had heen hit with a check for $181.74, and had been told by the headwaiter that the repast was on the bouse if I could name the writer of the screenplay of "Les Infants de Paradis." "Jacques Prévert," I instantly replied in my fantasy and then strolled grandly out of the joint, And I can imagine all sorts of other ways that the straw of obscure facts about movies and moviemakers could be turned into gold. You could get a free shoeshine, for example, for knowing who directed "Shoeshine." Or win a weekend at the Waldorf for being able to name the co-stars of

"Weekend at the Waldorf." The possibilities are infinite. . I've thought of other ways, too, that movie triv prove profitable in the future. You're stopped by a state trooper and he's about to lay a $50 speeding ticket on you. But he'll let you off with a warning if you can tell him who played the title role in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cahhage Patch." "Pauline Lord," you say, and drive bappily off. Or you're held up on a dark and deserted street by a gun-wielding mugger. "Your money, your life, or the name of Fred Astaire's dancing partner in Ynu Were Never Lovelier," he growls. "Ginger Rogers," you say, and he sboots you dead. Or else you say "Rita Hayworth," and amble off unharmed.

Finally, now that capital punishment is hack with us, I have a vision of the Big House, on the night that Righty Malone is scheduled to go to the hot seat. "There's only one way that you're not going to burn, Righty," says Warden Thaxter. "What's that—by gettin' a pardon from the governor?" asks Righty. "No," says the warden, "by being able to name the Seven Dwarfs." "Ahh, that's a cinch," snarls Righty. "Dopey, Doc, Happy, Grumpy, Sleepy, Sneezy and, uh. uh . . .'

Dissolve. The lights have dimmed in the Big House and Righty Malone has gone to the Great Exercise Yard in the Sky as Warden Thaxter and Father Jerry are walking back to the warden's office. That's the trouble these tough lower-East Side kids who go wrong," says the warden. "They're shrewd. they're ruthless, and they know it all, except one thing." "What's that?" asks Father Jerry. "They can always remember Dopey, Doc, Happy, Grumpy, Sleepy and Sneezy," says the warden, "but they can never remember Bashful."

Miss Minnelli could be an example of inspired box-office casting, and the actress seems more keyed up than her customarily keyed-up self. Standing off to the side, ahe watches an ambitious scene being shot. The day before, her father had watched the finale of the hig production number, with Miss Minnelli coming down an elaborate mirrored staircase, and there were tears in his eyes. After the scene, he went over and spoke with his daughter.

"Daddy and I were walking very quietly together, and suddenly the light must have hit me at a certain angle. 'My God,' he said, 'you look like Mama,' like he'd never noticed it before."

The budget of "New York, New York" is much more lavish than the budgets of Vincente Minnelli's classic M-G-M musicals, and, at almost $6 million, the movie is at least three times costlier than any of Scorsese's earlier hits. garbage on the streets; the Many Hollywood observers are wondering whether he will stumble, as did Peter we're making a movie-movie. Mozart, the Dazzler, Evident Even in Background Music

Mozart concerts over the past ten seasons has been the opportunity to hear so many different facets of Mozart's genius. Even his occasional pieces, music written strictly to provide background entertainment for courtly functions, can for their wealth of musical detail and variety of moods. The summer months seem an especially savor this intimate, lighter side of Mozart, either or at home with a good recording.

It was a time of technical growth maturing, and we cao see it all happening berethe unappreciative nose, as it were, of Mozart's yer, the Archbishop Colloredo, for whom so many ces were written. Each divertimeoto was devised .c social occasion: to entertain the Archbisbon's they sat down to dinner, woodwind serenades to utdoors on a warm summer evening, ceremonial ore formal festive events such as a wedding or a -day. The effect is almost subtle balance between effortless spontaneity and artistry in each sequence of sonata-allegro moveiets, adagios, virtuoso concerto interludes aod do finales.

lomusica, a flexible group comprising some of finest musicians, correctly plays the music more lozart conceived it with one or two instrumenart. The entire set is a delicious musical ne of the chief pleasures in attending Mostly feast, doubtlessly far more rewarding than anything set forth on the Archbishop's banquet table.

Mozart's large-scale serenades were also written to provide the most civilized sort of background music, and they are more comfortably adapted for chamber orchestra than the divertimentos. Edo de Waart has been recording them in this way with the Dresden State Orchestra for Philips and at present three disks are evailable, the "Haffner," "Posthorn" and "Colloredo" Serenades. De Waart's affinity for Mozart's lighter music was previously demonstrated in the Netherlands Chamber Ensemble's complete traversal of the wind music, also on Philips. The Dutch cooductor is no less in his element bere: a warm yet clearly defined orchestral tone, graceful elegance and stylish solo work characterize these superbly engineered recordings.

When he wrote more formal chamber music—the string quartets, quintets and works for an assortment of small instrumental combinations - Mozart obviously expected his listeners to be completely attentive. Although be gave his only string trio, K. 563, the title of Divertimento, probably because of its six-movement format, this is a work of serious purpose, breadth and power-"every note is a contribution to spiritual and sensuous fulfillment in mood," sums up Mozart scholar Alfred Einstein. The letest trio to record the piece is a stellar ooe indeed: Isaac Stern (violin), Pinchas Zukerman (viola) and Leonard Rose (ceilo). Their approach tends to be rather boisterous, but the sheer vitality of the playing communicates much of the significance Einstein imputes to this moving work.

All of Mozart's late chamber music functions on an equally lofty plane of inspiration. These were difficult years for the composer, both economically and physically, but the only indication of trying circumstances to be found in the music is an intensification of feeling balanced by further refinement of compositional skill in exploring the medium's potential. The last three string quartets, dedicated to the King of Prussia (a cello player, which accounts for the unusually showy parts for that instrument), are among the most introspective pieces Mozart ever wrote. The Juilliard Quartet's new recording, together with the earlier "Hoffmeister" Quartet, accentuates their dark side io stroog, sinewy performances couched in a dry-poiot style that seems exactly right for these

A totally different sound for late Mozart cao be heard in the suavely cultured readings of the six string quintets by violinist Arthur Grumiaux and his associates on three Philips disks. Although these works were also written, in part, for the King of Prussia in bopes of a court appointment (which never materialized), they possess a more urbane character than the quartets, so Grumiaux and friends are not far wrong in their approach. Somehow it all seems just a shade too glossy, however, and oot quite on the high level of the same group's

Back to Mozart the entertainer. On a two-record Philips album entitled "Miniatures," members of the Netherlands Woodwind Ensemble and a vocal trio headed by Elly Ameling investigate some obscure but amiable odds and ends: five nocturnes composed to texts by Metastasio, five tiny divertimeotos for three hasset horns, and 12 duets for two French horns. Another Philips disk, "Secular and Sacred Canons and Songs," shows the unrestrained private side of the composer. Many of these clever canooic games and slightly risqué songs were intended to amuse his intimate circle of friends, and their coarse, anal humor has always embarrassed less earthy Mozart lovers. These are trifles perhaps, but they do give us a glimpse of the composer in his most unbuttoned moods. With such bits of esoterica for the Mozart collector who has everything, Philips seems well on its way to assembling the complete works on disk; this label already has more of the major items in its catalogue than any other company-operas, concertos, quartets, choral music, sonatas- in rarely less than first-class performances.

Finally, the second annual "Mostly Mozart" record by Alicia de Larrocha, who over the years has become the unofficial first lady of the Lincoln Center Festival. On this wellfilled disk the pianist has programmed two socatas, K. 311 and K. 330, the D mioor Fantasia and, to justify the "Mostly" sobriquet. Haydn's F minor Andante and Variations. A predictably marvelous display of keyboard artistry, the playing here is totally refreshing in its glistening clarity, rhythmic plasticity and emotional stability.

Fromm Composers At Tanglewood Represent Many Countries

By SHIRLEY FLEMING

The coocerts of contemporary music sponsored by the Fromm Foundation at Tanglewood have long been an important part of the Berkshire Music Festival. The five days of concentrated oewmusic performances start this year on Aug. 14 and represent a broad range of natiooalities, including works not only by American composers but by two Greeks, an Italian, a Moroccan, a Japanese-American, a Cambodian, a native of Ediaburgh (Thea Musgrave) and a French American. This last is Betsy Jolas, the festival's summerlong composer in residence. who was born in Paris of American parents, educated in America and in France, and is now a professor at the Paris Conservatoire. Her "D'un Opéra de Voyage" for chamber orchestra will be performed on Aug. 15, and two unaccompanied flute works on the following day.

The wide spectrum of nationalities is the result of careful planning on the part of Gunther Schuller, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Center, who persuaded Paul Fromm a dozen years ago to include ooo-American composers in the Fromm concerts. "I'm a very curious fellow," Schuller says, "and I keep a close watch oo what goes oo in the rest of the world. Among the Americans we want various ages-they run from 25 to 50-and for the festival as a whole there must be a catholicity of taste and style, diversity of instrumentatioo, and works that will combine into good programs. Sometimes the pickings are slim, but oot this these, the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Foundation commissioned two-Dennis Riley's Coocertico for 9 Instruments and Ira Taxin's "Fanfares and Dialogues."

In Galilee

New countries offer new opportunities, and an example of the fact is e project currently under way in the Galilee area of Israel. It is e sparsely settled land with few cultural resources, and the Israel Ministry of Education and Culture bas decided to form an orchestra of about 35 players to be based in Carmiel, a settlement of about 12,000 souls in the center of Each player will function in a variety of capacities—as soloist, as chamber pleyer in the orchestra's subsidiary groupings, and as a teacher in the music schools to be established in Carmiel, Zafat, and Nazareth. All of which is not as far from American concerns as it might at first eppear, because the entire orchestra is to be recruited from among U.S. instrumentalists-preferably Jews who feel a commitment to the State of Israel and who may want to settle there.

The cooductor and talent scoot for the undertaking is a 31-year-old musician named Issak Tavior, who was born in Haifa and trained in Tel Aviv and abroad. "I believe a man should be in his bome, connected to his culture, to his family. My own main coocern is to live as a musician in Israel. I hope others will come and find themselves at bome there. It is oot exactly a piooeering life, but it is not easy.

Tavior is spending the summer in this country, arranging auditions in New York, Chicago, and on the West Coast. Information about the oew orchestra may be obtained from the Jewish Agency at 515 Park Avenue, New York 10022.

In the libretto, Hagen rushes to the body in the ball of the Gibichungs to seize the ring. The dead man raises his arm in a threatening. gesture and Hagen retreats in confusion. Why, Chereao was asked, bad he dropped that traditional piece of stage business. (It might be mentioned that the Günther Rennert. staging of the "Ring" in Munich also dispenses with the raising of the hand.)

Chereau said that he had dropped it because "I don't think that Hagen would be afraid. He's too strong, too tough." But, a German critic insisted, that was beside the point. It was a miracle, and Wagner intended it as such. "I don't believe in miracles," Chereau curtly replied."

And that was that. Chereau, young, very mod, handsome with black hair curting down to his shoulders, chain-smoking, speaking in German—gave some clues to his conception of the "Ring."

He said that when the curtain goes up, nature already has been spoiled and corrupted. The much talked about hydroelectric dam "represents industry and is also a mythical symbol." Chereau said that nobody today could take all. aspects of the "Ring" seriously. He himself purposely ignored most of the cosmic and mythical elements. "I am interestedonly in the human psyche and emotions. Those are much more important than myths." In short, Chereau deliberately admitted to ignoring what was of overwhelming importance to Wagner-the mythic elements-and said as much. His remarks often were of rather breath-taking loftiness in respect to the "Ring" librettos. For instance, the figure of Hagen at the very end is treated by Chereau with peculiar nonchalance. Hagen really does make a half-bearted attempt to get the ring from the funeral pyre, tangles briefly with the Rhinemaidens, and then walks off in complete defiance of Wagner's directions.

Why? Why? Chereau was asked. His answer was indicative of the current usurpation of stage director over composer. Hagen, explained Chereau, is oot really interested in the ring. He already has had several chances to take it and didn't take advantage of any.

Which may be true. But that is Wagner's fault. As a stage work the "Ring" is full of boles and inconsistencies, But a sympathetic and understanding director can at least smooth those over. Chereau is not interested in this. He wants to reinterpret according to his 20th-century (and, one is afraid, adolescent) ideas about the operas.

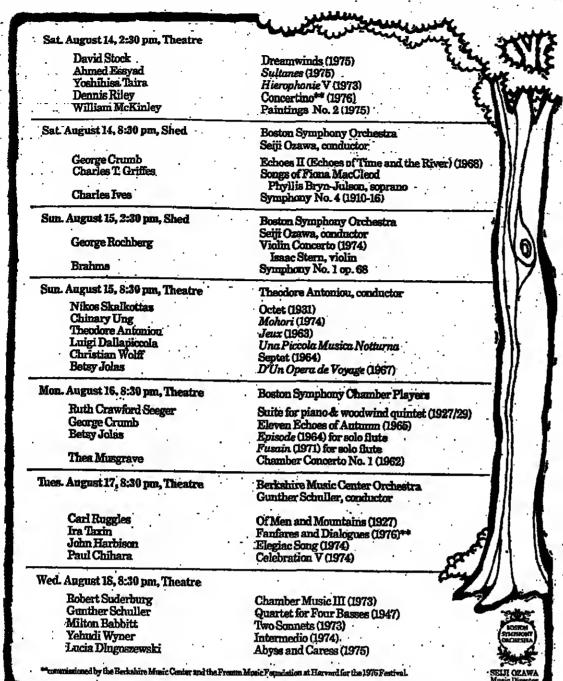

Wagner himself had something to say about the subject. and his comments should be read to all of those directors-Wolfgang Wagner included—who constantly talk about adapting opera for modern audiences, about "bringing. opera into the 20th century."

In Wagner's own day Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and other great operas were constantly being "brought up to: date," and being mangled in the process. Wagner, one of the greatest conductors of his day, objected strenuously. "Transported into today's cooditions," he wrote, "that which is eternal in these works suffers a distortion. . . . Almost every director sets about producing 'Don Giovanni' in the style of his own time; whereas any intelligeot person knows that, if we are to be in tune with Mozart, it is not the world that should be adapted to our age but we who should adapt ourselves to the age of Don Giovanni."

Internationalism

choreographed—but the classic production is undoubtedly Ashton's 1951 ballet for Margot Fonteyn and Michael Somes. Variants of "Swan Lake" differ from town to town, let alone country to country. Even so, the basic elements remain-and, indeed, the original choreography of those old, late-19th-century Russian ballets is still known. But they are not preserved with the zealousness of, say, a production of Balanchine's "Serenade," Ashton's Dream" or Robbins's "Dances at a Gathering."

In an attempt to spread ballets around, and also through the efforts of a new breed of dance notators (usually Benesh octators, but sometimes trained in the Laban discipline, which is an alternative and longer established system), even the major companies are nowadays acquiring a new and perfectly standard international repertory. For example, Mr. Tetley's "Sacre" was first produced in Munich, moved to Stuttgart and is now seen with Ballet Theater. Hans van Manen, one of the chief choreographers of the Netherlands National Bailet and one of the most talented young choreographers in the world, had a working relationship with the Pennsylvania Ballet and Britain's Royal in sharing works. Indeed, Jerome Robbins has a special relationship with the Royal, just as the Royal Ballet's director, Kenneth MacMillan, has given quite a few works to the repertory of American Ballet Theater. This process of lease, lead and borrow is going to extend. It has to.

But this will bring with it another change. We have all ooted in the past few years the emergence of the ballet superstar, who goes from repertory to repertory, occasionally only dancing a pas de deux with a choseo partner. Now we are about to see the emergence of the ballet "ministar"a dancer well known by dance cognoscenti but not yet with the big marquee-name star luster of a Nureyev, a Fonteyn or a Baryshnikov. These slightly less well-known dancers are going to benefit greatly from the new standardization of the repertory. They will be able to dance as easily with this company as with that and will be able to offer a known repertory, just as today an opera star can.

Will this affect creativity? Probably oot, although there is that danger. There will always be the oeed for novelty in any theatrical form-but that need will be met by instead of the companies. Darn clever.

visiting dancers in new roles. The old concept of the guest artist is already lost in opera and is luckily doomed in ballet Dancers and choreographers even dancers and ballets—are, I think, less and less going to be the essential property of one company. And, of course, there will still be international tours by distinguished ensembles, even though they are becoming financially less viable.

Burgtheater

Ronconi, having directed Euripides' "The Bacchae." Aristophanes' "The Birds," and more recently, in two evenings, Aeschylus' trilogy "The Oresteia," is established as the Burgtheater's specialist in the Greek classics. His "Oresteia" begins with splendid sights that dwarf its actors-an illustrated history of the Trojan War, abstract copper figures representing the old gods, Clytemnestra making her first appearance through a slit in a white curtain that oearly fills the stage, Agamemnon and Cassandra entering on a moving sidewalk, the red carpet oo which Agamemnon is to go to his death descending from above like the stroke of fate that it symbolizes. In the second play, human figures take over: Electra and Orestes, dressed shabbily in modern costumes (like the hapless chorus of the first play) take a merely human vengeance on Agamemnon's murderers without excessive help from the designer. The last play shows a weary old Orestes in a tattered black overcoat finding his savior in an impersonal, machinelike, silverclad Athena, accompanied by a herd of silverclad robots who are the Athenian citizens. Why do Athena and the Athenians look like Buck Rogers in the 25th century. First, because Ronconi cannot resist a terrific stage picture and, second, to emphasize Aeschylus' theme, the triumph of an impersonal, orderly justice over the rule of passion and vengeance. This is the dispassionate future, as seen by Aeschylus, Ronconi, and

Speaking of the Burgtheater's bicentennial, I am reminded of our own. We, too, were to have an international theater season (to which the Burgtheater was invited), but we decided we could not afford it. The Viennese could not afford one either, but they had one anyway by inviting the directors finalists on the point-by-point grading system used by the jurors. The jurors, however, had more difficult decisions to make with respect to most of the other contestants. Among the seniors there was no instantly identifiable winner, as Mr. Bujones had been last time. But unquestionably fair halloting and considered deliberation saw to it that the Gold Medal first prize for senior men went to Rumania's Marin Boyeru, a highly, gifted dancer with a fine sense of elegant style to match his technical prowess, and the Silver Medal second prize to the virtuostic, yet artistically sensitive, Mikhail Krapivin of the Soviet Union.

That the standards of the jurors were high and esthetically demanding is attested to by the fact that we felt that none of the senior romen was worthy of a Gold Medal.

Second-place Silver Medals awarded Czechoslovakia's Viacilova, a lovely, soubrette-style ballerina, and the technically bright but emotionally pale Larissa Vassilevskaya of the Soviet Union. Winners in the junior girls' category were headed by the Soviet Union's Alla Michaltchenko and Canada's Sylvie Chevalier. As for the Americans. Lynne Charles (a New Yorker who has danced with the Houstoo Ballet and West Germany's Hamburg Opera Ballet) won the third-place Bronze Medal for adults, and Pennsylvania's Ann Marie de Angelo (soloist with the City Center Joffrey Ballet) earned a citatioo for technical excellence. In all, approximately 20 awards, citations, or honorable mentions were given following votings which I, along with my colleagues from the West, found wholly fair.

Was there any partisanship? Of course there was. We would have been an odd lot indeed if each of us had not hoped for the best from the dancing embassadors of our own countries. But when the chips were down, our bailots were cast not for the flags of nations but for arabesques and grands jetes, for lines of bodies etched in space, for musicality in the phrasing of movement sequences, for interpretation. for presence and, of course, for that inexplicable aura which harbors a God-given talent, a performing quality that cannot be manufactured in any dance classroom any-

As important as the rivalry of this dance Olympics is that special camaraderie which, I think, exists only, or most fully, in the world of dance. The Bulgarians provided a ballet instructor to give class each day to Americans and others who wanted the daily instruction essential to all dencers of all ages. A Russian ballet mistress permitted Japanese and other nationals (Americans included) In her classes, I watched England's Anton Dolin, now 72, one of the great premiers danseurs of this century. coach Patrick Dupond in the

but it was beld in an atmosphere of concord remarkable in the world today. As the competition came to an end with a great dance gala, I took note of the barmony. Outside the theater stood a forest of flags of many nations, but inside, next to the burning brazier with its Olympic-like flame, flew a single standard: it was deep blue, and its design was a human figure outlined in what is certainly the most familiar and esthetically the purest movement design in all ballet-the arabesque. It is a standing position, yet it aspires upward. It is balanced, yet suspenseful. It mirrors a moment of stillness but bolds the promise of flight. Sunshine and Clouds on the Current Scene ush and pull, optimism and discouragements. elation and depression—television tends to work its wonders in extremes, perhaps especially for reviewers. An ABC Sports mogul has his network's press department call from Montreal during the Olympics to complain that my renot "positive" enough. The cool gall, delivered by proxy, is staggering. But then, the very next day, memorial service for a woman called Joan Mack sinded that there are decent and intelligent people the troubling business of broadcasting. Mack, dead after a long and courageous confronta-cancer, was one of those who labor behind the hout ego thumping. For years, she worked at what NET/13. She had two goals: quality programing g the money to get it on the air. Her financing were instrumental for the presentations of, among 3. "Theater in America," "Dance in America," "The ronicles" and WNET's Television Laboratory. At ial service, one listened to the words of Howard ial service, one listened to the words of Howard Robert Frost, Dylan Thomas and Robinson Jeffers, rid of TV began to tremble again with the coming to the emptier end of the spectrum. I am my colleague Kay Gardella, TV critic of the New News. On one of her annual trips to the West og which she heroically listens to the latest prois of stariets and producers, Miss Gardella gatheless cam from a CRS programing executive. The eless gem from a CBS programing executive. The "Spencer's Pilots," a new early-evening series stormers. The executive's analysis: "It's the kind Acormers. The executive's analysis: "It's the kind tere people are getting killed all the time. It's the against the elements or a malfunctioning plane. Image action adventure." In a novel, as they say, would not buy a character talking like that, other hand, this past Wednesday evening CBS wo-hour production called "To America," which impletely successful in realizing its complicated jut, I am willing to bet, was infinitely more adha a barnstorming format is likely to be. Produced by DeWitt L. Sage, Jr., directed by Mr. Sage and im, "To America" combined documentary seh "directed re-enactments of actual events," and ingredient of an elderly Italian immigrant revisiting an empty, dilapidated Ellis Island. This latter character was the weakest point in the conception. Played by Alan Arkin, the portrayal never rose above the level of a calculated "performance."

The rest, however, was rooted in reality, the reality of two young refugee families from eastern Europe trying to get into America and then trying to survive here. The Dorins, both trained in theater and film, and their two children were from Bulgaria. Andrzej Bozek and his small son escaped from Poland, forced to leave Mrs. Bozek behind, at least temporarily. There was nothing aggressively upbeat about "To America." These were people simply trying to cope, sometimes being treated kindly, sometimes with almost heartless disinterest, nearly always with a little less dignity than they deserved. Beautifully photographed, "To America" was generally admirable television.

For the time being, Nicholas Johnson is choosing to focus on another side of television. Formerly a member of the Federal Communications Commission and now chairman of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, Mr. Johnson is vigorously attacking programs that do "injury to people and the nation." He sees TV becoming a college for crime, crammed with courses in everything from mugging to arson.

Reasonable observers, particularly those with no financial stake in broadcasting, will certainly sympathize with Mr. Johnson's anxieties, but I have reservations about one of his current solutions. That is, to identify sponsors whose products are advertised on what he considers violent programs and, presumably, to encourage boycoming of those products.
The concern is understandable, but the tactics could be dangerous. If sponsors were encouraged to ignore programing dangerous. If sponsors were encouraged to ignore programing objectionable to the watchdog organization, they could also be encouraged to ignore other programing that may be considered objectionable for entirely different reasons. They may, for instance, avoid association with a play by Tennessee Williams or David Rabe. The entire question of sponsors getting involved in the content of a program is complex and potentially incendiary.

Can TV be used to positive ends? Obviously, yes. One of the more impressive projects of this past season was mounted in the School District of Philadelphia by Michael P. Marcase, board superintendent, and Michael McAndrew, director of TV-related projects. The district had been experimenting with course plans in which groups of 1,800 students were provided in advance with a students were provided. in advance with scripts of such programs as "The Missles of October" and "I'll Fight No More Forever" coupled with appropriate classroom exercises developed by the teaching staff. This year, with the assistance of ABC-TV and David Suskind Productions, Mr. McAndrew escalated the project dramatically with the two-part presentation of "Eleanor and David David "The Abd Control of "Eleanor and David "The Abd Control of "Eleanor and David of the Eleanor and Ele Franklin." The complete script was printed as a special supplement in the Philadelphia Enquirer and, in addition to reaching the approximately 800,000 regular readers of the newspaper, was delivered for study prior to the airing of the shows to the 126,000 students of the entire secondary school shows to the 125,000 students of the entire secondary school population. The national Nielsen ratings for the programs were high: 30 on Sunday, 32 on Monday. The ratings in Philadelphia were extraordinary: 48 and 51. In a pilot study involving more than 5,000 students in this TV experiment. Mr. McAndrew has discovered that none scored less than an advance of one year in reading skills, while many advanced three years. In addition, after the showing of "Eleanor and three years. In addition, after the showing of "Eleanor and Franklin," Joseph Lash's book about the Roosevelts was sold out in the Philadelphia area. The other networks, according to Mr. McAndrew, are now anxious to participate in similar projects involving quality programing.

lions any way they can get them, but—as with the networks' plans to expand newscasts—the resistance is coming from local stations.

Traditionally, the money left over from network advertising budgets has been spent in spot television-the purchase of station time, city by city. Thus, to permit the networks to add to their inventory of commercials would, the local stations believe, come at their expense. Ah, but there's a way to neutralize such opposition. At the moment what is being explored is the possibility of sharing the commercial increase with the stations, letting them, for example, have one of the four new halfminutes an hour to sell locally. For e station to add three half-minutes a night in the peak viewing hours can amount to hundreds of thousands of additional dollars a year, and that, of course, puts a different light on the matter.

As the situation stands now, the networks, aware that either way they are bound to come out shead, are keeping aloof from the issue. Clearly, to have the extra commercial time forced upon them by a consensus of advertisers and local stations is preferable to waging an active campaign for more spots to sell. It has occurred to some broadcasters that 12 additional sales pitches a night might just be more than viewers are willing to endure. But, inasmuch as the viewers' sensibilities have seldom been a prime consideration in the past, there's little chance of their weighing heavily in what will be de-

Local Effort

A local program is scheduled to go on the air in Sun Francisco tomorrow that could have a greater impact on programing around the country than saything the networks will be offering in the fall. Called "Evening," it is a program that station operators in other cities, who are closely watching its development, believe could bring back local television.

The program is to be a kind of electronic magazine heavily oriented to "people" stories and life-style features. Although it will have three hosts, the star will be the "minicam"—the new portable videotape camera that frees local production from the confines of a studio.

Other stations in the West have tried similar magazine formats, hut what is significant about this entry is that it will be offered nightly at 7:30 by one of the more infinential of trend-setters among hroadcast companies, Group W (Westinghouse). The other four Group W stations-all of them in principal citieshave already indicated that they will adapt "Evening" for their own markets if it succeeds in San Francisco.

If that should happen and other stations Tollow their lead, a severe blow will be dealt to the producers of the syndicated game shows that have dominated the 7:30 to g P.M. time slot ever since the Federal Communications Commissioo took away that half-hour from the networks in 1971 with the prime-time access rule. The F.C.C., which by law cannot dictate programing, had hoped the new time period would he used for local programing, but the game shows have predominated because they are cheap to buy and thus an easy way to realize profits.

"We know we can make money with game shows, but they don't do a thing for the station's reputation in the community," a Group executive recently said.

But there is yet another reason why Group W wants "Evening" to catch on quickly and spread, as a format, to other cities. The Westinghouse stations have been leading the fight to prevent the networks from expanding their own evening newscasts to 45 minutes or an hour. If the local magazine idea takes hold, stations may resist more adamantly the networks' incursions into their valuable early evening

Fourth Network?

The late Howard Hughes once made a stah at huying control of ABC. When that failed, he bought another network, a much smaller one with no permanent affiliates and no regular hroadcast schedule, but one which did a very good business in assembling special hookups for sports events—Big Ten Basketball, NCAA Basketball, the Bing Crosby Pebble Beach Golf tournament, women's golf events and a host of

Now that HTN is on its own, more or less, it is eager to become publicly much more visible and is looking for ways to be the nearest possible equivalent of a fourth commercial network, which, of course, would afford home viewers with a wider range of programing and hreak

the creative lockstep of the existing three. With the hig networks steadily luring away HTN's most successful sports events, the company has had to branch into entertaioment and now has two regular series, "Outdoors With Liberty Mutual" oo 70 stations and "Steve Allen's Laugh-Back" on about half that number. It also carried the recent prime-time special, "Magic. Magic, Magic," with Harry Blackstone Jr., the Jerry Lewis telethon for muscular dystrophy and the Fourth of July special, "Happy Birthday, America."

taken hy HTN's president, Arthur M. Mortensen, since the death of Hughes, was to sign a contract for the use of the RCA Americom satellite to carry 1,800 hours a year of the network's transmissions. That's both a show of optimism and a large commitment for a 20-year-old company which, in its peak year, operated as a national network for a total of only 120 hours.

HTN, however, is not just in the national network business. It is the company that sends the transmissions of haseball teams on the road back to the home cities and to the regional networks. It also controls the facilities for all the telecasts emanating from Madison Square Garden, including those carried on cable television or by the regular networks. The hulk rate for satellites is so much lower than that for AT&T's terrestrial telephone lines about one-third the cost, according to HTN officials—that the company expects to do a booming new business with clients who don't need, or can't afford, a full coast-to-coast network.

Mr. Mortensen entertains no hopes of building HTN into a full-fledged fourth national network. "Any fourth network would need enough permanent affiliates to cover 85 percent of the country regularly," he says. "To accomplish that would take legislative support - Congress would have to want a fourth network enough to create the stations for it, because outside the largest cities there aren't enough stations that don't already have a network."

Hughes, when he was alive, made a single great effort to move HTN into the big time. That was when his network had joined the bidding for the NFL Monday Night Football package around five years ago. The games, of course, wound up on ABC. If Hughes had gotten the package, a lot of the CBS, NBC and ABC affiliates might have given up their regular networks on Monday night to carry HIN. As it was, the football interests became nervous about the Hughes name and his association with Las Vegas, and they elected not to associate the sport in any way with

My Reservations About That Indian Series

By JAMAKE HIGHWATER

After years of being massacred by the media, the American Indian is now about to be killed with kindness. At least that's the dark suspicion of one with Indian blood in his veins who has viewed advanced acreenings of a series of six half-bour programs called "American Indian Artists," which began airing this past Tuesday at 8:30 P.M. on Channel 13.

1 say the above without meaning to discourage viewers from watching this miniseries, which does indeed have merit. It's just that the programs also have serious deficiencles—which I will try to explain and, to some degree, correct.

To begin with, let me de scribe the programs, which were produced for the Public KAET-Phoenix. Each halfhour segment attempts to examine the work and personal life of several native craftsmen and painters: jeweler Charles Loloma; potters Grace Medicine Flower and Joseph Lonewolf: painters R.C. Gorman and Fritz Scholder, and sculptor-painter Allan Houser. The programs show the artists of various Southwestern tribes at work in their studios and living among their people, talking about being Indian in the 20th century and about the concepts that motivate

What is most fascinating "American Indian about Artists" is the candor with which the painters and craftsmen present themselves their art.

Jamake Highwater is the author of "Song from the Earth: American Indian Painting," which will be published in October by the New York Graphic Society. He was recently appointed an American Indian consultant to the special programs department of the New York State Council on the Arts. .

to the camera: their devotion shots of the Southwest desert their traditions, their reverence for their materials and the earth from which they come; their sense of irony that surfaces in their images, and finally their longing for connection with a past that has very nearly evaded The series stumbles, however, when it mingles facts

We see paioter R.C. Gorman in a private plane flying between late 20th-century America and the Navajo lands of his ancestors, and we see Mission Indian Fritz Scholder stepping out of a big, shiny automobile and walking into the kind of gallery party that burdens the careers of most successful painters. Yet, what we are and none of the really intriguing culture which bloomed in that ancient landscape. What is most lacking in "American Indian Artists," however, is a sense of history that could place the artists in some kind of context and could provide viewers with a basis for comprehending where their unique art came from and what makes it unique. For instance the series overlooks the fearsome process by which Indian culture was forced underground by priests, missionaries, mercenaries and Christian teachers who sincerely believed that the nicest thing they could do for an Indian was to turn him into a white man, Further, hy omitting reference to subsequent events,

'What is most lacking is a sense of history that could place the artists in some kind of context.'

to the precarious survival of seeing in these scenes fails to work as a metaphor because nothing is conveyed of the tensions of the Indian world, balanced as it is, between its own tensions and the onslaught of industrial America. These "realistic" glimpses into the purely superficial gloss of the lives of these artists are gratuitous, since so little of the larger and truly exciting aspects of their lives and works are addressed by the producers and their cameras Even the title of the series is a misnomer since the programs are limited to artists only of the Southwest and, indeed, only a handful of them. All in all, the producers seem to have decided that the "Arizona Highways" kind of journalism is the right approach for a program on Indians. As a result, the viewer is left with a few impressive the series oeglects to provide any historical focus.

Let me try to provide some of this background myself. Since 1934, when it became lawful to teach Indians something about their own cultures, a singular gallery of paintings, pottery, and other crafts has re-emerged. A good deal is known about Indian pottery and jewelry, for they bave become very popular artifacts. But few people know much about Indian painting: what it looks like, who creates it or when it hegan in North America. Enough remains of the remote areas to establish that artists have been using iconography and abstract design for centuries-incised in rock and bone, painted on hides, wood and pottery, and employed in sand-paintings. The modern movement of subjugated the great warriors of the Plains and imprisoned many of them at Fort Marion. Fla. The captives expressed their forlorn situation by making drawings of home. They filled ledger books and strips of canvas with wondrous emblems and images of their undying world, employing the white man's pencils and crayons hut retaining the pictorial styles that for centuries had been used when they painted hides with their tribal and personal histories. At about the same time, in the Southwest, Pueblo and Navajo Indians began to ex-periment with pencils, crayons and paper, carefully transposing the iconography of their sandpaintings and the murals of their kivas (sacred chambers) to paper. Very little is known about these carliest of modern painters, but we do possess their unique creations, paioted on wrapping paper and other scraps. These Indians, untrained in the white man's art, carried their rich pictorial tradition into the 20th cen-

Indian painting began about 1875 when the U.S. cavalry

The situation of native painters did not change much uotil 1932 when John Collier became Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 lifted the han on teaching Indians about their heritage. This made way for the true recognition of Indians as painters and extraordinary craftsmen. A white art historian from the Chicago Art Institute, Dorothy Dunn, was appointed to found the Studio at the Santa Fe Indian School, it hecame, from 1932 to 1952, the major center of art education for Indians, and produced a style called Traditional Indian painting: flat, two dimensional images, without shading and usually with bold outlines and hright

Meanwhile, the revival of Plains Indian art began about 1928 in Oklahoma when Oscar Jacobson, chairman of the School of Art at the University of Oklahoma, became enthusiastic over the drawlogs of a group of talented young men who eventually became known as the Kiowa Five. With Dr. Jacobson's help, the artists were accepted as special students at the university. The paintings of the Kiowa Five, along with those produced by the students of Dorothy Dunn's classes, formalized the ideals of the Indian representation of Indian subjects. There is strong feeling among proponents of this traditional style that it is the only "true" Indian painting. But this dogma didn't stop a subsequent generation of Indians from broducing a wholly new th dian image based on their experience with the modernism of European and American painters. So in 1962, the Bnreau of Indian Affairs created the Institute of American Indian Arts in the same buildings where Dorothy Dunn had conducted her classes. The result of the Institute has been a new school of painting usually called Contemporary Indian art, which is characterized by the influence of cubism and expressionistic splashes of clashing colors and ironic political overtones. With this background in mind, a cumber of things in the TV series suddenly hecome clear. For example, sculptor-painter Allan Houser, who is the subject of the most informative segment in the series, was a student of Dorothy Dunn, his approach and attitude toward art is essentially Traditional in scope. R. C. Gorman, on the other hand, was once very vocal about his contempt for the Traditional style, although he has come around to seeing it as a valuable mannerism. of the past. He was largely trained at cooventional art schools, and his work and his use of nudes (rare among indian painters) show the influence of mainstream training as well as the impact of the Mexican muralists whom he also studied. Pritz. Scholder, on the other hand, started as a Pop artist interested in hard-edge painting. He was invited to take part. in the founding classes at the Institute in Santa Fe and quickly became an influential teacher there. Today he is the most successful of Contemporary Indian painters, with annual shows in New York, Chicago and other major

Whenever Indian artists concern themselves with their own culture a unique style emerges. In great art everything is possible even the vision of a future in which Indians still dance and sing in the expanse of this vast land oewly named America, Those of us who are devoted to that vision hope to grasp and convey something of its magnitude to others. It is unfortunate that "American Indian Artists" fails to generate more fully than it does the excitement and revelations that are at the heart of the art of the art of native Americans.

covering the Mysterious, Unknown Louvre

! us knows the Louvre. There's too much of 18s too long a history, and it's changing all me. It is the most secretive of all the great uns; we can poke and pry among its recesses years and yet end up knowing as little about of its departments as the groups of tourists ut of the mammoth building before you can not just a museum in which one absurdly hangs on the wall behind a bomb-proof It has been there in one form or another n fought with bears and tions in its courtmen and women stood by and watched. from the beams of the Salle des Cariatides, ere killed by Catholics in such a way that Louvre were purple with blood-so one ted—and the stairs ran red until nightfall. re given at one time to an audience of was conceived in the Louvre on a wet parents could think of nothing else to in it for everything, and there was room in it for everyone. The Louvre could have been all these things in the past and yet still be quite dead for our present purposes. It has its temporary exhibitions—no one who saw them will forget the Delacroix centenary exhibition in 1963 or the Poussin tercentenary exhibitioo in 1965-but its general policy is to keep its own house in the best possible order and not to enter into competition with either the Grand Palais or the Orangerie, both of which live entirely by temporary exhibitions. Nor does it rely on spectacular acquisitions, though one or two tongues were heard to wag at the price paid not long ago for Fragooard's "The Keyhole." Its curators do not come and go in a blaze of publicity. (Some of them are paid less than the guards at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, by the way.) The Louvre exists to give exalted pleasure, and not to get its name in the papers.

In this way comes about the "Don't tell me-I've been there" attitude of many a visitor to Paris. Such people make a great mistake. For in the only seose that matters, the Louvre is more alive than many of those American museums in which the director can hardly cross the hall without checking with his lawyer. The Louvre is constantly and discreetly on the move-reclaiming sections of the huge building which had been eaten into by civil servants, modifying the design of areas long unvisited by the public, reorganizing the collections in such a way that they represent a triumph for French lucidity and French historical sense.

The Louvre owns, for instance, some very famous paintings by Titian. These Titians have been a continual inspiration to French painters. Philippe de Champaigne lectured on the "Deposition" in 1667. Two centuries later, Delacroix, Manet. Degas and Cezanne made variants after Titian, and at the start of our own era André Derain did the same. At this moment all the Titians are bung together, and beneath them we can read what was said and see what was done by the French painters and writers who have recognized the Louvre for what it is—the greatest single force for good in the imaginative life of western Europe. That was something worth doing, and what did it cost? Nothing at all, by the standards of the cumhrous and often pointless exhibitions on which so much time and money is spent elsewhere.

Not that the Louvre is inactive in that regard. Paris remembers very well the superlative show of French drawings from the Met which came over oo loan in 1974; and right now in London to mark the centenary of Constable's death, there is a show of watercolors and drawings by John Constahle which has been lent by the Victoria & Albert Museum. (Watercolors by Eugene Delacroix from the Louvre's own collections point up the extent to which French painters were fired up hy Constable's example in the 1820's.)

temporary exhibition-"The Techniques of Painting: The Studio." This is lodged under the eaves of the Louvre in the kind of enclosed and souvenir-haunted space which painters have favored since the days of van Eyck. Like the Louvre's "Homage to Titian," it is a model of thrift: no ruinous loans, no show-off installation, no wrist-breaking catalogue. But there are masterpieces by Boucher, Gericault, Ingres and Matisse to remind us of what the studio is all about. There is much to show us how the evolution of the studio influenced the evolution of painting, and vice versa. The day is past, moreover, when the French looked only to their own tradition: two recent drawings by Roy Lichtenstein bring the show to an exceptionally intelligent conclu-

Most people think of the Louvre as a picture gallery. They remember, for instance, how Winslow Homer sent home a detailed drawing of the crowds in the Grande Galerie. But it was in terms of architecture as much as of painting that the young Henry James experienced in the Louvre "not only beauty and art and snpreme design, but history and fame and power, the world in fine raised to the richest and noblest expression." And it is in terms of sculpture that the Louvre has lately redefined itself with a particular eloquence. We can now trace the history of French sculpture from the Middle Ages to the death of Renoir in one uninterrupted sequence of noble rooms.

Sculpture bores most people silly, as we all know, and during even the worst of the recent heat wave the new sculpture rooms were as cool as they were empty. No matter. Pierre Francheville, Michel Anguier, Augustin Pajou, Jean-Antoine Houdon and Jean-Baptiste Carpeaux are among the great names of French art, and it is a wonderful thing to have their work to oneself. If most visitors prefer to leave them as what they are today—a part of the unknown Louvre—so much the worse for them. It is a lucky minority that can look day after day at Francheville's ecstatic "Orpheus" and at the full-bottomed knickerbocker suit with which Carpeaux ornamented the elegant little figure of the Prince Imperial. The Maillols outside look pretty nice, too.

With its ineradicable European orientation, the Modern could not face up to the first essentially American modern art-Pop. (Let's not argue about Pop's primitive origins in England or the Modern's early sponsorship of Robert Rauschenberg and Jasper Johns, from whose European sophistications proto-Pop elements can be dissected.) In its effort to keep with it, the Modern fabricated something called Optical Art, which was never a movement of much consequence and had few practitioners until the museum announced that it would assemble an exhibition. "The Responsive Eye," in 1965. Immediately optical artists were born like clouds of mayflies, only to die as quickly after the exhibition closed. The Modern also risked a nod in the direction of conceptual art in 1970 with Information," a show that, being 99 percent Dada, was well within its pre-war European orbit. The Modern's defense when accused of shying away from Pop is its Class Oldenburg retrospective in 1969. Oldenburg is the most brilliant of Pop artists (unless Red Grooms is a Pop artist, in

The predictability of abstract expressionism as the next step in modern art was so pat that if the New York School had not happened as a natural result of the Modern's exhibitions of European art, Mr. Barr and his colleague Dorothy Miller (once unkindly but not altogether unjustly referred to as the museum's fashion editor)

ments in realism that have glorious exhibition at the followed Pop, the Modern hardly seems to know that they exist. Its most unexpected recent exhibition looked backward to re-evaluate 19th-century Beaux Arts architecture, a style that had been reviled during the years when the Modern was sponsoring its 20th-century Bauhaus antipode. The Beaux Arts show was a landmark, but re-evaluations do not carry the full excitement of discovery. The audience that the Modern used to stimulate with paintings and sculptures hot off Leo Castelli's griddle is now more excited by, for instance, Scythian gold, which has been around for some 2,500 years, off and on, but came as a revelation a sur-

Metropolitan.

For Metropolitan read Thomas Hoving, For Thomas Hoving read Metropolitan. Never before have the images of a director and a museum been so fused in the public eye, (It should have been that way with Alfred Barr and the Museum of Modern Art, which he created, directed, and sustained until his retirement, but Mr. Barr was a modest man.) When Mr. Hoving assumed the directorship in 1967 following the death of James J. Rorimer, he set out to make the Metropolitan a public playground and he has done exactly that. His every excess has succeeded. People who never went to the Metropolitan when it was prise, an excitement, in a free now pay to get in, and they get their money's worth in Scythian gold, Chinese calligraphy, Renaissance frescoes, French academic painting, and any number of other subjects in exhibitions that 17. years ago would have been considered the Metropolitan's rightful province because they were either esoteric or stuffy, but now fulfill the need for discovery

longer offers. At one point the Hoving-Metropolitan set out to vanquish the Museum of Modern Art on its home ground, but the 1969 survey of contemporary American art appalled the critics by its lopsidedness and looked stale to everyone else. Failures have a way of fading away in the shadow of successes, and this one is forgotten along with Mr. Hoving's introductory "Harlem on My Mind," probably the worst exhibition, offending the largest number of people, ever offered by a major museum anywhere.

Mr. Hoving has come through every mistake and every scandal unscathed after temporary discomfort. The museum's Fifth Avenue facade has been butchered, and the great hall, which Mr. Hoving first said he was going to restore to its original character as a work of art, was instead remodeled into the city's most beautiful boutique arcade, delighting exactly the mass public that Mr. Hoving set out to cultivate. To the question "What's

If there is a question as to whether or not the crowds who pour into the Metropolitan get anything from simple exposure to the art they trudge past, the same question applies to the crowds in the Louvre and the Uffizi. My thinking, perhaps wishful under the circumstances, is that Americans understand a great deal more about art and hence enjoy it much more today than they did before World War II. This optimistic conclusion presumes a kind of cultural osmosis by which the deep pleasure experienced by a small portion of the public is symptomatic of an increased capacity for pleasure that has seeped into the subconsciousness of the many. The few are unquestionably more numerous than they used to be: they crowd the highly specialized exhibitions at Asia House, and something wonderful has happened to their response to drawings, traditionally a field demanding more acutely developed sensitivities than painting. Each new exhibition at the Morgan Library, formerly a secluded enclave for specialists, is a popular success, as are the changing exhibitions in the Metropolitan's prints and drawings gallery, assembled largely from its own collections.

American art museums outside New York, impressive enough before World War II, are now astounding. Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Kansas

the answer has become, City—we are accustomed to the idea that their museums range from fine to great, but In 1976 Mr. Hoving is let a couple of years go by clearly the paragon of surbetween visits and you are vivivors, and although it is staggered all over again, with additional shocks to a New declare that they are the fit-Yorker's smugness in cities like Dayton that he has difficult to question. If it thought of as cultural whistle were possible to calculate an stops. And the colleges. Yale, Harvard, Princeton-expectahle, of course, but have you purchased, the Metropolitan checked on them' since 1959? Or been to the likes of Oberwould proably make a weak lin or the University of Gallery in Washington and a Kansas to see what can be acquired by knowledgeable scholars with only nickles and dimes to spend? Or, back to the cities, have you seen the Indian sculpture in Los Angeles? The Oriental collections in San Francisco and Seattle? Or any of the private collections west of the Hudson that will end up, one day, in one or another of these places or some place that as yet has no art mu-

> Nor do New Yorkers, glutted as they are with museem exhibitions and dealers' shows, have any idea of the number and importance of exhibitions organized by museums and universities elsewhere. In the field of contemporary painting and sculpture these are likely to be so repetitions that they might as well be syndicated from Madison Avenue, 57th Street and SoHo, but when the subject is anything from antiquity on up through the 19th century, it is usually approached with sound scholarship and fills a gap left open by New York's dazzlers. There has never been a country anywhere like this country today. What we were calling a culture boom in 1959 has become in 1976 a deep-rooted cultural growth that has yet to come into full flower.

All the work and all the money, including funds from the National Endowment for the Arts (born in 1966) and from art's newest heavy patrons, the big American cor-porations—all the work and all the money expended on the maintenance of museums and the organization of exhibitions has enriched American life to an extent thet reduces the dross of the art world-its hoopla, its commercialism, its infightingto inconsequence, and cannot be fully realized by anyone who hasn't watched things happening over a period of, say, 17 years, as I have been lucky enos sa to do.

Although this could be done with a separate tape record-er the ideal method is to have the oarration recorded right on the film if the movie maker has a projector with a sound recording capability. Some sound projectors can only play back previously recorded sound, which limits their use to comments made into the microphone at the time the pictures were taken, but others will permit adding sound afterward to the processed film.

The usual procedure is for the filmmaker to edit his film, after which he seeds it to a lab to be "striped," that is, to have the magnetic tape added along

> After being striped, the film is threaded into the projector, and the narrator tells his story ioto a microphone connected to it. When the voice is recorded onto the film stripe the sound will always maintain a precise relationship to the corresponding scene; there is no possibility of it racing ahead of or lagging behind the picture.

> Sound played back on a separate tape recorder while the film is being projected, either reel-to-reel or cassette, will inevitably drift from the picture and the longer the film, the more out of step the sound and picture will become. East for the diamond queen, but this becomes a poor bet when hearts are led and West proves to have a singleton remaining the position was: He has therefore three known cards-heart six and jack-ten nf clubs-against seven in the East hand, five hearts and the king-six of clubs. Thus the chance that West held the diamond queen was greatly increased, since he had more unknown cards. West's first discard was the 2 10 spade deuce, apparently a totally worthless card. But in a strange way this proved to be a fatal error. The declarer cashed three spade winners and the diamond king ending in the dummy, and continued hearts. With only one heart heart West found himself in a strange position. If he had thrown the club ren, the declarer would have led a diamond and ducked when East showed out, forcing an endplay to make the slam. West therefore discarded the diamond six, and South read the position perfectly. He led the club five from dummy for a most unusual double endplay. lf East ducked, West would again be endplayed, and if he played the club king, dum-my's queen would suddenly

On the lead of the last come back to life and score the 12th trick.

After a lengthy post-mortem the players discovered that West could have saved the day keeping all his spades. If he held a spade instead of the club ten in the diagramed position, South would have no resource.

"Any fool could see that that spade sequence was valuable," snarled East. But he said it 10 minutes too late for anyone to pay any attenglected this plan bot also posted his Queen and his KR too passively with 11 . . . Q-N1 and 12 . . . R-Bl. Then, to justify his setup, he sacrificed the exchange by 16 . . . RP; 17 BR, QB, which would have been more promising. had it not been for Portisch's smooth technique in simplifying the position. Portisch's sharp 21 N-K6 led to the elimination of two pairs of minor pieces after: 24 KB, while he was ready to quash 24 . . . B-B6 with 25 Q-Q5ch, QQ (or 25 . . . K-N2: 26 QQ, PQ: 27 KR-Q1. PN: 28 RN, which might still have produced Geller's best chance for a draw); 26 NO.

BR; 27 NP, K-B2; 28 NR. Geller attempted to develop

threats against the white king at moves 24-30, bot after Portisch's 31 N-Q4 he could not refuse the exchange 31 . . . BN, 32 QB because 31 . . . Q-Q4; 32 N-N5 still diminishes material. Again, after 33 R-N6, it would have done Gelier no good to sidestep the exchange of Queens by 33 . . Q-B2, since 34 R-R6 would have threatened both 35 QN and 35 R-R7, winning the queen because of the mate threat at KN7.

The resulting ending was, of course, untenable and, after Portisch's 43 P-R4, Geller had little reason to contimue, especially in view of 43 . . . N-B4cm; 44 KP, NPcm; 45 K-Q4.

SAMUEL A. TOWER

Adolph S.Ochs

PUBLISHER

 ${f I3c\,USA}$

The issue is scheduled for Sept. 18 in New York City.

"To give the news impartially, without fear or favor, regardless of party, sect or interest involved." With this credo, Adolph S. Ochs took over the dying New York Times and in his lifetime made It one of the world's leading newspapers, this year marking its 125th anniversary.

In bis life, he epitomized the classic American pattern of the poor boy who achieves success through character, courage and hard work. His life is a paradigm of every Horatio Alger story: the sturdy, industrious newsboy and printer's devil who persevered against great odds and achieved his dream of publishing a great newspaper. In doing so, he raised immeasurably the standarda of journalism. What he began in 1896 in New York, and earlier in Chattanooga is what all respected newspapers do to-

On Sept. 18, there is being issued in New York City an Ochs commemorative. The date is just one mouth beyond being exactly 80 years from the exact day he acquired The New York Times, Aug. 18, 1896. Like the newspaper, tha stamp is in black and white. A portrait of him by S. J. Woolf, noted artist and writer whose combined sketches and interviews appeared with frequency in the newspaper, is the dominant feature. In a white panel above the portrait is the name, in the same type that the newspaper uses for its nameplate. The identification, "Publisher," in serifed capital letters, is just below the name. In a white panel below the portrait is "13c USA."

The new commemorative is jumbo-sized stamp being prioted on the multi-color intaglio press, with an image area of 1.05 by 1.80 inches. The stamp in colors of gray and black, was designed by Bradbury Thompson of Riverside, Conn.

There will be one plate number per post office pane of 32 stamps.

Collectors of first-day-ofissue cancellations should send their orders to "Ochs Stamp, Postmaster, New ork, N. Y. 10001." The cost is 13 ceots for each stamp to be affixed to the addressed envelopes that must accompany orders. The Postal Service prefers remittance by check or money order rather than cash. Postage stamps are not accepted as payment. Return addresses on the firstday covers should be written low and well to the left, and a filler of postal card thickness is helpful for a clearer cancellation and to prevent damage to covers. Orders must be postmarked no later than Sept. 18.

Adolph Ochs was only 38 years old when he acquired The New York Times, largely with borrowed money, at a time when "yellow" journalism, newspapers catering to aensationalism, was at its heyday: It was one of the bravest ventures in American journalism. But then ha was only 20 when he took control of The Chattanooga Times with a borrowed $250. For the formal payment, his father joined him-not just for sentimental reasons but because his son could not yet sign legal papers. Despite tha moustache, he was eight months short of his 21st hirthday.

Adolph Ochs was born in 1858, before the Civil War, a struggla involving slavery, and he died in 1935, when Hitler was in power and the Nazis were planning to enslave first Europe and then the world. Young Ochs had been inculcated almost from birth with a love of freedom and the ideals America represents. Throughout his career he fought oppression and held steadfast to his vision of democracy. His parents were German liberals and intellectuals who had been driven to the American haven by repressive measures by autocratic governments, His father, well educated, a teacher and merchant, was a captain in the Union army. His mother a refugee from Rhenish Bavaria after the

a friendly tip from a New York Times reporter that it was beading for the graveyard unless someone saved

The New York Times had in the years after its founding in 1851 by Henry J. Raymond and George Jones become a reliable and strdog newspaper, with added luster from its brave campaign in the 1870's against a corrupt Tammany Hall political machine and from the defeat of Tammany Hall's Boss Tweed. But it had been allowed to run down, and had not recovered from the panic of 1893. In its small, shabby building on Park Row, it was turning out only 9,000 papers. daily and losing hundreds of dollars every week.

Joseph Pulitzer's morning nal, were dominating the scene, with sensational storlow-inked strip, "The Yellow Kid," that had appeared in the World and then the Journal that led to the adjective 'yellow." This was the milieu that the oew publisher entered with an idea of a newspaper that provided the plain invarnished news.

He all but exploded with ideas as he took over. He threw out junky romantic fiction and masses of tiny type faces. Spurred by his wife Effie, he started a weekly book review supplement that was instantly popular and brought in book ads, too. He began a Sunday magazine that related to current events rather than hokum features. He concentrated on improving negtected departments such as business and financial news, introducing, for example, a daily list of visiting buyers that pleased the business community.

To make his mark on readers, he came up with the stogan, "Alt the News That's Fit to Print," a phrase that has since entered the language. The slogan, which meant merely The Times would eschew the sensationalism of "yellows," seemed priggish to some and like censorship to others. Taking advantage of the controversy and interest, the new publisher held a contest for a slogan with a $100 prize. The contest received wide publicity, from newspapers as far away as San Francisco. Finally a panel of non-Times judges picked a winner, D. M. Refield of New Haven, Conn. for "All the World News hut not a School for Scandal." Adolph Ochs decided to keep hts own, in fact he put it on the front page in a box opposite the weather box.

Adolph Ochs was 40, circulation was up to 25,000 wheo The Times was faced with the Spanish-American War, for which the Journal and World had been beating the drums and which they were blanketing with special correspondence. Adolph Ochs took his biggest gamble. At a time when I cent was the symbol of the "yellows," he cut the price of The Times from 3 cents to 1 cent, con-World and the Journal only because it was cheap and would buy The Times Instead at the same price. Within a year circulation trehled and in three years stood over 100,000. Success was assured. For the rest of his career it was a record of steadily increasing influence and Adolph Ochs achieved his concept of a newspaper by attracting great editors and reporters, being constantly receptive to the stream of technological and scientific developments of an everchanging world and by reinvesting his profits into the paper, treating The New York Times as a trust, not a property. Yet, despite the many contributions of others, The Times was always the Ochs personality reflected in print, and to a marked degree, It remains so today.

THE MEDAL OF DELIVERANCE

On July 4, 1976, a band of intrepid Israell soldiers electriffed the world by rescuing over one hundred victims of terrorism from the hands of their oppressors. Flying more than 2,500 miles over hostile territory, the defenders of the Jewish State, imbued with the spirit of the Macabbees, struck a blow for freedom against

It is fitting, in commemorating the Entebbe rescue, that we also pay tribute to Theodor Herzl—the man whose ophetic vision 80 years ago, calling for the creation of the Jewish State, placed the entire free world in his debt. In dramatic historic coincidence, Israel, the world's youngest democracy, delivered a resounding ersary of the United States of America—the world's oldest continuous democracy.

NUMISMATICS

Youth Accent—Colorado to New Yo

The numismatic hobby is no exception to youth-oriented rules such as "The Future Belongs to the Young." and "Youth Must Be Served." The officers of the American Numismatic Association have also long been alert to another truism: "Anything that helps young collectors helps the hohby as a whole, and a booming hobby inevitably means growth for the A.N.A." The Association showed that it recognized the need for leadership in this area, and that it was willing and able to lead, when it organized the Young Numismetists (also known as the Young Numismatists of America) some years ago. It has continued to give top priority to supporting and spreading the concept of-this organization ever since. Today there is scarcely a local coin club in the country that is not putting the "Accent on Youth. A "happening" this summer provided dramatic proof that throughout the country there is a great reservoir of youthful enthusiasm waiting to be tapped. Annually, in early July, the A.N.A. conducts a week-long educational seminar at its headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo. Adult collectors have attended these seminars in increasing numbers (at a cost of roughly $200 each), while a few young collectors have been able to attend on scholarships. This year the A.N.A. received a special "Bicentennial Scholarship" grant, large enough to pay all seminar expenses for 50 young collectors, ages 11 to 17. An essay contest was established, calling for a 100-word essay oo "Why I Am a Collector," with one winner to he chosen from each of the 50 states, More than 1,400 entries were submitted! Close observers of the Young Numismatist scene were not at all surprised by that outpouring of enthusiasm.

With that report from Colorado Spriogs still fresh in mind, collectors (of all ages) should be pleased to learn that the A.N.A. has "gone all out" in planning art. Dr. Darrell C. Tips for Homemade Travel Talki narration for each particular scene is kept short, with no commentary at the beginning and end of the scenes, theo the loss of synchronization will not be as noticeable. Whether the narratioo is on a separate tape or on the film stripe, certain procedures should be followed. The first consideration is obviously deciding what to say. It is almost exiomatic that wheo the picture shows something, the narration does not have to say it, too. Especially offensive is the phrase, "This is ..." Picture is the primary element in a film, and the narration only needs to explain what isn't obvious and amplify it. Guidebooks and travel hrochures can supply some in-teresting facts, but these should be made more personal hy teaming them with the traveler's impressions of the places he's visited. Too much commentary overburdens tha film, so it is important to time the scenes and narratioo, paring the commentary down to take less time than the visuals.

Should the ozrration be written out ahead of time? Some people are more comfortable if they have everything down oo paper; others can be more conversational if they work spontaneously from just a few notes. The important thing is for the narrator to speak in an intimate, cooversational way. It helps if he imagines that he is talking to a friend seated across from him. Although a person's voice quality is better when be stands, it is psychologically easier for him to achieve a casual, friendly tone when he is sitting down.

If a written script is used, there is the danger of it sounding stilted when it is read aloud. Try for natural phrasing, not a formal and literary style, and use words that are easy to pronounce. Certain sequences of words look fine on paper, but do not lend themselves to spoken speech. The narrator should practice reading the script aloud several times; he'll quickly discover if it goes "trippingly on the tongue." If it doesn't, he can rewrite It so that it does. A typewritten script is easier to read than a handwritten one.

easily, and this noise will be picked up by the microphooe. As an added precaution against paper noise, the narrator can slip each sheet into an acetate page holder, or attach each page to a piece of cardboard or hlotter paper. Paper clips and staples should be removed before the recording session starts. The placement of the narrator, microphone, and script is important. The best place for the narrator to sit is near the ceoter of a room. If he faces a wall, his voice will be reflected back and have an echo-like quality; if he is near a window, he increases the chances of picking up the sounds of street and air traffic. A living room usually makes a good recording studio because the carpeting, drapes, and upholstered furniture all teod to absorb unwanted sound.

It's best to put the microphone in a stand because hand-holding it is very apt to introduce unwanted clicking sounds. The distance from the microphone to the speaker's mouth will vary from person to person, but somewhere between 12 and 18 inches is about right. It's best to make a trial tape to determine optimum place-

The oarrator must remember to maintain the same mouth - to - microphone distance throughout the recording session, or there will be fluctuations in volume. He should keep his head up and hold the script a little to one side, being especially careful not to lower his head when he reaches the bottom of the page. People tend to unconsciously touch the microphooe stand, tap the table with a peocil, or play with their jewelry-so all of these things should be guarded against, sinca they produca greatly magnified sounds when recorded. A layer of felt or a towel spread under the microphone stand will also help reduce noise.

Close the windows, turn off the air conditioner, and listen for other ohtrusive household sounds. Many noises that go unnoticed in daily living can be distracting when they show up oo the sound track.

Another source of unwanted sound comes from the projector itself. Ideally, this It should be double-spaced on noisy machine should be isoheavy paper because light- lated from the narrator by

If the projector and microphooe must be in the same room, separate them as much as possible and put some sound-absorbing material between them: a hlanket or coat draped over a chair works well. Also, put padding under the projector. It is possible to eliminate projector noise completely if the narration is done "wild" -that is, without projecting the picture while recording. Later, the narration can be transferred to the film stripe or to another tape. This method is much easier on the narrator since he does not have to divida his attention with the between the script and the releases it ag releases it ag releases the next briefly describes each scene in the film where a specific bit of narration is to start. cause it elimina. one and answers are provided by readers. this column should be uddressed to Garden York Times, 229 W. 43d St., New York.

When the summer calendar rounds the corner and turns into Angust, a quiet sort of panic sets in, Gardeners realize there are only five weeks left until Labor Day and the growing season will start sliding into a slow decline. The days are numbered for those lovely geraniume in the window boxes, on the terrace and out in the flower borders.

Not necessarily. There is yet another role. A few selected plants can be transformed into standards or tree geraniums. These are elegant plants, trained into a single tall stem so that the foliage and flowers burst out at the top in one gorgeous ball of green leaves and flower color. They suggest a sort of giant floral lollipop.

One thing is sure. The fu-ture will be bright for the one geramium plant, or as many trainees as are rescued. Most of the others will be blackened by the first hard frost in October, their remains to be tossed on tha compost pile. (A few gardeners pot up some of their outdoor garaniums to carry over through winter indoors or root cuttings, taken now, in water or perlite.)

Standards require a long training period. If all goes well, the tree geranium will be ready for a garden debut next summer as an accent in a flower border or as tubbed plant for the patio, doorway or as sentinels by the garden

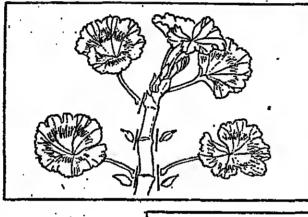

The professional growers start their tree geraniums from cuttings rooted in early spring. This makes a long growing season in the greenhouse and increases labor costs. Few and fewer growers choose to raise these plants since they require constant pruning and rapt attention in their care. At retail prices ranging from $30 upward, few and fewer gardeners find them offered for sale.

By starting in August the do-it-yourself grower short circuits the long training sesson. But this short-cut method places keen responsibility on you to select just the right sort of plant to start. Look for a geranium with e strong central stem and weak basal side stems. The lankiest, ugliest geraniums are the best to train into "trees,"

Also be sure the geranium has pretty flowers and good foliage form. It may be around for a long time. Those without geraniums in the yard, can still find a few straggly plants at garden centers in the metropolitan

A geranium growing in the ground or in a flower box will have to be potted up. Dig it carefully, placing the trowel down deep under the root ball Replant in a large pot-six to seven inchesclay preferably. It's heavier and less likely to be tippy. Use some of the geranium's own garden soil and mix it with the standard potting mixture of equal parts of soil, peat and sand.

Keep the geranium outdoors until around Labor Day. Water with a full strength weter soluble house plant fertilizer, for the second watering. This will push up new growth. Use fertilizer once monthly into November. Now for the training. Since ing tall, a strong support stake will be needed. Use either a sturdy hamboo, three to four-feet tall, or one of those metal ringed collars used for Oriental poppies. Poke the stake deeply ioto the pot to he sure it's sturely.

With e sharp knife or small hand pruning shears, cut off all the rangy side hasal stems of the geranium. Make cuts flush with the main stem and he careful not to tear or tip the "skin" off the main stem. What remaios will be an elongated ugly duckling plant that is going to need some love and imagination for what its future will be.

Next, with a sharp knife, placed against the tree geraniums "trunk", slice off all the leaves. Allow only the few young ones at the top to remain. This is the terminal growing poiot where the thrust of evergy will go. The geranium plaot has no where to grow now, hnt up. And up it will be forced to grow until the trunk is anywhere from 30 to 40 inches high. With soft string (strips cut from old nylon stockings are good), tie the geranium to the

From this stage oo, the pruning is simple. Keep all new leaves off the sides of the trunk as they start to form. They can be rubbed off with the thumb, gently. And he sure the soil in the pot is watered every time it appears dry on the top.

The growing seasoo will decline as the summer sun softens its glow. Be cautious about overfeeding when there is no growth response to absorb the nutrients. Usa good green thumb sense on this one.

Tha critical atage for all tree geraniums-is the carryover period: fall to winter. Those with greenhouses are in luck. They provide the right environment to hold the plants in a slow growing pat-

Second best is a hright sunny room, with full length windows-such as a living room or dining room, Ideally the temperature should he 65 to 70 degrees.

The object will he to force the tree geranium into its tall stem. By late winter, it should be three to four-feet high. At this point, the plant is topped. To do this, the growing point is pinched out between thumh and forefinger. This is the tricky moment. Pinch out just enough to discourage top growth, hut be sure there ara some side leaf huds left to grow. Otherwise, the whole plant dies.

Once the cluster of leaves starts to develop at the top of the tree geranium, gentle pinching back of the growing tipa will keep the top in a compect hall. When flower huds start to form, let them. And hy the end of May, the new elegant plant should be ready for its garden debut.

Once this training technique has been perfected, try other plants. Lantanas are easy to grow as their trunks attain an almost woody quality. Fuchsias are also worth the experiment. So are azaleas. Some have success with

Mushroom Hunts -For Experts Only

By ROBERT HENDRICKSON

Surpassed only by its close relative the truffle as a gourmet food, the mushroom has been used in thousands of recipes past and present. Books have been written explaining and extolling the fungl, hut oone, not even Robert Graves' scholarly and poetic eccounts of the phenomenon, has quite succeeded.

The delectable morsel, shaped like an upside-down ice-cream cone, is a particular favorite of gourmets, but almost all mushroom varieties were at one time or another royal foods. The Egyptians permitted only the Pharoahs to eat the fungi because they were too good for any commoner. Suetonious wrote that "mushrooms are the food of the gods," the ancient Chinese called them "the divine fruit of immortality." and the Aztecs thought they were "God's flesh." It is said thet Buddha ate a bowl or two of mushrooms before being transported to Nirvana: Russian Peasants still talk tenderly to the fungi; and the pre-Christian Guatemalans not only talked to them, but believed that their mushrooms talked back.

The Romans often served mushrooms on festive occasions, and they were a fevorite of Emperor Nero, who called them e divine food perheps because ha used them to poison his predecessor, the emperor Claudius, as Rabelais suggests.

More likely, Agrippine, Claudius' wife, poisoned the monarch lacing his favorite Amanita caesara dish with the juice of the poisonous phalloides. Later, when Nero was told that mushrooms were reputed to be the food of the Gods, he is said to have replied, "Yes, they led to the deification of my fe-

Mushrooms have become increasingly popular in America. In the last thirty years, consumption has increased from 44 million pounds to over 231 million pounds. Most of these are cultiveted white varieties and descend from a clump of white mushrooms Lewis Downing of Downington, Pa., found among his cream-colored plants in 1926. The majority of U.S. production (60 percent) is ceotered within a thirry-mile radius of Kennett Square, Pa., which became our mushroom capital during the Civil War when a greenhouse grower in the regioo discovered that he could raise the fungi under the henches of commercial flower crops.

One-hundred pound mushroom species have been recorded, and others are so small that they can't be seen by the naked eye. Some 50,-000 varieties exist throughout the world, about 1,000 being found in the United States. Many of these are delicious hut few people are expert enough to hunt them. Each summer brings a rash of deaths and illness from mushroom poisoning, which has plagued man through the ages. There is no way to tell a poisonous wild mushroom from a safe one except by knowing the species.

You can't tell e morbid mushroom by dropping a silver coin or spoon into tha saucepan when wild mushrooms are cooking; it will not turn black. Onions that come in contact with poisonous fungi will not turn brown. Neither is it true that a mushroom is edible because animals or insects eat it with impunity. Slugs frequently feed on Amanita pholloides, which is so deadly that even smelling it can bring on a violent attack in humans.

Despite the fact that doctors beginning with Hippocrates have warned against collecting wild mushrooms, gourmets persist in hunting down such delicious species as the morel, puffball, chicken mushroom, shaggmane (the so-called "fool-proof four") and the rare honey mushroom (Armillaria mellea). It is best to join a mycological society and hunt with the experts if hunt you must, but then someone has pointed out that it is usually the "experts" that dia of mushroom poisoning.

Mushroom guides abound and the hobby is so prestigious that Hollanders Workshop several years ago issued a limited edition of a levish work called the Mushroom Book-each of the 75 copies sold for $1,500.

Better, then, to huy domestic or wild mushrooms (the famed Italian dried mushrooms funghie porcini are particularly good, but cost about $30 for a one-pound

Many nurserymen now offer grow-your-own mushroom trays. These kits come complete with spawn, compost, topsoil and directions. The spawn must be grown in a completely dark place with a temperature of between 52° F. and 60° F. Mushrooms do not thrive in dry air, but this can be avoided hy keeping the trays covered with a piece of cloth and watered through twice a

Keep the soil moist but not cloth, except to pick mushrooms, which with luck will he in three to four weeks. Some people have a lot of success with mushroom kits, hut mora often the yield is skimpy.

Never peel or wash any mushrooms. Wipe them with a damp cloth instead.

They can be used in myriad delectable dishes, or packed loosely, unweshed, in uncovered containers and stored in the refrigerator for e week without losing much in flavor. When keeping mushrooms any longer than this, dry them and soak them in water leter when they are to be used.

Stones That Speak With Symbolism

Jiro Harada of the Imperial Household Museum of Japan, writing in the 14th edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica (under the heading Bon-Seki) also stressed the metaphysical appeal, saying a suiseki specimen placed on desk or windowsill "may suggest a waterfall, the sound of which may be heard, or rather felt, in the momentary solitude of one's . room."

Many suiseki stones in Japan have been handed down through generations and are considered as valuable as gems. Some of these can be purchased by visitors to that country, either in the rough or cleaned and mounted may range as high as $2,500. American dealers also offer stones, many imported from 11804) sells palm-size imprices ranging from $30 to cannot offer the same pleasure and satisfaction as one that the collector finds for lightning bolts or cloud himself in nature. who have only been enjoying this hobby since World War II, still have an almost untouched countryside through which they can search.

Although the word "suiseki" translates as "water" stone," and implies that most of these stones are found in or near streams, enthusiasts have found that choice specimens can be found in desert outcroppings, as well as in streams. Henry Taketa, a California attorney and suiseki enthusiast, speaks for most devotees of this hobby when he says, "The reward in the search for suiseki belongs to those with patience, industry . . . and a stroke of luck." A valuable stone may be found by chance on any walk through stony country. while on the other hand, it is not unusual for a collector to search a full day before on a wood stand, but prices finding even one collectible stone. popular method is to place the specimen on a shallowsided tray (called a suiban) filled with white or colored sand or crushed gravel. Tha suiban should be twice tha size of the suiseki with tha stone placed off-center and to one side.

As Western interest in the hobby grows, other forms of display are also becoming accepted. Stones may be placed on a flat rock or board of appropriate size or they may be set into interestinglyshaped hases of driftwood or tree root. Many Japanese nurseries carry containers and trays for the display of both bonsai and suiseki. Crushed gravel in several colors is also available through these nurseries. Import stores are a good source for ceramic, wood or metal trays and stands which will accept the beauty of a stone placed on them.

Suiseki is often displayed with bonsai in homes and in exhibits and some books on bonsai also contain information and pictures of suiseki.

Although suiseki is an ancient bobby, it is comparatively young outside Japan so today's sharp-eyed searcher has every opportunity of finding a prize specimen with, as Ono and Yamada phrase slightly wider and somewhat it, "a poet's message coming-

New Books for Do-It-Yourselfers

By BERNARD GLADSTONE

As professional carpenters. masons, appliaoce repairmen and other craftsman become harder and harder to findand higher and higher in price - do-it-yourself homeowners and workshop enthusiasts are displaying an increasing thirst for knowledge about the tools and materials used, and the techniques one must be familiar with, io order to de their own work. In answer to this demand, book publishers are contioually issuing new, updated volumes of how-to information and reference data for the handyman or handywoman who wants to learn more about these subjects. Here are some volumes that have been issued in recent months that should prove of interest to readers of this column:

"How to Build Patios and Decks," by Richard Day (Harper & Row, $6.95) is a profusely illustrated, 180-page hardcover book that is dedicated to "the weekend huilder who would like to add outdoor living space around his home," and it does a pretty good joh of fulfilling the promise outlined in that dedication. Starting with a chapter oo planning the deck or patio, the book has chapters devoted to huilding wood decks, concrate patios and other paved types such as those made of brick, stone or other materials.

There are also chapters included on adding ouldoor lighting, huilding stairs when required, and roofing over a patio or deck. All projects in the hook are illustrated with photographs, and many bave detailed line drawings showing construction details and dimensions.

'How to Build Modern Furniture," hy Mario Dal Fahrio (McGraw-Hill Book Co., $8.95) is a two-section, 122-page hardcover volume, with the first section devoted to general instructions on se- crete, as well as working Over 50 different pieces of furniture are included, with dimensioned drawings and a list of materials needed for each. The pieces are all simple in design and modern in atyle with mostly straight lines, and they vary from a simple magazine rack to upholstered sofas and beds with head-"You Fix It: Clothes Dryers (Electric and Gas)," by Robert A. D'Agostino (Arco Publishing Co. $4.95) Is for the ambitious do-it-yourselfer who wants to do his own appliance regairs. The book is a large-format paperhack of 240 pages, and is part of a series the company has been issuing on other types of appliances. The text is comprehensive, with many clearly labeled drawings that show component parts of several well known brends of clothes dryers, and each type of repair job is described in a step by step manner, starting with the type of problem the reader is faced with. There are numerous cross references that, if diligently followed, will enable the reader to track down all repair procedures. > The exact same U.S. Army manual has also been issued in paperback by Tab Booksonly their version is in a smaller format (approximately 5 by 8 inches), and it is priced at $5.95. It's title is Concrete & Masonry," and the content is the same as the one described above.

Tab Books has also put out another paperback in the in building log cabins and same size which is titled "Practical Home Construc-. tion/Carpentry Handbook," and it is basically a reprint or combination of three separate books originally put out by Forest Service Engineer L. O. Anderson in conjunction with a special staff at the University of Wisconsin. Priced at $5.95, this 445page volume will be helpful to those who are thinking of building their own home, or those planning to make sizable additions to their house. The emphasis is on keeping costs down, and the comprehensive text includes information on almost all construction techniques and materials used in building a house. There is also a section that gives floor plans for a number of different low cost wood homes. Many do-it-yourselfers and woodworking enthusiasts are also very interested in tools -their types, origins and history. These people will undoubtedly find two recently published volumes of special interest

The first of these is "Dictionary of Tools," hy R. A. Salaman (Charles Scribber's Sons, $47.50). This is a massive (545 pages) and beautifully Illustrated compendium which describes every hand tool used in the woodworking trades from the years 1700 to 1970. It is a true dictionary in every sense of the word with everything plained in simple language.

with, or which may fall into ings that are of immense heip in identifying them, and the purpose of each is explained in addition to the tools used in woodworking, there are descriptions of toois used in allied crafts such as sailmasong and rigging, with brief outlines of these specialized trades and a description of how the tools were used.

The second volume that will be of interest to tool collectors is "The Tools That Built America," by Alex W. Bealer (Crown Publishers $12.50). As its title implies this volume limits itself to tools used in Colonial America, starting with those used very early furniture. Not as comprehensive as "Dictionary" (described in the paragraph above), this book does not include any modern tools and is illustrated by drawings as well as some photographs. Many of the photograph, however, do not illustrate tools but rather fences, furniture, log cabins, moldings and other colonial objects that were made with these tools. There are a bittle over 200 pages in this hardcover volume, and they are divided -into four chapters which cover various phases of early American woodworking: the log cabin, the house, the furniture and cahinetmaker, and other woodworkers. "How to Make Your House

Behave," by Tom Philbin-(Western Publishing Co., $9.95) is a slender large format, 192-page harocover book directed at the home handyman or handywoman who seeks basic how-to information. It is colorfully illustrated and includes chapters on product and tools, as well as on interior decorating, safety and cleaning. Much of the information is of a fairly general nature that lacks specific detail. The section on Common Home Repairs covers the simplest and most frequent repairs only, but those that are described are clearly illustrated with drawings and are exFREE Nursery Catalog

Others, often noting Londoo's interest in bolstering its own subsidized airline, see it differently.

"It's equality of results the British want rather than equality of competition," according to Constantine Menges, director of the Civil Aeronautic Board's International division. And be wonders whether the negotiations might better pit the United States against Europe as a whole rather than just one nating

Dr. Menges also warns that the British proposals, by encouraging airlines to equaliza their market shares, might lead them to neglect market growth and the interests of the consumer. Z.B.B. and Sunset: What's the Difference?

By EDWIN L DALE Ir.

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter has pledged to intro-duce "Zero-Base Budgeting" if he is elected President. Congress is moving toward enactment, though probably not this year, of "Sunset" legislation. Is this just a new jargon nr a potential revolu-tion in government spending

Zero-Base Budgeting, ready being referred to by the experts as Z.B.B., and Sunset have virtually identical aims: to provide a mechanism for compulsory review and evaluation and possible reduction of all existing government programs.

But while the aims are the same, Z.B.B. and Sunset pro-cedures are not identical, particularly in the way they would work in the Federal Government. Zero-Base Budgeting applies primarily to the executive and Sunset to the legislature

A sweeping Sunset hill approved last week hy the Sen-ate Government Operations Committee would set up new existing programs by the Only Social Security and a few other insurance type programs where the eneficiaries cootribute would be exempted. In the executive, Zero-

Base Budgeting is described by Mr. Carter, who instituted it in Georgia, in these terms: "Under this novel concept, every dollar requested for expenditure during the oext budget period must be justified including current expenditures that are to continue, it also provides for examining the effectiveness of each activity at various funding levels. This is a dramatically different concept from ernments, which conceotrate almost totally on proposed new expenditure when considering a new budget. Except for non-recurring programs or expenditures, the continuing expenditures in a current budget get little attention." The last statement is oot true in the Federal Government. For years Presidents have been making proposals to Congress to end or phase out or reduce various pro-grams they call wasteful nr

"I've been around a ling time and I am skeptical in panaceas."

The Georgia system was largely instituted by Peter A. Pyhrr (procounced peer), whn had used it when he worked wrote an article about it in late 1970 in the Harvard Business Review. Mr. Carter, when elected governor asked Mr. Pyhrr to belp him install the system in the state government Z.B.B. involves a complex series of "decision packages" in which various levels of management present alternative funding levels for programs, including a level less than the current spending. Mr. Pyhrr himself, now vice president of Apha Wire Company in New Jersey, makes no excessive claims for Z.B.B. though he continues to be a convinced advocate. Early in the Georgia experience he

"1. The consensus is that Zero-Base Budgeting can be effective and should be contioued next year. "2. The quality of the de-

The Zero-Base Budgeting process significantly reduced (by about 50 percent) the amount of additional funds requested by the agencies, hut major shifts (reductions) from current prngrams to high priority new programs did not take place, although there were some significant loteroal shifts within departmeots. In additioo, the opportunities for reducing custs and improving effectiveoess were not adequately identified and evaluated. This was to be expected, and quality improvements will come naturally as agency managers cootinue to use this type of analysis."

Mr. Pyhrr cnncedes in his bnnk, "Zero-Base Budgetiog," that the large volume of paperwork was a problem and that "some of the effort that went into Zero-Base Budgeting was wasted." And he also recognizes something stroogly emphasized by Mr. O'Neill of the Office of Management and Budget and his chief, James T. Mr. O'Neill said in an in-terview that he feared that either a major change toward new Zero-Base Budget procedures in the executive branch or the new Sunset princedures in Congress would produce with limited results. He fears that the pressures that created the programs in the first place would out be significantly changed by a Sunset

In June, the British Government stunned the international aviation community by giving notice of denunciation of the Bermuda air traosport agreement that serves as the model for many of the world's civil aviation ac-

Whether the British really mean it is not yet clear, but the hope is that they do mean it, and that they are really aiming for a new look at the cooditioos of international civil aviation. For two other events in the past few weeks present an opportunity for American leadership that may not soon recur.

On July 13, the Civil Aeronautics Board reached a decision in the long-smoldering transAtlantic route proceed-ing, which if confirmed would crowd and confuse even further an already crowded and confused North Atlantic air transport system. Not only would two United States-flag carriers - Delta and Northwest-be authorized to fly the Atlantic, in addition to Pan American,

Under Section 801 of the Federal Aviation Act, when the C.A.B. finishes with a case involving international transportation, the decision is submitted to the President for approval or—as the Su-preme Court has held—disapproval or modification.

In theory, Section 801 is designed to enable the Presi-dent to take account of for-eign policy and defense con-sideratioos not known to or understandable by the administrative agency.

Moreover, the "foreign olicy" element in the President's intervention often came down to which of two United States flag carriers sbould serve a particular route, or whether a proposed merger should be allowed to go through.

Nixon intervened in the major transPacific route case in ways that, to put it mildly, seemed to undermine the regulatory process.

However, in response to criticism from groups as di-verse as the American Bar Association and Ralph Nader's Aviation Consumer Action Project, President Ford issued an executive order in June whereby C.A.B. decisions would be made public five days after they were submitted to the Presi-dent, subject only to dele-tions required by considerations of national security.

Thus, in the C.A.B. trans-Atlantic route proceeding, we know for the first time what the board thinks before knowing what the President

Moreover, if the President whether Mr. Ford or a successor-wants to modify. the award, he will be under constraint to make his reasoning explicit, and to base it on foreign affairs or de-fense considerations.

One may hope, although not predict, that this time the President—whoever he is will this time take up the opportunity for leadership thrust upon him by the British and the C.A.B.

The board, in its 3-to-1 decision, essentially adapts the techniques for domestic route decisions to the international area:

Pan Am wasn't serving the Scandinavian countries well. so we'll put on Northwest instead; but we need Pan Am in Poland and the Soviet Union, so we'll let it keep Copenhagen to support the Warsaw/Moscow route, and we won't let Northwest serve New York-Copenhagen; Atlanta deserves service to London, and Delta has its base there, so Delta gets that route; but this may divert traffic from Pan Am's Wasbington-London route, so we'll give Pan Am the right to serve Houston and Dallas-London. A few more termi-nals for T.W.A. . . . and so

The board plays with fig-ures — anticipated traffic growth, operating costs, yield per mile and traffic diversion. But deep down it must know that projections of this kind are worth very little even in the domestic context, where many of the famous "other things" are

In a world of inflation and recession, of volatile fuel costs and fluctuating exchange rates, of irrational and unenforceable fare struc-tures—not to speak of the changing desires of foreign governments — the projec-tions used to justify the board's decision are unreal

But the fallacy of misplaced concreteness covers over a greater failing. The board as its chairman John E. Robson points out in an unusual dissent, has no real concept. It is simply tinkering with a system it has gotten used to, and the pattern of the past would call for the President to tinker a bit more -perhaps with later figures or sharper analyses; possibly in response to campaign contributions, off-the-record adwith heightened public sensitivity to undue influence and now sunlight on the President's role, the tempiation may wall be to stay out tion may well be to stay out of this can of worms com-pletely, paying tribute to the orderly processes of administrative action. But while such a step would be consistent with post-Watergate moral-ity, it would be quite incon-sistent with sound long-term international transport poli-

The most likely scenario would be for the British to reject the new American services to London, and for the United States to withdraw these proposals in return for British withdrawal the denunciation of the Bermuda agreement. Possibly there would be a "sweetener" in the shape of informal agreement to tolerate capacity controls, with some under-standing on numbers, none on principles.

The Byzantine maze of fares and routes especially demand an overhaul-and the opportunity is here.

A very different scenario-would be preferable. The President should state that he cannot act on the transAtlantic route case until negotiations with the British have been completed, and that these negotiations must not be limited by the C.A.B.'s decision in that case.

Further, the President should state that, as in 1946, the negotiations with the British would be looked on as a model for negotiations with other countries—essentially on a most-favored-nation basis.

Finally, he should announce that the United States would not necessarily stand fast in defense of Be muda, but would explore all of the issues of international civil aviation in the light of current and future condi-

For instance, the relation between charter and scheduled transport — not dealt with at all at Bermuda—must be faced; the relation be-tween point-to-point routes and area-wide markets may well indicate quite different distribution of operating rights; the role of the International Air Transport As-sociation in setting fares needs re-examination in light of both competition law and the fact that existing fare didn't matter so much then But the British ar on whose airlines the tourists would arrive. Later, it was felt, the airlines could slug it out competitively.

The British Government now feels the Bermuda agreement has encouraged the airlines to put too much capaci-ty, particularly on North Atlantic routes where most carriers are losing money. (Swissair, West Germany's Lufthansa and Scandinavia's SAS are notable exceptions.)

The British maintain that restricting the number of North Atlantic flights would not only belp even out market shares but also eoable each nation's airlines to fly more profitably. This in turn would ease the continual pressure from loss-making carriers for higher fares and promote the growth of air travel, so the argument goes.

The irony is that no one involved seems to be losing money on the British-American run itself. British Airways actually made about $3 mil-lion on that route last year and Pan Am, while refusing to be specific, said its British flights were in the black. T.W.A. refused comment, but industry sources indicate it too at least broke even on the ronte. It's the other North Atlantic runs, then, that appear to account for T.W.A.'s $6.2 million and Pan Am's $12.4 million of red ink last year on European business. And British Airways lost $17 million last year not because of the competitive North At-lantic routes but rather in the the highly cartellized inter-European market.

Also, Britain's overall share of North Atlantic traffic has been rising, while that of the American lines is declining.

But British officials say the improvement is too slow at a time when the Government is trying to end its subsidies state-owned industries such as British Airways. And they note that most governments in the world already insist on equal shares, reflecting the fact that most non-American airlines are state-owned and regarded as symbols of national prestige.

Thus, on many international air routes, perhaps most strikingly in Europe where distances are short and protective tradition strong, competing airlines operate under pool agreements and share revenues and expenses. This removes any incentive for one carrier to increase its market share, at the expense of another, by putting on additional capacity.

with 28 different airlines now flying these routes, the competition has become destructive. Their stated objective is to reduce the number of flights between Britain and the United States until each is 70 percent full on average. So far this summer, Pan Am and British Airways say their planes have been close to 60 percent full. That is about 10 percent better than the British Government's earlier forecasts and probably reflects the American economic upturn coupled with the relative cheapness of a British vacation, thanks to the sinking pound. All the same, this still means that the equivalent of about eight jumbo jets are flying empty between Britain and the United States every day.

One problem is that the Administration is clearly

The U.S. must tread a line between its commitment to free enterprise and the needs of its airlines.

caught between conflicting

First, the legislation that created the C.A.B. in 1938 specifically exempted international routes from that agency's regulatory power by subjecting C.A.B. decisions on these matters to Presidential review. Thus, political factors invariably come into play — domestic pressure groups may need placating or a foreign ally, coddling. Then too, there is the Administration's ideological commitment to free enterprise, as against the major airlines' disenchantment with interoational competition. Considering the losses Pan Am and T.W.A. have racked up on the North Atlantic routes, it is oot surprising that the British proposals are getting a rather sympathetic hearing from the industry here. And in the end, it is tha health of such companies that American negotiators must protect.

tling its owner to huy 100 shares of an underlying stock at a stipulated price, known as the striking price, for a fixed period of time. Thus, an "Avon October 45," translated from optimese, gives its owner the right to pur-chase 100 shares of Avon Products et $45 each until this call expires automatical-

Early last week, when Avon stock was at $47 a share on the Big Board, one could buy that right for $400 (plus commissions)—meaning that you bet the then-$200 differential between the exercise and current market prices of the underlying stock would widen considerably by Oct. 16.

In such a case, profits are usually realized by selling the option as it rises to reflect the stock's rise. The question of whether options affect stacks flares anew with the expiration of

In January of this year, when the general market was strong, some people said that option expirations gave an added lift to stock prices. (Others argued there was no relationship.) Again, when the market was flat in April and down slightly in July, options were cited in some quarters as a causative factor.

And if the question is a hot one now, it's hound to get hotter in 1977 after the S.E.C. allows trading, perhaps in May, of put options, which give the owner the right to sell 100 shares of a given stock at a given price over a fixed period.

That, presumably would only add fuel to the already explosive growth of options and to the fears of critics that the volatile market is siphnning off venture capi-tal. The S.E.C.'s Mr. Hills announced a week ago Friday that he would seek a formal study of the market, focusing on whether it hinders the effective use nf investment capital. Options volume on calls alone has soared to the point where last month alone, a total of 1,865,238 contracts traded on the C.B.O.E., representing more than 186 million shares of underlying stock. At the Amex, July volume amounted to 727,479 contracts, representing more than 72 million underlying Meanwhile, the C.B.O.E.

faced with an embarrassment of attention, has done its own option-impact studies. One, focusing on the two weeks prior to the January 1976 expirations it found that 46 option stocks accounted for 14.4 percent of total Big Board volume in that period, compared with 14.3 percent in 1975 and 12.8 percent a full year before the C.B.O.E. was established.

While those percentage variations involve large dullar amounts, the C.B.O.E. deemed them not "statistically significant." "Nn simple channel of influence appears to exist be-tween aprims trading and stock price behavior." the On Wall Street, however, there are professionals who maintain that option activity can indeed influence the at times, and does. Herbert M. Altman, a trader with the Amex floor firm of Jackson and Segal, gives prices of underlying stocks or Jackson and Segal, gives this assessment:

"If the stock market's trend is up, the options can accentuate the up move in the last 10 days prinr to expiration. The opposite holds true in a down market."

Offering specific examples, the trader noted that in last month's easing market the options tended to "rivet" certain stocks close to the striking, or exercise, price for a ing, or exercise, price for a brief period.

Thus, on the final option trading day of July 16 Merrill Lynch's stock closed at 25½ on the Big Board, or a small fraction above the striking price of the Merrill July 25. Similarly, Greyhound's stock closed that day at 15½ or only ½ above at 15½, or only ½ above the striking price of the Greyhound July 15.

A week earlier, both stocks had traded somewhat higher. Interestingly ennugh, both stocks have since held to their $25 and $15 levels despite a declining market.

Theo again, James W. Carpenter, manager of the op-tion department at Spencer Trask & Company, a Big Board member firm, says:

"If a stock has been declining and there are in-themoney calls near expiration date, the existence of these calls would acceptuate the decline in the stock because of arbitrage." A call is in the money when the price of the stock is enough above the striking price so that the option represents actual value. What happens in the example offered by Mr. Carpenter is that an arbitrage firm will huy calls from their previous owners at a slight discount—perhaps 1/3 nr 1/4 point — and simultaneously sell that stock short on the Big Board with the aim of profiting by that fractional price difference. The process of shorting stock creates "new supply" for that issue on the Big Board trading

floor and thus exerts some downward pressure tempor-taining his shares through the Options Clearing Ex-change from the original call writer and uses these shares to cover his short position. Ralph Charell, who once headed an over-the-couoter firm on Wall Street, is an experienced and, by his own eccount, a profit-making practioner of options. The author of "A Great New Way To Make Money," published recently by Stein and Day, Mr. Charell said io an interview that "the whole apparatus tends to create

ligher prices for those stocks with underlying options." His rationale is that institutions more and more will tend to invest in these stocks and then write, or sell, options against them as a way to improve their market performance. At a large investment firm, the head of the options department dismisses the whole question of whether options wag stocks as irrelevant.

The market is a living. breathing thing," he maintains, of which options are a part. As such, they have brought in a greater number of participants and, by so doing, tended the reduce the volatility of underlying

Still, the company's future has its uncertainties. A.T.&T., state utility regulators, independent phone companies and members of Congress insist companies such as MCI should be eliminated.

Mr. Crosland of the Bell System argues that if competition is allowed to creep in, then the long tradition of low rates for home phone users will go because they are subsidized by the long distances services, among others. "With respect to our ability to continue to exist, of course, we aren't worried," says Mr. Crosland, "that is, if we are allowed to compete fully and freely. We're not opposed to their presence but the philosophy they repre-

And chances are you've got your gameplan for the future pretty well mapped out.

It may include investments for a reliable source of income. Conservative estate growth. Aggressive asset development. Generous retirement income.

Most likely, your investment goals are a special mix of several elements. A highly personal com-bination geared to your future. And yours alone.

There's just one thing:

Are you letting your money in on the plan? Does your portfolio reflect a coordinated program to achieve your objectives, or is it a potpourti of miscellaneous holdings amassed over the years?

Do you or your current financial advisor weigh your specific future goals when considering an investment? Or are you merely a number,

One way to find out for sure is by sitting down with your Investment Management Advisor at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., Inc. -the organization that pioneered "money management for the individual investor" nearly a decade ago.

He's more than just an investment expert. He's someone who will provide the one-to-one attention a substantial investor like yourself really deserves. He'll carefully analyze your present financial status. Take into consideration your personal lifestyle. And help you crystallize your financial needs at various stages down the road.

Based on this review, your personal portfolio manager will design a sensible investment strategy to get

The bottom line is this: As a Bernstein "discretionary account," your portfolio enjoys two extraordinary benefits. First, all investment decisions made on your behalf are targeted to your specific financial strategy... deliberately designed to meet your unique goals.

And second, those decisions are reached by a full-time professional. A highly experienced individual whose finger is on the pulse of current trends; whose personal responsibility it is to make sure your portfolio is "in tune" with today's financial marketplace and continually working to meet your objectives. And because he is also one of the owners of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., Inc., you're always assured of diligent, top-level attention.

These distinct advantages are usually reserved for large institutional investors. But Bernstein believes you, the prominent private investor, deserve no less.

"I can remember coming out of long meetings with him and though he had piled all kinds of work on me, I wanted to do it. He has a way of motivating people to do tasks."

Mr. Phillips was also in the right place at the right time when a Raytheon management shakeup created a vacuum for a new executive vice president, then the company's No. 2 man. Three years later, at 40, Mr. Phillips took the title of president and four years after that, became the company's chief executive officer, the No. 1 spot. Just a year ago, he also got the title of chairman.

On his way to the top, Mr. Phillips met up with some interesting personalities. One was Harold S. Geneen, who stepped out of Raytheon and up to the charimanship of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. Another was the late Richard E. Krafve, the executive vice president, who had come to Raytheon fresh from the collapse of Ford Motor Company's Edsel division. Once in top management at Raytheon,

Mr. Phillips gave up electronic diagrams and drafted circuit boards to concentrate on a plan of diversification into commercial industries via acquisitions. The results: In 1964, when he became president, Raytheon had sales of $454 million, 85 percent coming from government contracts. Today it is a $2.2 billion company with a 45 percent government, 55 percent commercial mix. Mr. Phillips is now aiming at cutting the government share to 35 percent or less.

"The government business is too volatile to stake all one's hopes on," he commented. "Right now, defense contracting is up because it is widely recognized that the Russian strength is getting dangerously high relative to ours. This wasn't believed two years ago." has engineered are three energy-related

He also added two kitchen appliance companies—the Caloric Corporation and Amana Refrigeration Inc., noted for its radar range oven-plus D.C. Heath, a textbook publisher and the Iowa Manufacturing Company, a maker of beavy road construction machinery.

The Hawk missile project, which kept the company growing despite some thin years in the late 1950's and early 1960's, is without question the company's most successful piece of military hardware. It is the only short-range, low-altitude interceptor used in the United States. It was also used heavily by North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries during the cold war. Hawk alone has brough in more than $3.5 billion in contracts

Raytheon also has a government contract for research and development on the SAM-D, Patriot missile that is scheduled to replace Hawk in the 1980's.

One day sitting in his office, Mr. Phillips heard that Charles Colson was returning to private legal practice after the wreckage of the Watergate days, and would be once again doing work for Raytheon. This struck Mr. Phillips as exactly what Raytheon did not need

Mr. Phillips recalled: "I first didn't like the idea at all that Colson was going to come back. I became very rebellious. But 1 could find no peace with that kind of attitude. Then I thought—maybe this fellow needs a friend."

He got one, as retold in Mr. Colson's recent best-selling autobiography "Born

As Colson tells it: "When I entered his office it was the same old Tom, athletic build, stripped down to shirtsleeves as always. But the smile was a lot warmer, radiant, in fact, and he looked more relaxed than I had ever in short, Mr. Colson commented in a recent interview, "he led me to Christ. What had happened in his life, became a model in my own."

As Mr. Phillips explained his own conversion, "The success came, all right, but something was missing. I felt a terri-ble emptiness. There was a big hole in my life. I began to read the Scriptures, looking for answers. Something made me realize I needed a personal relation-

The thing that guides me now as a businessman is to be a good steward. God gave me both this position of managing the resources of this company and of the men that are entrusted to work with me. And if you look at it as a steward you can be kind of easy about things even if you are working

And how does "Mr. Hawk" view his role as e producer of deadly machinery? Mr. Phillips insists that Raytheon's mis-siles are strictly for defense, designed to destroy attacking planes in the air.

"I think every nation has a right to provide for its own common defense. I make no apologies for that," he says. "But I do view with some misgivings the wide proliferation of all kinds of arms in the Middle East."

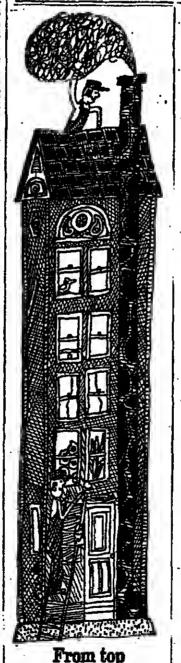

"When I heard that the United States was willing to supply Jordan with a defense system, I really couldn't believe it. But looking at the total strategic picture, if we don't supply them, Russian influence is going to get in there." To some, the line between an airborne defensive system-which after all can offer cover, say, for offensive ground action—and an offensive system may appear thin indeed But Mr. Phillips sticks by his definition. "If I thought we were providing provocative or offensive arms," he says, then I would feel at an impasse as erai Government there is the crucial additional factor of the Congressional authorization process and the enactment of various entitlement bills, which are more important than appropriations in determining the upward sweep of spending. In food stamps and veterans benefits, for example, the basic legislation creates an entitlement to benefits, and spending follows automatically.

This is why many observers of the spending process here believe that the main hope for change and more control lies in the Sun-set legislation in Congress rather than in a new Zero-Base system in the executive branch

The first and leading spon-sor of Sunset is Senator Edmund S. Muskie, Democrat of Maine. He has believed in it for years but his sense of urgency increased as a result of his role as chairman of the new Budget Committee, part of the Congressional budget reform program of 1974 and fully in effect just this year. This provides for the first time a mechanism by which Congress sets binding spend-ing ceilings on itself. Mr. Muskie is also chairman of the Government Operations subcommittee that drafted the Sunset bill approved last week. The Committee report on the bill noted "the vast number and complexity of Federal programs," the great increase in the portion of spending that is "uncontrollable" without a change in law, and the "rapid growth in the number of Federal programs with and concluded:

"These factors threaten to seriously undermine the success of the most important Congressional reform in recent years, the new budget process, by continually reduc-ing the room in the budget for discretionary decisions which enable Congress to meet changing national prior-

In the House, the lead has been taken by Representatives James J. Blanchard, Democrat of Michigan and Norman Y. Mineta, Democrat of California, though there are now more than 100 cosponsors of the Sunset reform legislation. Mr. Blanchard said recently that "the chard said recently that "the basic concept we are trying to achieve is important: to somehow ensure that every Federal spending program is subject to thorough question-ing and complete evaluation on a regular basis."

"Obviously," be added, "Americans are gradually be-coming more and more skep-tical about the effectiveness and the responsiveness of their government."

Like the Budget Reform Act, the Sunset legislation is a complicated and technical reform in Congressional pro-cedure, though its purpose is simple enough. And although the spirit of reform is clearly in the air, the legislation faces obstacles, mainly the obstacle of time, at least for this year.

The bill cleared by the Senate Government Operations Committee must still be approved by the Rules Com-mittee before floor consideration. In the House, bearings have been held by the Rules Committee and the new Budget Committee, with the Rules Committee having ju-risdiction. There is still no indication of early approval by the Committee, although it could happen. It may be that Sunset would not achieve its purpose of weeding out the bad to make more room for the good. Beneficiaries of even programs widely regarded as neffective do not like to give them up. Only experience will show whether the change will be effective. But based on the experience of many Presidents to date, a President Carter probably would not achieve a great deal by a change in the budget review process in the executive branch unless there were some parallel reform in Con-gress.

...Not only for high current income but long-term capital growth potential too

It is not at all surprising that many knowing investors are now looking into utility stocks with intensifying interest.

For this particular group of stocks, the bear market started way back in 1965, when the Dow Jones utility index began a 9-year decline that erased nearly 65% of its value. During the same period, however, the net income and dividends of some of these stocks have followed an upward course.

The result of these cross-trends is that a number of stocks in this power group now yield over 8.5%. But high yields alone are not enough, says T.J. Holt. (For instance, a stock with shaky earnings and dividends should sell on a high-yield basis.) What investors should look for now, Holt advises, are rich yields of up to 10% that are also clearly supported by (a) reasonable assurance that the current dividend rates are safe, (b) a long-term record of past earnings and dividend growth, and (c) solidly based prospects for future dividend hikes.

Power Play

Without doubt, the industry has been confronted by many problems, including rising fuel cost, regulatory and environmental red tape, and lofty interest rates. However, we believe the worst is over. In many cases, the stocks amply discount the remaining problems. Moreover, the developments have begun to help-not hurt—the industry.

Specific Recommendations

Holt's latest report on the Electric Utility Industry carefully documents why we think the worst is over for the industry and why unusual opportunities have emerged in this group. It also presents a list of eight attractive utility stocks, four of which are specifically recommended for current purchase. Are you risking your money by playing it safe?

Most people look upon savings accounts as being pretty safe. Risk-free. Yet when you consider the perils of inflation—a sky-rocketing cost of living—you may come to realize that the eventual return on your savings may not be enough to cover your future needs. As an alternative, consider the Oppenheimer Concept of Lifetime Money Management. Comprised of five different portfolios representing five different ways to put your money to work. It means you can be as aggressive or as conservative with your money as you like, depending on your own personal needs. That in turn increased the value of the Saint Laurent label which is attached to a variety of prodocts—from womeo's and men's readymade clothing and accessories to perfumes and table linens. Worldwide sales of those products under franchise agreements totaled $200 million in the last 12 months. million in the last 12 months, of which a rather impressive $45 million, wholesale, was in men's fashions in the United States.

Without ready-to-wear and all, Yves Saint Laurent prohably wouldn't be able to stay in busioess. His haute couture doesn't make mooey, it costs money. The lavisb July 28 collection, for example, took more than a balf-million dollars to produce and the whole couture operation has grossed only $2 million in the last 12 months.

But the profits from every thing else marketed under the designer's name are "healthy, clean and solid;" according to Pierre Bergé, 45, Mr. Saint Laurent's closest friend, alter ego, and business manager.

Mr. Bergé is the one who single-handedly built up the Saint Laurent empire after the designer, "an artist and dreamer" according to friends, left the house of Christian Dior to strike out on his own.

In Paris, Saint Laurent has about 750 faithful cus-tomers for made-to-order only 3,000 clients oow, according to trade sources, against 15,000 just after World War II.

Despite the customer shrinkage, however, the pre-valent mood in high fashion here is cheerful Last year, the couture business was up 15 percent, with total revenues of $1.5 billion (including perfume and accessories).

Jaques Mouclier, head of the cooture federation, expects another 15 percent gain this year.

And support appears available when occded.

Last January, the export-minded French Government came up with $500,000 of public money through its Institute for Industrial Development to keep the house of Pierre Balmain alive.

The sales of Dior alone, it might be noted, outstrip those of all the French automakers combined in the big American market. "I discovered an extraordinarily fragile house," said Claude Potier, 48, a former French banker who joined Balmain in 1974 and organized the rescue operation. "Sales were almost entirely from haute couture."

With the infusion of export-oriented capital, (baks and private investors put up another $2 million), the House of Balmaio began to follow the example of other French conturiers, diversify-

The F.T.C. Seeks to Destroy Big Business...

By WILLIAM E, LAMOTHE

There is a lack of trust, a bias, a negative feeling in our Government. It's an antitrusting attitude that has pervaded our Federal regulatory agencies and appears to have started them oo a binge of negativism and destruction. It's a "we-don't-trust-yoo" notico that can lead to the same abuse of power and injustice, the same excesses manifested in Today, one of those mistrustful agencies, the Federal Trade Commission, is quietly launching one of the broadest, most massive and most expensive attacks by Government oo corporations ever undertaken in America. And it's all rooted in mistrust, a blatant hlinding mistrust of America's most outstanding resource—the efficient and successful business enterprise.

Evidence that government is stepping up its attack on American business is everywhere. In his 1974 ecocomic message, President Ford asked for floes of $1 million for antitrust violations. In 1975 the Supreme Court slapped a $1,000-a-day fine on a corporatioo that is estimated to run into millions. Budgets have risen sharply for the antitrust activities of the Justice Department and F.T.C. Every day we read of some new effort by the F.T.C. to pull out of corporate America a corpus delicti, the evidence that a crime has heen committed. What crime? What charges? Are the Commission's efforts preceded by evidence of something afoul? No. Are these expeditions for evidence founded oo anything more than presumptions of guilt? No. Take the receot demand the F.T.C. made of the advertising industry. The commission subpoenaed eight major ad agaocies to submit a mountain of materials, everything they've produced since last May. Was there a charge of some wrongdoing? No. Conspiracy? No. It was simply a case of "give me the evidence so I can iodict you for anything you might have doos that I'll find oot aboot," with the potential defendant's belp, of course,

Take the case of the F.T.C.'s recently ordering six tobacco companies to supply it all the market research the companies cooducted during the past 12 years. Whether you smoka or don't smoke, you might wonder if the F.T.C. is empowered by Congress to cut cigarette sales. It isn't.

And now take the unprecedented casa against my industry, the cereal industry, the .T.C.'s most ambitious project by far. The F.T.C. accuses the major manufacturers of breakfast cereals of being what the commission terms, a "shared mooopoly." It seeks to break us up, strip away our plaots, force us to set up oew companies to which we'd , have to give the exclusive right to make some of our most successful products. Rice Krispies and Special K. Furthermore, wa would bave to license the formula and trademark for every Kellogg cereal to anyone who wants to use them free of charge. And what did we do to be standing io the shadow of this guillotine? What are we accused of doing wrong? Nothing, We're oot heing accused of doing anything, hut of being something. That's right. They're accusing us of belog a shared monopoly which is their novel theory that a handful of companies can cootrol a market even though there is no overt conspir-

The cereal industry is not charged with committing a single specific illegal act, but has been hauled loto court because only four companies sell most of the cereal in this country. The F.T.C. claims that's too concentrated. Conceotrated. That's another term they use. They claim that our "conceotratioo ratio" is

It's a figure, a perceotage, that shows what fractioo of an entire industry's production and sales is attained by a limited number of companies. In other words, if 80 percent of the business of an lodustry is done by four companies only, the four firm coocentratioo ratio for that industry is 80 percent. They say ours is 90 perceot. That's very interesting because it shows that our industry is acting like must of the mature industries in America. According to the latest Bureau of the Census report, the four firm concentration ratio of industries from light hulbs to haking powder is way

In recent days the motives of the staffs of two Government regulatory agencies have been severely. criticized. In a statement printed below, William E. LaMothe, president of the Kellogg Company, attacked the Federal Trade Commission's new "shared monopoly" theory under which it is attempting to break up concentration in the breakfast cereal business.

In another case, David I. Kraushaar, an administrative law judge of the Federal Communications Commission, ruled last week that the long distance rates of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were reasonable and disagreed with an F.C.C. trial staff proposal on splitting A.T.&T.'s. manufacturing arm, the Western Electric Company from its parent.

By coincidence, the Federal Trade Commission also announced last week that it would begin a major antitrust investigation of the automobile industry. It is believed that the investigation is aimed, in part at least, at the General Motors Corporation, largest of the four American car makers.

un there. The window glass industry, for example, is 100 perceot coocentrated; household washers and dryers 83 percent; chewing gum 84 percent; baking powder 89 percent; automobiles 93 percent; electric light bulbs 90 percent; television sets 95 perceot; outboard motors 85 percent. And I can go oo and on. Have these other iodustries been charged with anything? No. The F.T.C. first has to wio its test case and that's against us, the cereal industry. What happens if it wins? If the F.T.C. can convince the courts of the validity of its shared monopoly theory, it can declare over half of all the industries io Americaproducing over two-thirds of our manufactured products-guilty and break all of them, and along with it the free market system.

What is also forehoding and ominous about this is that a regulatory agency of the executive branch is using the cereal case to pioneer antitrust legislation that Congress hasn't even passed. The Government is attacking concentration per se as they see it and a regulatory commission is attempting to legislate an en tirely new offense, this thing called a shared monopoly. There is no statute; no legal literature, not one adjodicated case, based on such an offense, in essence, there is no offense. hut the F.T.C., with its enormous power and enormous budget and its enormous staff, is usurping the legislative powers of Congress. It is preempting Congress, preempting the laws of this land and interpreting laws to suit un-American objectives. This is precisely what got the Nixon Administration into trok ble. And it's all related to mistrust a mistrust of America's corporate talent and ingenuity that has provided you and me with the best prodocts in the world, with jobs, with a future. A mistrust of skillful management and marketing techniques that are emulated throughout the world, mistrust of what sadly is becoming a great embarrassment in America, the embarrassment of success, a quality that seems to irritate a big hungling bureaoc-

Why the cereal industry? Why were we singled out? It is documented that one of the primary reasons the cereal industry was singled out for this unprecedented case was because it was presumed we lacked political clout. That's right. We were literally picked because we were thought to be politically weak. Well, we're working oo our clout and that's why I'm asking you this questioo: What. happens if our industry is splintered, brokeo up because it is found guilty, guilty of success, guilty of making wholesome products, guilty of providing one of the best nutritional huys in America, guilty of succeeding in a system that has up till now rewarded success, not punished it, guilty of working and achieving within a system that has provided the incentive for us to grow and develop and become the greatest country on earth. Success. We're not ashamed of it. We're not embarrassed by it. Wa don't feel guilty over it. And we don't think it's a crime. And neither should you. Neither should America.

Now, there's a fiction, a fantasy, a simplemindedness growing in this land of ours that somehow breaking up the nation's large corporations will result in lower prices, that somehow this would he good for the consumer, that fractionating corporate America, compelling its leading corporations toward a costly, wasteful time-consuming and contentious breakup is going to benefit coosumers. Nothing can be further from reality the truth.

It is no wonder that divestiture a rarely make outright promises of low They know if it happened at all be only temporary.

Believe me, it just isn't realistic that the Government can fractionalis mes like the Big. Three automaker or 20 car makers. Apart from the of producing a car that is going : all, the cost of producing a car in sm facturing units would be astronomi the days of Henry Ford, we've les mass production lowers the price When production lags and overhead same the price per item must rise that overhead. Even today, with if materials, labor and energy going after year, we have quite a job tryir the price of a box of cereal in son to what's left in the average pay if the F.T.C. forces us to give up i marketing, the price of all of those has to go up. And that's certainly w happen if they broke up the cerea .

I don't really believe that wil ... American common sense is too well to allow the takeover of an indus .. Government under the name of "fos enterprise." But if we have to all the way to the Supreme Com : that from happening to the cerea. With companies like Kellogg's, Ger General Foods, Quaker Oats, Raisto and Pet in a single industry the be competition, and there is en morning all over America. Don't force on you the notion that he there are nnly a few companies io ... that they're not competitive. That myth that should be kicked out inti-

And What Is the F.C.C. Advocating?

The following remarks are excerpted from the decision of David I. Kraushaar, Federal Communications Commission administrative law judge, in the A.T.&T. case.

The Presiding Judge bas carefully reviewed the evidence of record and is simply unable to agree with the Staff that any conclusions of sinister implications in Western's pricing methods are a "reasonable interpretation" of tha evidence or the testimony. In the first place, there does oot appear to be anything sinful about the management's obvious efforts to attain a targeted overall rate of return. Indeed, apart from the existence of government regulation in a semi-monopolistic economic environment, the profit motive provides a useful incentive in itself for efficient

To a great extent the cooclusions of the staff appear to be the a priori conclusions of an advocate rather than objective, non-partisan viewpoints of one with oo axe to grind.

Nor did it Ithe F.C.C. Trial 5taffl seem to be able to distinguish between the theoretical and what is practicable both administratively and politically.

It will surely be noted, therefore, that if it is oecessary for government to secondguess Bell's management in nearly every instance, as the Commission's Trial Staff has dooe in this very case, the statutory concept nf privately owned and operated public utilities in the communications field might as well be adjudged an utter failure. For if government regulators are to substitute in hindsight their collective judgments for the management's, they might as well—perhaps more expeditiously—take the company over and manage it for themselves. Fortunately, the law as interpreted by the highest court of the land is against the Trial Staff in this

It occurs to the Presiding Judge, at the very outset of this discussion (Prudence or Waste in Electronic Switching Systems), that once again one is being presented here with an ex post facto denunciation of Bell management for alleged wastefulness, for undue haste in developing this important—and tech-nologically marvelous—switching system and that, in effect, Bell management is being thrust between the Scylla of dning too little and the Charybdis of doing too much, i.e., damned either way.

The remainder of the Staff's criticisms of Bell's second study on savings from E.S.S. continues the "debunking operation" in the form of argument wherein the Staff seems to be pretending that it somehow has better judgment on how to run the company than A.T.&T.'s management has. It is in tine a

The fact of the matter is that in nearly every instance wherein tha Staff challenged

The Trial Staff's economist, however, did not explain how Western could be divested from tha Bell Systam without either losing the econnmies of its present operations or creating a dominant and unregulated profitmaximizing firm.

Counsel for the Trial Staff indicated that in many instances the Staff's inquiries had revealed no evidence supporting any adjust-ment of Bell's reported figures, and that the results of such investigations would oot be placed nn the record.

In response to a request by the Administrative Law Judge, the Trial Staff and the Bell System reported their costs of participation in Phase II (of the case). Through June 1975 of condemnation.

'The Staff seems to be pretending that it somehow has better judgment on how to run the company than A.T.&T.'s management has.'

Bell expenditures and rate base items these were derived from company accounting records maintained in accordance with this Commission's Uniform System of Accounts, which have never been completely and thoroughly overhauled in the more than 40 years of this Commission's existence. The government has no business taking a citizen out nn the proverbial limb and then cutting it

Beyond the plain illegality and absurdity of the Trial Staff's approach in this case, which would fault A.T.&.T.'s management on practically every rate base and revenue requirement item and impose huge total disallowances, it must be concluded from the evidence of record that in all instances cited hy the Staff, A.T.&T.'s management has either acted reasonably and responsibly (if all those actions are not gauged from tha vantage point of hindsight) or received the past acquiescence or approval of this Commission nr its staff as part of the "continuing surveillance" of the past ball century.

the estimated costs were $4,000,000 for the Trial Staff and $5,939,000 for the Bell System.

The Commission's Trial Staff has referred to service problems lo a number of cities where unexpected rates of telephone growth had hurdened existing local exchange facilities. But no claim hes been advanced during the hearing that the telephone demand forecasting and other facility planning techniques that have been used by the Bell System were unreasonable or that service problems, nuce they materialized, could have been eliminated more effectively or in shorter intervals.

The General Department of A.T.&T. employing a large staff in New York City, has the responsibility primarily of funding tha basic research activities of Bell Labs and of providing advice and assistance to the Bell operating telephona companies. It was charged by the Trial Staff with poor performance leading to "waste and inefficiency," and also with attempting to impede the sale of general trade products to the Bell System by "programs and policies of resistance" and by tional changes designed to improve :. marketing abilities. The Presiding Jever, is persuaded that in this in Staff has extracted data from the tends to support its criticisms while ... ignoring facts that are favorable in formance record of the General I . The Staff. . . relied upon m . nal Bell criticisms . . . to support it conclusioos. . . seemingly overlo . (favorable to Bell) conclusions. Presiding Judge must agree with such outspoken internal reviews cisms, that management has invited couraged over the years, are to 10 applauded as evidence in itself (management and not be used as

There is unrebutted testimony o this proceeding that the nriginal Attorney of the Trial Staff (who a time was Deputy Chief of the Co-Common Carirer Bureau) had an "i bias" against Bell from the incept Staff's investigation and that the of the employment of Touche Ross. to this witness, was presented the terms of the oeed to produce $5 of disallowances "to offset the rate increases recently granted to A.T "disallowance question came up many meetings" and the witness was told that a particular finding c. be used because "there is no disal This testimony was elicited by constance of the Presiding Judge lieved that the full, embarrassing factors he disclosed after the witness had. earlier regarding the relationship (Ross and the Trial Staff.

Earlier the same witness had test he had "no doubt in my mind" that had "some preconceived ideas that " verse to the Bell System," which 's or its Managing Attorney, wanted the to verify. No evidence was ever at dispute the veracity of this testimor ... Judge's opinion, this certainly raises concerning the proper role of an staff counsel in conducting ao inve in this type of proceeding and of the mate limits of advocacy of the Staff.

Mr. Gibbons Comes Back to Woolworth's

Edward F. Gibbons, a 56 year old executive with an occasional twinkle in his eye and a financial background, was recently appointed president of F. W. Woolworth Company, one of America's largest retail chains.

On the surface, there was nothing unusual about tha appointment except that in Mr. Gibbons's case it was the second time around.

He first became president of Woolworth in March 1975, the first outsider in decades to move to the top there. But be resigned after only three mooths because of poor health. After hospital-ization, medical tests and six months of recuperation, he came back as a part-time advisor to Woolworth last September. On July 14 be became Woolworth's president again, having fully re-gained bis health—and his job—an unusual feat sioce oormally few executives win

Instead of being given the typical president's job of running the company on a day-to-day basis while Lester A. Burcham, the chairman and chief executive officer, pursues the loog-range policy-making responsibility, Mr. Gibbons has been charged with crystal ball-

"It is the deepest and most most widespread five yeer plan Woolworth has ever attempted," says Mr. Gibbons.

Woolworth is one of the retail industry's most diversified companies with only about one-third of its 5,270 stores in the variety-store field. Mr. Gibbon's project is geared to growth primarily from inside the company. We aren't actively looking for any acquisitions,"

Yet, Woolworth is hardly alone in its broad-scale scrutiny. At least a balf dozen other giant retailers are now deeply involved in sweeping self-examination. Among them are said to be Sears Roebuck, J. C. Penney and Montgomery Ward—the three big catalogue and general merchandise chains—as to the business of selliog services. Factors behind the unusual self-examination of these companies include:

The severe inventory glut of lete 1974 and early 1975 that was one of the worst depressants on retail earnings in years.

warning shock wave through-out retailing. "A decade ago, we could look out into the industry, and see a Grant that was as solid and seemingly durable as any com-

Merchandising problems at Sears Roebuck, the country's biggest retailer, and consequent profit difficulties have caused ripples that touched every level of the retailing business. To the Financial Editor:
The article "Arthur Andersen: Combat Among the Footnoies" (July 25) briefly referred to that firm's suit against the Securities and Exchange Commission. The concluding sentence was:
"The S.E.C. later changed its mind on the rule involved." That statement is not true.

The rule referred to, Accounting Series Release No. 146, was issued by the S.E.C. in August 1973. Following the filing by Arthur Andersen of its lawsuit in September 1973, the S.E.C. effectively suspended the implementation of the rule in October. 1973 by requesting public comments on it. Concurrent with the commission's action, Arthur Andersen withdrew its lawsuit.

In April 1974, after considering the public comments, the S.E.C. reissued the same rule as Accounting Series Release No. 146A substantially unchanged from the August 1973 version. I served as chairman of

THE ECONOMIC SCENE

Expand Now or Pay Later

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

SUBJECT that is bound to attract increased scrutiny and analysis among economists as the nation's economic recovery progresses is the question of the adequacy of current productive capacity in key American industries. It has bobbed up in a number of recent commentaries in the business world and is also drawing considerable attention in Washingtoo.

While this issue may be a bit too esoteric for public debate in the upcoming election campaign, it is a crucial. one in the effort to battle inflation and create new jobs - the basic objectives that will certainly produce e considerable amount of dialogue among the political cootenders this fall. Interest in this whole subject was heightened by last week's report that the unemployment rate jumped to 7.8 percent in July from 7.5 percent.

Is there enough effective productive capacity in the nation's major industries to avoid a recurrence of the 1973 shortages and bottlenecks that contributed so heavily to the severe inflationary pressures of that time? Is capacity being increased fast enough now? If oot, what ought to be done about the situation?

Political candidates could hardly be expected to raise those specific, specialized issues in their public campaigns, but they are pivotal issues that ought to be addressed in some way.

Some analysts, taking comfort largely in the apparent gap between overall industrial production and the estimated capacity levels in various industries, discount the fears of revived shortages of many goods in the near future, but others are becoming more skeptical. Purchasing agents are also becoming wary.

There is, however, general agreement in both camps that there has been a substantial slowing in the growth of industrial capacity in this country during the current decade, after the big expansion wave of the 1960's. And no one disputes the fact that business capital spending for new capacity has not increased during this economic recovery period—to this point, at least—by the same degree that it usually does after a recession.

However, there are doubts in some quarters about the reliability of estimates by the Government and others on current capacity-utilization rates in industry, and there are disputes about bow close some of the key industries, such as steel, chemicals, paper and textiles, have approached their realistic capacity levels.

Even Government officials themselves question the data on capacity utilization being put out by their own agencies. In a speech in San Francisco last June, Henry C. Wallich, a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, conceded that the Board'e data on its capacity and its utilization rates are "seriously

He confirmed reports that the Fed is "improving" its series on utilization rates and said that the new numbers in general "will show that we have substantially less imused capacity than indicated by the old series."

That is precisely what many economists have been contending for some time, especially those who bave maintained that the underlying inflationary pressures in the economy are greater than generally suspected.

According to the Fed's current series, manufacturing industries in this country operated et only 72 percent of capacity io the first quarter of this year. That figure, if accurate, would indicate that manufacturers were not running their available facilities much higher than the 68 percent operating rate that prevailed a year earlier, when the recession was in its trough,

However, that overall figure has masked what has been happening in the major segments of maoufacturing. such as steel and other metals, chemicals, paper and a few others, where the operating rate has advanced to more than 80 percent of capacity—a jump of about 16 percent in a year. In the boom of 1973-74, those Industries were running around 93 per ceot of capacity, virtually full-blast.

In its latest letter, the Harris Bank of Chicago, estimated that, by the end of this year or early in 1977, if the economic expansion does not falter, these industries will be running at nearly 90 percent of capacity. It said that steel operations have advanced from a 70 percent rate to nearly 90 perceot of capacity in the first half of this year alone.

sanwhile, for various reasons, there was a sharp decline in capital spending during the most recent recession and only a sluggish pickup since then. The drop in such

The Chicago bank and others have been warning that the weakness in the capital-spending sector of the economy will lower future capacity, slow the economic expansion and place upward pressure on prices in some important commodities.

The Harris Bank's commentary also noted:

"Major materiale play a crucial role in the price outlook. Severe upward price pressures developed in several key industries in 1973 and 1974 after operating rates reached 931/2 percent of capacity. Since capacity in major materials has been growing at an annual rate of only 4 percent for the last two years, rapid economic recovery could lead to a repeat of the inflation of 1973 and 1974 in these industries."

The bank estimated that the petroleum, paper and textile industries have scheduled increases of 15 percent or more in capital outlays for this year, while the increases in chemicals are placed at only 8 percent. It said that primary metals are actually planning to decrease such expenditures this year after substantial gains in

"Since it takes substantial time to augment capacity," the Chicago bank concluded, "it would appear that the nation will be fortunate if it is able to evoid inflationary pressures from shortages of basic materials in 1977."

Another report on rising capacity utilization was issued recently by Rinfret-Boston Associates, which found that 40 percent of American industries were operating above 85 percent of capacity in April of this year, compared with only 14 percent in July of last year.

"It is fair to say," the Rinfret report observed, "that toward the end of this year the number of industries operating above 85 percent will be significantly higher." Other economists, such as Norma Pace of the American Paper Institute and William C. Fraund of the New York Stock Exchange, have also warned about possible shortages and bottlenecks in some major industries before long if the pace of recovery continues along its recent path, as generally expected.

"Operating rates are moving up, and we're developing the etrength and the incentives that usually produce increased capital speoding," Mrs. Pace said, "but we won't get enough new tonnage in time to get to the growth targets to meet a full-employment economy. The primary industries will bottleneck early, making capacity excessive in the converting industries. The whole capacity situation should be reviewed in Washington. The numbers now available are certainly suspect."

In paper, she said, the primary operating rate "is probably around 92 percent now, close to capacity, which would be about 96 percent at the maximum."

In his expression of concern about industrial shortages and bottlenecks, inflationary pressures and employment, Mr. Freund stressed the need for increased capital investment, particularly through enlarged equity financing.

He said American industry would have to average more than $20 billion a year in such financing until 1985, or about 20 times the average done in the 1960's. The peak year for such financing was 1971, when the volume was $11.7 billion. After that, it fell off to only $4.1 billion in 1974, but came back to $9.9 billion last year.

Not all current economic commentary, of course, sub-scribes to the view that shortages and bottlenecks have to be feared in the near future. Economic Week, published by Citibank, for one, takes a less worrisome position on

"Admittedly," the publication said, "capacity data on an industry-by-industry basia leave much to be desired, but what data are available suggest that many basic industries have grown at least as rapidly, if not more so, than manufacturing as a whole. Unless the oatioo's needs for materials has increased relative to its need for finished products — a proposition no one has seriously offered - there is little reason to believe that pervasive shortages in basic materials will bamstring the economy." In some industries, it said, a swing toward foreign production raises ao additional point that argues against an early recurrence of shortages.

The debate on shortages is certain to heat up if the American economy continues to expand — in economic circles, for sure, if not in the political realm. The subject ought to be examined carefully - everywhere - in coming months.

CORPORATE EEO MANAGER

We have been retained by one of the major growth companies in the chemical industry to locate candidates for one of its key positions in the industrial Relations Department. Located in central New Jersay, you will be managing the corporation's total EEO/AAP effort, which would necassitate up to 50% travel. A thorough knowledge of lews & regulations and the ability to work effectively with federal and state regulatory agencies is required.

The ideal candidate will be basically a generalist but will have had considerable exposure in the employment and recruiting areas with a minimum of 10 years overall experience with the last 2-3 years in EEO activity at the cor-porate level of a large organization.

This is a new position which provides high visibility, full range of benefits and an excellent salary commensurate with experience. Please submit resume in confidence to:

KK 119 TIMES An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

One of the fastest growing U.S. divisions of this world-wide company has a high visibility position for an individual who is ready for greater challenges, initial assignment will be in the demanding new products area with direct involvement in long range planning and execution of consumer and trade promotions for specified brands.

If this sounds like your kind of challenge you should have a minimum of 2 to 3 years of direct knowledge in the develop-ment and implementation of strategically sound and innova-tive programs for high volume consumer packaged goods. Ability to communicate both verbally and in writing with all levels of management is essential.

So, if you desire to pursue a career in promotion planning in a sophisticated marketing environment, send your resume including salary history and requirements, in confidence to: Mr. Peter Dinella, J-129, Johnson & Johnson, 501 George Street, New Brunswick, N.J. 08903 similar causes, and that many others were ill. Legion nfficials notified the Pennsylvania health authorities and the Associated Preas on Monday

In addition to Pennsylvania health officers, teams of epidemiologists from the Federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta joined in the search, in all areas where the disease was reported. In midweek, more then 100 "health detectives were involved. They interviewed and examined all persons suffering from the diaease whose symptoms included chills, fevers as high as 108 degrees, and chest pains. Secretions, such as throat swabs, were sent to Atlanta and Philadelphia for testing, as were tissue samples from those who

The procedure. The most important possible causes to he investigated were bacterial infection, virua infection, fungus disease, and some toxin or poison to which the conventioneers might heve been exposed.

Of these possibilities, the first to be eliminated was bacteriel disease. Bacteria cao be quickly cultured in test tubes, and identified through ordinary microscopes. By Wednesday, most known bacteria had been ruled out.

By Thursday, Pennsylvania health officials said virologists had determinad that the ceuse was probably not Influenza virus, This finding took longer because viruses must be grown in living tissue, such as fertile eggs, it takes at least 48 hours to grow a culture, then to test it by seeing if it will cause red blood cells to clump together; if clumping occurs, a virus present. Clumping did not occur. (Federal officials have not yet entirely discounted the possibility that a slowacting virus is involved.)

Fungus diseases was ruled out es probable cause because grave fungus diseases geoerally take much longer to develop than the week or so during which the mystery disease rose to its peak of virulence. What remains. The health detectives are now concentratiog on the possibility that a poisoo or other toxic agent reached conventioneers in a manner as yet unknown. They have hegun a three-day investigation of nine hotels where the legionnaires stayed in Philadelphia, asking questions about such things as recent renovations, hreakdowns in the air-conditioning systems, spraying of paints and chemicals, changes in water or sewaga systems. The results of these investigations will take some time, because analysis for toxic ageots is more complicated than tha medical tests already performed.

At present there is only one known case of the disease in a person not directly associated with the convention, a bus driver who transported a drum and hugle corps to the meeting. So far as is known, ha naver entered any of the convention hotels or participated in any convention activities. The number of nonfatal cases went as high as 161, depending on the definition of the disease, but the official count was put at 112 vesterday as ogists revised the definition by limiting the scope of the symptoms. Dr. Bachman defined a case as one having tha presence of either a temperature of 102 degrees and a cough, or any fever and X-ray evidence of pneumorria in any person who had had any physical association with the American Legion convention (pnaumonia wes the immediate cause of death in most

It is possible the search will never identify tha real cause of the disease. At laast two recent cases of mysterious epidemics during July and August are still unsolved.

One of these was the non-falal "Pontiac fever" that struck 144 people, including Federal health detectives themselves, in the building of the Oakland County Health Department in Pontiac, Mich., in 1968. The illness was traced as far as the air-conditioning system, but the actual agent was never determined.

S. African Blacks Keep Demanding

New demonstrations involving large numbers of blacks, mostly young and all defying the orders of the South African Government and police guns, have occurred in Soweto, the huge ghetto outside all-white Johannesburg. The violent incidents appear to raise a vital question: Doea the Government have any answer but force to meet the demands of the black majority?

The response to last week's incidents -which iocluded arson and stoningwas along the same lines followed during and since the riots two months ego, when the police killed over 170 persons. Police lo armored cars this time shot over the heads of the demonstrators and used tear gas. But demands by the blecks for the release of students, detained without trial since the June demonstrations, were

The security police have also arrested four journalists, including one who was writing a book on the Soweto disturbances, causing new anxiety in press circles already severely restricted by a weh of legal restraints.

The Government of Prime Mioister John B. Vorster so far seems Intent on its policy of repression and refusal to negotiate on the demoostrators' demands. "We cannot allow our system of justice to fall to pieces to meet the demands of a handful of students," said the Police Commissioner, Gen. Gert Prinsloo.

port of the Government may be weakening, even if only slightly. In recent days, five of the country's most powerful Afrikaans newspapers heve urged varying degrees of reform to meet the blacks' demands.

The demographics of the Johanneshurg region emphasize the potential for violence. The 500,000 white residents of the city-where few blacks can live-are surrounded by 810,000 hlacks, en increesing number of whom now seem to share the militant attitudes of the demonstrators. Last week's violence began when black students tried to stop thousands of Soweto commuters from going to work in Johannesburg. Police intervened, and the students then tried to carry their protest about the detainees to the city itself. They were dispersed

hy police gunfire. The disturbance did, however, result in high absenteeism among blacks normally going to work in Johannesburg'a factories and offices, If that condition persists and grows, the city's whites as well as the Government may have another atrong reason to consider whether force will be the only answer to black aspirations.

In neighboring Rhodesia, another white supremacist regime also faces iocreasing violence. The Government of Prime Minister Ian Smith bas reported that black guerrilla forces from bases in Zambia are now operating in north-western Rhodesia, added to the earlier insurgency along the eastern frontier with Mozambique.

Hospital Accord —At a Price

New York City and its nonprofessional workers have negotiated a settiement of a four-day strike that recognizes the city's fioancial straits but also constitutes a display of classic union solidarity. The 18,000 largely unskilled strikers are giving up their cost of living increases in order to permit the city to rehire 1,350 union members who had been laid off, the action thet led to the walkout.

. The settlement will cost the atrikers as much as $450 each, a large sum since their average wage is about $9,000. Most are black and Puerto Rican, as are the patients in the hospitals they struck. The city's position was that it simply had no money; the workers said the layoffs would increasa the already substantial workload carried by those on the joh.

Tha cost-of-living increases are being given up for at least six months and possibly as long as two years, if the city can't find money any other way. The agreement also provides there will be no further lyoffs at least until January.

The Schweiker Surprise Alters the Calculations

By R. W. APPLE Jr.

WASHINGTON-The verdict in the political community on Rooald Reegan's choice of Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his prospective runoing mate has been a curious one. In the first five or six days after the California conservative made his selection—surely the most startling pick since John F. Kennedy chose Lyndon B. Johnson-the almost universal conclusion was that Mr. Reagan had committed hari-kari. But since then, the verdict has softened. and some now give him an outside chaoce.

The reason, of course, is that the primary audience to which the old actor was playing, the 2,259 delegates to the Republican National Convention, did not behave entirely as the experts expected them to. Instead of concluding at once that President Ford was a lead-pipe cinch to win the oomination, they pulled back and took a second look.

After almost two weeks of maneuvering, there is a much clearer picture of how Mr. Reagan's action affected the thinking of the delegates, how the move looked to the Ford loyalists, the Reagan loyalists, the leaners and those few baffled souls who cannot decide between the two. For most of the lovalists, the selection of Mr. Schweiker made no difference, or so little difference that they have uttered nary a peep in public. Nothing has been haard from Mr. Ford's big bloc of 90 in Ohio or from Mr. Reagan's monolithic 100 in Texas, and not much from the Reaganites in the Weatern states, most of whom are not bound by

The problem for Mr. Reagan has shown up in the atates of the Deep South, ootably those where the delagates were chosen by convention rather than primary - Mississippi. South Carolina and Virginia. Mr. Schweiker was simply too much for some of tha true believers in those states to swallow, after months of listening to their hero promise "philoaophical compatibility" in a running mate. Toxey Hall Smith, a lawyer from Wiggins, Miss., said of the Pennsylvanian: "I am still chawing on him. I still can't get him down." Mr. Smith had been leaning to Mr. Reagan, as had Ray W. Edwards, a furniture dealer from Collinsville, Ve. Mr. Edwards be preced to read an article in Business Week about the attitudes toward organized labor of certain Senators, including Mr. Schweiker, and thet was all it took to propel him into the Ford camp.

lo the Northeast, the selection of Mr. Schweiker had tha opposite effect on some of the delegates in the threa hig, technically uncommitted delegations of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvenia. Worried all along that the President would run a dull campaign, they reacted favorably to the electricity of surprise.

That wes the case with several of the Pennsylvania delegates who rallied to Mr. Reagan last week (although the favorite-son element obviously played a part, too), and it was the cese with James White of Rochester, N.Y., an old friend of Richard M. Rosenbaum, the regional headhunte for the President. "President Ford is passive and a very fin gentleman," said Mr. White, "but I don't think he'll be ah to run the type of campaign Reagan can." Other delegates who made their moves last week seemed to be reacting tn forces entirely uoconnected with the Schweiker announcement: A Minnesota farmer who finally decided, after weeks of grumbling, to leave the President because of the 1975 grain embargo; a Bronx politician angry about local infighting who moved to Mr. Reagan in protest; an Ohio housewife smarting over what she considered unfair campaign tactics by the President in California.

For the bulk of the 117 delegates in 22 states still listed as uncommitted in The New York Times's canvass, the most significant aspect of the Schweiker announcement was that it kept the contest going, kept open the opportunities to win some concession for themselves or their state, kept the telephone calls and lettera coming from Washington and Los

Thomas J. Tauke, a 25-year-old lewyer from Dubuque who is considered one of the fair-haired boys of lowa Republican politics, took advantage of the new situation to have a telephone conversation of almost an hour with Mr. Reagan. Mr. Tauke told Governor Reagan that he was pleased by the selection of Mr. Schweiker and worried that President Ford. would choose John B. Connally as a running mate! One point for Mr. Reagan. But Mr. Tauke also told the Californian that he feared that e Reagan Presidency would lack compassion.

One point for Mr. Ford. So it is with dozens of other delegates-including Marlene Zinzel in Missouri, William T. Conklin in New York, Joseph Laurita in West Virginia and John C. Osland in Wyomingwho are trying to weigh the alternatives, then choose the moment when their announcement would do them and their candidate the most good. This weekend, with the conventioo only eight days distant, most of them were waiting, and that in itself was no small accomplishment for Ronald Reagan.

R. W. Apple Jr. is the national political correspondent of The New York Times.

A Carter Speech Hints that Love Isn't Everything

Jimmy Carter has given a clear hiot that his approach in the presidential campaign will be an aggressive one. In a speech in New Hampsbire. Mr. Carter castigated what he termed tha "Nixon-Ford Administration" for a failure of leadership and called the Republicans a "party of backward-

Because the Democrats are united hehind Mr. Carter and the Republicans deeply divided over the choice of their candidate, it had been suggested that Mr. Carter might exploit his advantage by acting "Presidential" and avoiding direct, partisan attacks. But in the New Hampshire speech, Mr. Carter vigorously assailed Mr. Ford, whom he aaid he believes will be the Republican nominee, both by associating the President with his disgraced predecessor and by criticizing the Ford vetoes of legislation passed by the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Though Ford spokesmen protested the vigor of the Carter statements, linking the President to Mr. Nixon is likely to be a constant of the Democratic campaign, if not by Mr. Carter then by other Democrats. Mr. Ford, who was named Vice President by Mr. Nixon and later pardoned him, has so far indicated his only political defense will he to reiterate his helief that it is time for the nation to forget the complex of scandal called Watergate.

Mr. Carter's visit to New Hampshire also suggested he will continue one of hia main themes in the primaries. tbe restoration of traditional American values. He promised that, if elected, he would review all Federal programs to insure that they did not weaken

Mobil May Have Defied U.S. Policy

The United States Treasury is investigating the possibility that the Mobil Oil Company has been circumventing the American embargo on trade with Rhodesia for the last 10 years by secretly selling oll products to that country through a South African aubsidi-

Last June the United Church of Christ, a religious organization that has been lovestigatiog corporate activities in Africa, accused Mobil of surreptitious sales to Rhodesia, hasing its allegations on what it said were company documents. Although United States Government officials were at first wary of the allegations, hecause the documents were not authenticated, they now apparently believe the evidence warrants further investigation.

According to the account provided by the church, Mobil'a South African subsidiary sold oil products to a Rhodesian trading organization, diaguising the sale by a series of intermediary transactions among South African firms. Trade with Rhodeaia is permitted under South African law.

The United States Treasury, which enforces the embsrgo sgainst Rhndesia, is seeking to determine whether any American laws have been violated. Mobil has said that it is looking inin the operations of its South African

Deadly Colorado Combination

An extraordinary combination of topography and meteorological cnnditions last week caused the death of al least 80 persons in Colorado, where the Big Thompson River rose in its canyon with destructive spead, trapping thousands of campers and other vacationers.

Because of an unusual absence of wind, a large thunderstorm that developed in the canyon area last Saturday night remained stationary for five hours, pouring down between 13 and 15 inchea of rain, Flash floods are common in the canyons of the Rockies, according to officials of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration. However, rainfalls associated with them are rarely more than one to four inches, because the storm clouds are moved along by winds.

The effects of the rainfall were magoified by the narrowness—only 150 feet wide in places-of the canyon. which ceused the water level to rise rapidly, and by the steepness of its sides, which made escape difficult.

Most flash floods in the Rockies cause littla damaga because they occur in unpopulated areas. The Big Thompson Canyon contained, by one estimate, as many as 4,500 persona, including compers and fishermen. The canyon lies along a route to Rocky Mountain National Park, a popular destination for aummer tourists.

Unemployment Is Up to 7.8 Percent

Unemployment rose from 7.5 percent in June to 7.8 percent in July, the highest rate since January, the Labor Department has reported. The main reason was a large increasenearly 700,000 -in the labor force, to the point where a record 61.9 percent of the population over 16 years of age was working or actively seeking work. That growth stemmed largely from an increase in the number of women to the labor force, partly a continuation of a long-term aocial and economic trend and partly a reflection of pressure on families to Increase

Although the nation's latest recovery from recession has been standard by mained stubbornly high. The laborforce growth, the highest of sny nf the six postwar recoveries, is one reason. Another is that unemployment started high this time-a peak of 8.9 percent in May 1975. The July increase in unemployment was accompanied by an increase in jobs of 400,000, making total employment a record 87.9 mil-

The Ford Administration has adopted a policy of what it terms moderate recovery, knowing that this would mean only a slow reduction of the unemployment rate, in fear that a boom and renewed inflation would only make unemployment worse in a year or two. With the economy certain to he an election issue, the Administration continued last week to forecast a drop in unemployment to about 7 enough for it to claim progress, but hardly likely to silence Democratic

In Missouri, the Democrat who won the Senatorial nomination, Representative Jerry L. Litton, died with his family in a plane crash on the way to a victory celebration on election day. Mr. Litton had easily defeated former Gov. Warren E. Mearnes and Representative James W. Symington, whose father, Stuart, now holds the Senate seat. A nominee will be chosen by tha Missouri Democratic state committee.

In Michigan, Representative Donald W. Riegle Jr. won the Democratic nomination for the Senate in a contest with Richard A. Austin, the Michigan Secretary of State. One of the major issues in the campaign was Mr. Austin's association with a patronsge system customarily operated by the secretary of state's office. But the voting may have been influenced by race; Mr. Riegle is white. Mr. Austin black. The seat is now held by a Democrat, Philip A. Hart, who is retiring.

In Tennessee, James R. Sasser, a former state Democratic chairman, won the apportunity to challenge Republican Sanator Bill Brock. Mr. Sasser defeated John Jay Hooker Jr., who had twice run unauccessfully for governor. Some of Senator Brock's supporters had been urged Republicans to vote for Mr. Hooker in tha primary, where croasovers are permitted, because they helieved him to be the easier candidata

Reagan's Staff Is Politically Congenial

By JON NORDHEIMER

LOS ANGELES - In the beginning when the planning had been in memos with short-sentence paragraphs, end aggressive men with long lists of friends and contributors in Texas, Florida and North Carolina bad argued that the winning of the Republican nomination for President was as simple as fielding a candidate, no one in the Ronald Reagan team of advisers dreamed that the most harrowing period of the campaign would take place just one week before the Republican convention.

But that is what it came down to this past week as Ronald Reagan toured the South and North to display his liberal proposed running mate, Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania, worrying like a middle-aged man with a new toupee whether people would find him ettractive, or rather silly.

Mr. Reagan's ataff members accepted the cosmetic change because they had become convinced that at the end of a long, hard campaign against President Ford, their options had been finally narrowed down to this one last chance at the Republican nomination.

Tha choice of Mr. Schweiker, whose prolabor voting record is far removed from Mr. Reagan's brand of conservatism, rankled the faithful across the nation, but the staff of the former Californis Governor never really faltered. It accepted the deciaion, which was really formed by Mr. Rcagan's national campaign manager, John P. Sears, ae stoically as did the candidate after the stratagy had been laid out for him

He reportedly turned down an earlier offer to join the Ford election committee becausa be could not win enough backing from the White House to control completely the President's campaign. The deal he struck with Mr. Reagan gave him wide responsibility for strategy, as conclusively demonstrated by his ability to select Senator Schweiker as the candidate's Vice-Presidential nominee even before Mr. Reagan was apprised of the choice.

Respect for Mr. Sears's judgment in these matters so permeates the Reagan camp that one of the former Governor's oldest political aides, Lyn Nofziger, wife was his press secretary 10 years ago and subsequently was a top professional at the Republican National Committee during part of the Nixon Administration, has taken a less prominent rola in tha campaign, though he remaios a close confident of the candidate.

Thousands of Americans Are Training Iran's Forces

Will the Flag Follow U.S. Arms Sales

By LESLIE H. GELB

Through its sales of weapons overseaa, the United States has entered a period of intricate mutual dependencies that are hard to control and whosa consequences ere hard to calculate. In some ways, the arms arrangements are now the functional equivalents of treaties, but much more nebulous.

Recent Administration arms sales have put Iran in a position where it could not fight without thousands of Americans on the scene, Saudi Arabia in a position to become an arms storehouse for its Arab neighbors, and Kenya and Zaire on a track of military dependency that leads back to Washington.

The new period in American arma exports has been signaled by two developments: the sale of highly sophisticated weapons systems to developing countries that lack the skills to operate them, and tha advent of what might be called "white collar merceoaries," thousands of privately employed civilians who descend on the buyers to teach them how.

Iran is an almost pure case in point, as a study by the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, made public last week, showed.

The study, based on interviews with Administration experts, held that Iran is now so heavily dependent on American personnel that it could not go to war "without U.S. support on a day-to-day basis." Iran has purchased some of tha latest models of American artillery, missiles, and aircraft. Tha Iranian armed forces do not have the technological background to operate them "unless increasing oumbers of American personnel go to Iran in a support

There are already mora than 20,000 Americans in Iran, mostly connected with training Iranian armed forces. The report projected that by 1980, this figure could assily reach 50,000 to 60,000.

The point the Sanate staff report was driving at

was this: In reviewing arms aales, Congress has heen paying attention almost exclusively to the primary decision whather to sell a particular country certain amount of weapons, but virtually ignoring the secondary effects of the sale.

After the contract has been aigned end the weapons delivered, Americans arriva en masse to do the administering and the on-site training for up to 10 years. Under pressure from Congresa to reduce American military training missions, the Pentagon has increasingly turned these tasks over to private contractors. The civilians are relatively immune from American government control.

It might seem that Iran's dependancy would give the United States e large measure of control over a deciaion by the Shah to use force. But in a way, the Americans could become hostages as well as trainers. If Washington were to choose not to back the Shah in conflict, it would risk rupturing relations with Iran, and risk placing the Americans in jeopardy, Saudi Arabia's rulers do not have quite the same taste for prestige weapons as the Shah, but a similar kind of situation could evolve there. There are already several thousand American civilian-contractor personnel working on military matters in that country.

It looks as if more are to come. The Administratinn decided to sell the Saudis Sidewioder air-to-air missiles, TOW tube-launched optically tracked antitank missiles. Maverick air-to-aurface missiles, and an early version of the laser-guided, so-called "smart bombs." The Saudis will have to import many more Americans to manage them.

Iaraeli concern that some of those weapons may he transferred to other Arab states surrounding Israel, Administration officisls insist, is not wellfounded. But the quantity of arma being sold is difficult to explain; the hypothetical model used by tha Pentagon and the Saudis to justify the sales was a simultaneoua attack against Ssudi Arr South Yemen. Similar questions could the threat to Iran. The Russians are f. tial enemy, but no smount of arms w. for that contingency. For all other ev has more than enough on paper.

The same cannot be said of the and Zaire. It is aimply a fact that th Angola, Uganda, and Somalia, to n much better armed.

The policy problem with the re: aircraft and srmor to Kenya and Zail compel the United States to make the future of those countries that it make before.

Arms sales to Taiwan present a more complicated problem. The A stated goal is to make possible mi ficiency." If a future Administration \ to abrogate the defense treaty with sufficency" might make it easier to do insists on abrogation of the treaty diplomatic relations with the United S lished. But from a short-term perspepolicy could cause Peking to believe the was trying to promota a permanent. tion of Taiwan from the mainland r turn, could badly damage Chinese-Ame

Arms exports are an incredibly con prise. The arguments cannot be redu not want to be merchants of death" don't sell, someone elae will," or ev tention that selling creates e more assist in combat. Not selling, and de tha maans to defend itself, is also a n

Plans, But Little Action on Food

Good harvests in Africa and Asia have provided short-term respite for most of the world's hungry but, axperts have disclused, inaction on longterm measures threatens future world food security.

The 1974 World Conference on Food and the executive group, it established, the World Food Council, recommended three steps to achieve that security: establishment of an international emergency food reserve of 500,000 tons; earmarking part of the stocks of major grain producers for food aid; stockpiling 15 to 20 million tons of grain to atabilize prices. Little action has been taken on any of the proposals.

Progress has been made in the establishment of a $1 billion International Fund for Agricultural Development to help increase production in chronic food-deficit countries, but the fund is still $63 million short and may not get into full operation this year as planned.

The World Food Council says that bumper cereal crops in 1975, particularly of rice in Asia, mean that a three-year decline in world food stocks has been reversed: The stocks are expected to grow by 10 percent this year.

Nevertheless, the council says "longrun food production trends in the developing countries [are] still inadequate to meet their rising needs." The average annual food production iocrease in developing countries for the past five years has been 2.5 percent but population bas increased by an average 2.6 percent.

This view was supported by the International Food Policy Research Institute, in Washington, D. C. It retries, largely io the tropics, totalled reach from 95 to 108 million tons in

The institute based its prediction on what it called a "pervasive" drop in tha rate of increased production in major cereal grain growing areas. The trend appeared, the institute said, despite the so-called "green revolution" planting of improved varieties of wheat and rice.

Lebanese Get Still More Brutal

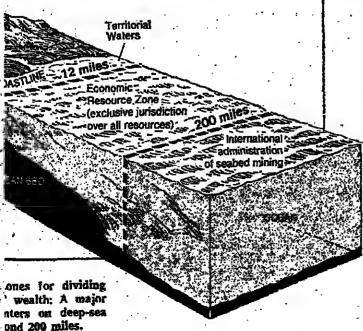

The savagery of Lebanon's civil war reached new depths last week: Gunfire ended a Red Croas effort to evacuate wounded from the beseiged Tell Zaatar Palestinian camp in Beirut.

Right-wing Christian forces have had tha camp surrounded for weeks; it is reported desperately short of water and food, Thousands of Palestinians and Lebaoese are still in the camp, an unknown number wounded or ill. Red Cross workers last week successfully removed several bundred persons, including women and children. But the unarmed rescuers had to give up the effort when snipers attacked the stretcher parties.

The incideot and renewal of shooting elsewhere apparently doomed yet one more cease-fire arrangement, the 54th in 16 months of bloodshed.

Meanwhile, two vitally interested outside parties, Israel and Syria, have taken actions that could affect the Lebanese civil war.

In Syria, which bas 20,000 troops in Lebanon trying to impose peace, an abrupt, major change has occurred in tha Government: President Hafez al-Assad last week accepted the resignation of Prime Mimster Mahmoud al-Ayubi and named Maj. Gen. Abdel Rahman Khleifawi to replace him. General Khleifawi is highly regarded in the Syrian officer corps, and his appointment may have been made to please the military, reportedly discon-

in Lebanon. At the same time, Israel; revealed it had held meetings with officers of the Lebanese Arab Army, a breakway force from the regular Lehanese Army. In addition, Israeli patrols have been stepped up in southern Lebanon, to prevent Palestinian forces from reestahlishing dominance in the area.

The Potential in The Toth Case

A long-standing but relatively minnr diapute between the United States and Yugoslavia, resulting from Belgrade's imprisonment of an American businessman after a secret trial on espinnage charges, has been resolved, and the readlution appears to have exposed the potential either for discard or hatter relations between the two

The espionage case involved Laszln Toth of Denver, released two weeks ago after a year in a Yugoslav prison: both he and the United States Government insist the charges were haseless. Now the strong words center more on Laurence H. Silberman, the United States Ambassador, who publicly and vignrously criticized the Yugoslav actions in the Tnth case. President Insip Tito has charged that the amhassador was interfering in internal Yugoslav affairs and other Yugoslav officials have suggested that Washington recall Mr. Silberman.

Washington analysis believe that President Tito wants to discover whether the ambassador was complaining on his own behalf or with the approval of Secretary of State Henry A. Kiasinger. If Mr. Kissinger does recall the ambassador, it will be taken in Yugoslavia as a signal that Washington now repudiates Mr. Silberman's criticism in the Toth case. That could have important implications for future dealings between the United States and Yugoslavia.

For several years, the Yugoslavs have been talking to the United States about buying American weapons. Mr. Kissinger has been disenchanted with President Tito's activist role in tha group of so-called nonaligned nations which meets in Colombo, Sri Lanka, next week. A more moderate stance by Yugoslavia in Colombo could be belpful to Washington.

Vietnam Echo: 49 Americans Leave

The Uoited States says Hanoi has failed to provide information shout American servicemen still tisted as missing in action but believed buried in Indochina; Hanoi says it has provided all the information it has.

Talks on both subjects have been held intermittently in Paris but there ia no sign of progress. Washington remaios wary about Vietnam's future international role. Thanks significantly captured American weapons, Vietnam's forces are by far the bestequipped in Southeast Asia. Despite Hanoi's recent overtures to neighboring nations, including Thailand last week, United States officials fear that Vietnam could still supply important aid to guerrilla movements throughout the region.

For their part, the rulers of reunited Vietnam seem iotent oo lessening foreign influences on their soil, particularly io the South. Western reporters and diplomats have been removed from Saigon and last week 49-United States citizena and their dependents, practically the last of those stranded when the Communists overran the city on April 30, 1975, were flown out.

Death in Sudan

Ninety-eight persons convicted of sttempting to overthrow President Geafar al-Nimeiry of the Sudan, allegedly with help from Libya and with the aim of establishing a conservative regime, were executed last week. It was the fourth attempted coup since President Nimeiry came to power in 1969 and the large number of executions were apparently designed to discourage further attempts.

The latest effort occurred July 2; according to Sudanese officials 800 persons died in the fighting that resulted from the abortive coup and more than 200 alleged rebels are still on trial. The Sudantese Government says the Libyan regime of Col. Muammar el-Osdaffi financed the plotters to return to power conservative Moslem politicians ousted by President Nimeiry. Libya denies it.

Soweto's Blacks No Longer Accept Their 'Uncle Toms'

By JOHN F. BURNS

JOHANNESBURG - The overwhelming majority of the 100,000 homes in Sowern are tiny government-built houses not much higger than a garden shed. But here and there In the sprawling township there are larger, owner-built homes, some of them with lawns and television aerials and car ports. One such home, helonging to the township's Mayor, T. J. Makhava, was attacked with stones and gasoline bombs last week hy angry youths hitting nut at symbols of the system-apartheid-that holds them in conditions of degrading inferiority.

Quick action by the police and fire departments saved the house. Later, as Mr. Makhaya examined the damage, he spoke sadly of the position that he and others on the Urban Bantu Council find themselves. As the unrest in the township smolders on toward the beginning of its third month, the council, an elected body, advises white government officials on the administration of the township, but has no powers of its own that are not subject to veto by the government.

"Some people think that we as U.B.C., leaders make the laws that govern us, but we don't," Mr. Makhaya said, picking up a shard of glass from the living room floor. "I have done my hest for my people with the little education that I have, and I have sacrificed a good deal of my time. If people think we are puppets, they should come out into the open and take over the leadership of urban blacks, I am prepared to move out and give them a chance,"

Behind Mr. Makhaya's words lay the dilemma facing Snuth Africans of all races who favor a political evolution that would turn this bastinn of white supremacy into a multiracial democracy. Through the Bantu councils in the townships and the "homelands" governments in traditional tribal areas, the Government has created black leaders that work, however reluctantly, within the system. Among youths, those leaders are now widely regarded as-the American phrase is part of the argot of black nationalism here--"Uncle Toms."

There is a leadership that doesn't march to John Vnrster's drum, but most of its members are abroad, under "banning" nrders that amount almost to house arrest, or in jail. The organizations they represent are the repositories of black protest: the African National Congress, and its offshoot, the Pan Africanist Congress, outlawed in 1960, and the studeotled bodies that sprang up to fill the void in the late 1960's, the South African Students Organization, a university group, the South African Students Movement, its high school counterpart, and an umbrella body, the Black People's Convention.

It is adherents of these groups, and uoderground agents of the older, banned organizations, that the Government has In mind in its repeated assertion that "activists" and 'agitators' are behind the upheaval in Soweto and other hlack townships. It is a charge that the few leaders of the student-led groups who are still at large decline to refute. "Anybody who claims responsibility for Soweto is going to end up on Robben Island," one militant said, referring to the rocky fortress nif Cape Town where South Africa confines its most prominent political prisoners. "But anybody can see that it isn't an antirely spontaneous thing."

Spokesmen for the demonstrators have demanded that officials visit Soweto and negotiate with them, a call that has been picked up by the mostly liberal English-languaga press. But Justice Minister James T. Kruger has said that he will not even consider the demand until the demonstrators call off their protests. Then, he has said, he will accept a memorandum, and consider whether discussions with the representatives of the protestors would be worthwhile. In the meantime, neither Mr. Kruger nor any other miniater has been near Soweto since the unrest started there in June.

Without a complete turnabout by the Government amounting to the abandonment of the system it has constructed with painstaking consistency for 28 years, there would. most observers agree, be little point in Mr. Kruger making the journey to the township. On current indications the chance of auch a volte-face are nil. The Government's answer to protest, by all odds, will remaio one that combines force now with limited and essentially superficial conces-

A Turn to Violence

The Government however, does not have a monopoly on intransigence. Before he went in Robhen Island 12 years ago, Nelson Mandela, the National Congress leader who is the acknowledged figurehead of the black resistance movement, warned a crowded courtroom that the Government had "set the scene for violence by relying exclusively on violence with which to answer our people and their demands." That observation, explaining his own espousal of violence after decades of constitutional resistance, is even truer today, when the leaders of the new resistance groups exclude any compromise-power-sharing or property guarantees for whites, for example-along the road to the black-ruled "Azania" of the future.

The strongly Marxist and black nationalist tendencies in the thinking of the new radical leaders are a far cry from the moderate, social democratic program but forward hy Mr. Mandela. But the question now is whether it is too late, whatever the Government does, for the kind of accommodation that the earlier generation of black leaders foresaw. If it is, and the choice for the country's 25 million people is reduced to modified apartheid or black socialism, the losers will be those, black and white alike, who have always hoped that the extraordinary natural endowment of this country would some day be complemented by a political system that offered equal opportunity and civic rights to all its people.

Public opinion polling has nnt reached Soweto, but the guess of many whose interests are not engaged bare is that the preferences of most adult blacks lie closer to the prescriptions of Mr. Mandela, and, for that matter, Mr. Makhaya, than to the radical, socialist solutions put forward by the new radicals. Many educated blacks have read about the failures of black socialism elsewhere, how life under it has sometimes turned to be worse than under the colooialists, and they have no eagerness to try it for themselves. "I'm just as afraid of Communism as Mr. Vorster," said a $30-a-week night porter in a luxury hotel here, "But we'll both end up under it unless he makes some very big changes

For Its Own Security, Israel Offers Lebanese Aid

By TERENCE SMITH

JERUSALEM-It began as a trickle of anxious Lebanese villagers seeking medical attention south of the border. Io the last few weeks, it has become a steady stream of farmers with surplus crops to sell, viltagers in search of food supplies and unemployed workers seeking relief from the privations of 16 months of civil war. Israel's "good fence" policy, as it has been dubbed, reached a creative highpoint last week when a Lebanese woman slipped through the well-trafficked hole in the barbed-wire fence, checked into an Israeli government hospital and a few hours later gave birth to triplets. The habies, one doctor said with a smile, have the option of Israeli citizenship by virtue of their

The decision to open Israel's northern border to needy Lebanese is more than a humanitarian gesture. It is an example of one of the subtle and indirect ways in which Israel is attempting to influence the outcome in the Lebanese crisis, at least in the southern part of the country.

By befriending the people of southern Lebanon, Israel hopes to encourage the villagers to resist attempts by the Palestinian guerrilla forces to re-establish their control in the border area. The "good fence," it is hoped, will prevent a return to the situation that prevailed before the Lebanese civil war, when the guerrilla organizations ruled southern Lebacon and used it as a staging area for terrorist attacks against Israeli border settlements.

In those days, Palestinian units maintained checkpoints on the roads in southern Lebanon and drew logistical support from the villages in the area. Hardly a night went by without artillery exchanges and one or two atempted border crossings. In response, Israeli forces frequently swept across the frontier on retaliatory raids. That tense coofrootatioo atmosphere has eased during the civil war and Israel is determined that it not resume.

The same motive lies behind a number of other Israeli moves: the increased patrols on both sides of frontier to break up Palestinian concentrations, the repeated warnings to Syria through the United States not to push too far south, even the reported arms shipments to the Christian forces in Lebanon. These have been officially denied bere, as one would expect, but that does not necessarily mean they have

In addition, it was disclosed last week that Israeli officers have met three times in the last two months at a border checkpoint with officers of Lieut. Ahmed Khatib's breakaway Lebanese Arab Army. The meetings were held under United Nations auspices to discuss the situation in southern Lebanon. Although Lieutenant Khatib's army is allied with the Palestine Liberation Organization, it is a separate group that could become a significant force in the border area. By developing contacts now, Israeti gains useful intelligence on the Lebanese situation in general and the possibility of better relations in the future.

Avoiding Direct Intervention

No one here pretends that these moves will have a decisive effect on the Lebanese crisis. The situation is much too complex. But rather than launch an outright military invasion of southern Lebanon, as many expected it would several months ago, Israel is trying to accomplish the same ends by other means. The goal, in either case, would be to whittle down the prestige and atatus of the Patestine Liberation Organization and defuse the situation immediately north

Israel is also anxious to keep Syria at bay. In recent weeks, Israeli leaders have repeated their warnings of a few months ago to Damascus that'the Syrians must not cross a "red line" in southern Lebanon that would bring them within striking distance of Israel's frontier. This hoe has never been explicitly defined, although many have interpreted it as the Litani River.

Regardless of the exact geography, the Israeli coocern is clear. Large formations of Syrian regulars along the border would present a serious military threat. Such units could easily be equipped with Soviet-maoufactured antiaircraft missiles and even ground-to-ground Scud missiles that could reach Israel's northern cities. This would transform Lebanon into a "confrontation" state, à la Syria, Jordan and Egypt, and significantly enlarge Israel's potential fighting front Faced with such a development, Israel would have no choice but to go in on the ground. Short of that, however, actual intervention seems unlikely. The Lebanese crisis bas grown so muddled that Israel could no longer have much hope of resolving it decisively by unilateral action. An Israeli initiative now would probably be widely criticized and could well dispel the international approval Israel received as a result of the successful rescue of bostages from Entebbe Airport in Uganda.

The Benefits So Far

Beyond these considerations, Israel bas oo wish to interrupt the trend of events in Lebanon. The crisis has served her well so far by decimating the Palestice Liberation Organization, distracting the attention of Syria, reducing terrorist activity on the border and splitting the Arab world. It has also bought Israel a year-long suspension of diplomatic activity in the Middle East and postponed American pressure

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin noted last week that this state of affairs was desirable but rould change. In an interview with the Labor Party newspaper Davar, he said: "I do not see any threat to Israel from the direction of Lebanon in the near future. The central military factor in Lebanon today is the Syrian Army and they are interested in preserving calm with Israel to avoid giving her an excuse to intervene. But we must at any rate be alert to the situation."

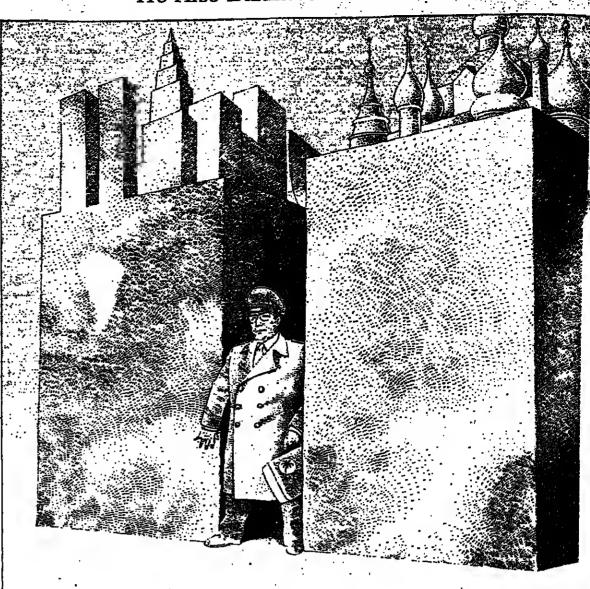

Mr. Rabin called for a campaign "to dim the glamour of the Palestinian Liberatioo Organization in the eyes of the world." He made clear that he thought the Palestinians were the cause of Lebanon's troubles, saying that Lebanon is the "only Arah secular state where Christians and Moslems lived in peace and this coexistence wes wrecked by the P.L.O."

The real danger for Israel lies in the future. If, as many in Israel suspect, Syria eventually wina out in Lebaoon and dominates the situation there, Israel will nnce again become the primary target of Arab action. In the flush of victory, the Syrians may wish to demonstrate anew their militancy against Israel, if for no other reason than to restore Syria's standing and leadership in the Arab world. At that point, a Syrian military initiative would be possible.

Israel will probably continue in maceuver as best it can, hoping to minimize the influence of the Palestinians and preserve the current power vacuum on its northern border.

Tito's Path Between the Gian

By HELLA PICK

LONDON-A series of secret trials, involving not only Yugoslavs but also persons from the West and from other Communist countries, have underlined again the difficulties President Josip Tito faces in preserving his regime at home. and balaocing the pressures oo it from East and West.

One of the incidents involves Laszlo Toth born a Yugoslav but now a naturalized United States citizen. He was arrested after photographing a Yugloslavian sugarheet factory, tried secretly for espionage, coovicted and released two weeks ago after spending one year of his seven-year sentence in prison. Laurence H. Silberman, the United States Ambassedor to Belgrade, sharply criticized the treatment of Mr. Toth. In return President Tito attacked Mr. Silberman and last week the Belgrade Government let it be known that they would like him repleced.

The Toth case is not an Isolated example. According to an official of the Yugoslav Ministry of the Interior, 13 subversive groups have been uncovered in the last two years and 237 persons connected with them have been convicted. Of these 105 were alleged to be pro-Soviet "Cominformists," while 19 others had been convicted of spying for other unnamed countries. The official did not give the total number of political prisoners in Yugoslavia, but unofficial estimates put it as high as 4,000.

In Mr. Toth's case, the reason for his arrest and his cooviction seemed guestionable. When Soviet or Yugoslav poonents of President Tito are involved. Western reaction is less coocerned. But the Yugoslavs are undoubtedly aware that the Toth episode has adversely affected American public opinion, and complicated their relations with Washington.

That is not really President Tito's prime concern. The aging Yugoslav leader bas for years been performing a tightrope act balancing the conflicting pressures on his regime, and has, evidently, concluded that self-defense and national cohesion, rather than reliance on outside approval, provide the best guaraotee for Yugoslavia's survival.

Marsbal Tito bas apparently calculated that the Soviet Union would be tempted to overcome Yugoslavia by force after his death if his country's policies are unduly tilted toward the West. The arrest and Imprisooment of an American, however arbitrary it may seem, has to be understood against this background.

The main concern of the Tito regime, as the Marshal has seen it for many years, is to minimize the Soviet Union's opportunities for covert, subversive activity in Yugoslavla, and its ability to exloit the ethnic and cultural divisions within the country. President Tito's overriding priority has always heen to reconcile the diverse nationalities and minnrities that live in the six republics and two provinces of Yugoslavia, and leave behind him a collective leadership capable of preventing the disintegration of the country after his towering personal influence disappears.

Western analysts say there is evidence that the Soviet Union has not abandooed its aim of hringing Yugoslavia back into the Moscow fold and is believed to be aiding rightist as well as Stalinist dissident exiles from Yugoslavia, and encouraging internal subversion. But Yug not want to complicate its relations with Moso discussion of the question. That is one expl Yugoslav officials give for conducting the spy closed doors,

Another reason is that Yugoslavia is Marxist state, and does not pretend to be a Although Marshal Tito and his aides suppor and French Communist Parties in their atte tablish their independence from Moscow, and need to work with "progressive forces" regardle or not they are Communist, Yugoslavia's leaintention of introducing a multiparty system

An Economic Incentive

Yugoslavia's leaders are trying to reduc ties between the more advanced Republics Croatia, and the more backward ones such and Kosovo, oo the Albanian border. But hy no means self-sufficient. Some are migrant wo from the West which oo longer provide an ot slavia's surplus labor. But again, there is an ir far thia year, and there has been a general I Yugoslav economy.

No doubt Marshal Tito, and his three apparent, Edward Kardelj, Stanc Dolanc Bakaric, recognize this reservoir of unemploy tial source of trouble. But they believe it up. In Summary

after a three-month political struggle, has passed court reform legislation that will be of substantial financial belp to city and county government but apparently will do little to improve the operation of the court system.

The state will assume all court costs gradually over the next four years. Ultimately, the expense to the state will amount to $180 million a year.

New Ynrk City will be freed of an $88 millinn expense, thus largely fulfilling what nace seemed like the wishful thinking of Mayor Beame, who had included much of the savings as realizable in calculating how he would eliminate a billion-dullar hudgel deficit months ago. Passage of the measure

The New York State Legislature, was altributable largely to the eagerness of legislators to offer new state aid to localities in an election year.

The Legislature, meeting in special session, also approved court-reorganization plans in the form of an amendment to the State Constitution, but there is considerable question whether any of them will ever take effect. The reform involved is modest at best.

In the package: The most important change calls for appointment rather than election of future members of the seven-judge Court of Appeals, the state's highest court. A screening panel would recommend judges to the Governor. Senate confirmation of his choices would be needed. A deadlock on the matter in the Legislature was broken wheo the Democratic-controlled Assembly yielded to the Republican-controlled Senate and permitted the possibility of one final election to the Appeals Court. The Republicans would like the chance of winning the position now held hy Chief Judge Charles D. Breitel, who is retiring in 1978.

The amendment also calls for improving the procedures for removing unfit judges and centralizing administration of the court system.

Not in the package. Governor Carey had proposed that all judges be appointed, to end the practice of awarding party falthful with nominetions certain to end in judgeships. Acother major Carey proposal would have merged most courts, including the Court of Claims, Surrogate, Family and New York Civil and Criminat Courts, into e single state-wide trial court. The purpose was to end the present meze in which courts have fragmented and sometimes conflicting jurisdirtions. Many influential members of the present State Supreme Court, into which all the others would be merged, opposed the proposal because they felt it would dilute their power. Whether the package that was passed will ever become law is problematical. The vote by the Legislature is only the first atep. The amendment must he passed again by the Legislature next year and then approved by the state's voters in a referendum before it can be added to the State Con-

Some political abservers believe there is e good chance the state's voters may reject the package. A survey of voters taken three years ago showed that 75 percent wanted to continue to elect judges to the Appeals Court. Also, voters recently have been reluctant to approve an omnibus proposal in which they have no chance to accept some provisions and reject.

Day Care: Good For Adults, Too

Investigalinns of private day-care centers in New York City are revealing hitherto concealed husiness arrangements, hy politically well-connected people, that ellegedly have produced large profits at the public's expense.

The day-care program was one of the social programs begun in the 1960s as part of the Federal poverty program. Now there are 169 centers directly leased by the city, with a capacity of 24.000 children. There are also about 200 centers, with a capacity of 20,000, that are independently leased and operated by achoois, churches and social groups. All, theoretically at least, are nonprofit organizations.

Social aims aside, the direct-lease day-care centers organized io the Lindsay years provided the opportunity for appealing real estate deals. Leases were signed for 15 and 20 years. The city pays the landlord's taxes, utilities and operating costs and reimburses for other costs of rentiog or owning the huilding. One investigating group found that the centers will collect $350 million in combined Federal, state and city funda over duration of the leases.

In some cases examined, landlords got mortgages that exceeded the cost of the building and land, a highly unusuel situation. The investigators say the promoters often began with a profit: They had to put up almost no capital, were guaranteed an income. and had a tax shelter provided by depreciation and ioterest charges.

A newly constituted and led New York City Board of Higher Education has convaned and begun to deal with a perhaps insoluble dilemma; how to restore public confidence in the City University of New York while cutting drastically its faculty, student body and programs.

It is also a ened by tradition and, as with almost any large each piece of it protects its self-interest. it to simplify it by making one statewide trial preme Court, went nowhere during the regular legislative session that ended in June. A special session last week voted some modest changes, but left, in the opinion of most court experts, much still to be done.

We have bundreds of court systems in the state," said Albert Blumenthal, the Assembly majority leader, at the special session. "In fact, we have thousands of court systems in the state. We really don't have an overview of a

How is this system run? What is wrong that a comprehensive reform plan ought to correct?

"We're still in the quill and peo era," David Ross, New York City's administrative judge, said recently. "We're a major corporation. If we had to compete, we'd be out of

The court system is marked by idefficiency, and although shorter than they once were, delays of six months or more between arrest and the disposition of cases are not un-

Much of the inefficency and slowness is beyond the control of the state's judiciary. For example, the Legislature's 1973 drug law, with its stiff penalties, has significantly added to the burden of the system. In passing the measure, the lawmakers provided for extra judges, but they did not fully debate the impact of the law on the court

The peoal law is enforced by police and prosecutors, whose aims often are very different from those in the court system. Policemen often are judged by the oumber, not the quality, of their arrests, and prosecutors are unwilling to present cases they are likely to lose.

As a result, of every 500 felony arrests in New York City, only 15 or so ever go to trial. About 400 stay in the criminal court where they are disposed of as misdemeanors. Of the 100 cases that survive that screening and result in grand jury felony indictments, 25 are dismissed by judges. Of those remaining, more than 80 percent are disposed of hy plea bargainiog.

For the past decade or so, court reformers have focused less on restructuring the penal law or plea bargaining than on making a seemingly irrational system rational by unifying its administration and by attempting to improve the caliber of judges.

For the first time in several years, the Legislature last week gave the reformers at least something to cheer about. The gains were hailed as a first step in the right direction by the reformers, although many of the legislators called

In its special session, the Legisleture gave first passage to a constitutional amendment calling for simplified disciplinary proceedings for judges, a centralized court administration and gubernatorial appointment of the seveo judges on the Court of Appeals. On Thursday, Governor Carey signed a law providing for the state takeover of court costs and a unified court budget.

With a unified budget and administration, court administrators hope to bring modern management techniques to the system and speed the pace of justice without compromising fairness.

But much depends on the quality of the person dispensing justice. So far, administrators and scholars have found it difficult, if not impossible, to measure the quality of a judge's performance in office and to tell what qualities in a lawyer would best equip him for the bench. No statistical evidence exists to show the best way of choosing judges, but those advocating change feel the process should be removed from partisan politics.

In the court reorganization package that Governor Carey introduced in May, he proposed that most judges who are now elected be appointed from a list of names approved by screening committees. Under his proposal, these committees would evaluate the qualification of prospective appointees, with the Governor, mayor or county executive then picking from this list.

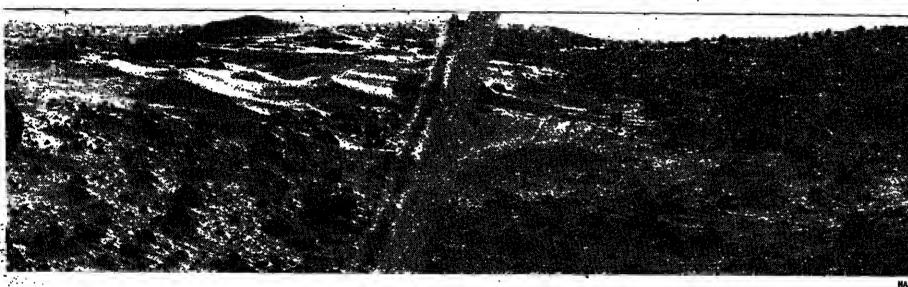

But as in past years, the Legislature showed no inclination for tinkering with such a politically sensitive issue. Instead, it modified the way Court of Appeals judges are

The mechanics of the selection process have to be worked out next year in enabling legislation, but the Legislature did decide on a 12-member nominating commission to be named by the Governor, chief judge and legislative

In the Assembly debate last week, Mark Siegal of Manhattan urged that this legislation spell out details limiting the number of names the commission submits to the Governor and placing a time limit on when the Governor can act. This, he said, would prevent the chief executive from "fishing" for a candidate he wants rather than taking the most highly qualified one.

"We must make sure we are not moving from the political backroom to the equally closed antechambers of

Round One Goes To the Monster

The joint Academy of Applied Science-New York Times expedition to Loch Ness has assumed less than monster proportions with the return to North America of most of the expedition's personnel, and the temporary disconnection of most of the sophisticated scientific equipment.

Still in place and working is a system consisting of an automatic camera linked to a sonar device and a computer, which will trigger the camera if anything large enough seems to be swimming by. Local residents who are associates of the academy are in charge of examining and servicing this equipment, and sending any exposed film to Boston for processing.

According to Dr. Robert Rines, leader of the expedition, the experience an far has successfully tested a number of types of equipment, some of which remain in place and will be manned again in the fall, when the salmon are expected to run in the loch. The fish might attract large creatures to the vicinity of the underwater television

Tying the Gag Another Way

The latest instance of a "gag" not on the covering press but on participants in a criminal trial, an issue that some lawyers and newsmen believe may become the next big fight on the First Amendment, occurred in New York Supreme Court last week.

Justice Martin Evans prohibited both the defense and prosecution lawyers from discussing with the press any aspect of a case io which a Black Muslim, Lewis 17X Dupree, is charged with fatally shooting a police officer. The judge refused to say publicly why he imposed the gag.

A receot Supreme Court ruling held that, io general, gags should not be imposed on the press in criminal trials, but the decisioo left unsettled the validity of gags on persons within the legal system. There has been a proliferation of such orders.

Judges usually say they impose gags to help assure the defendant a fair trial by preventing prejudicial publicity from reaching unsequestered jurors. Critics contend that such gags are contrary to the First Amendment protection of free expression.

It is widely recognized that some lawyers try to use their press contacts to promote their side of the case. At the same time, reporters traditionally have relied on lawyers for both sides for guidance in covering

Key Choice Due In Car Safety

Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman, baving conducted an inquiry into the issue, now has a Solomonic decision to make on behalf of the Federal Government: wbether to order that all new cars contain a safety device that might save as many as 10,000 lives a year but would cost the buying public about $1 billion.

The device is the air bag, a so-called

"passive" safeguard because it operates to prevent death and injury even if a driver does nothing to activate it.

Industry estimates of the actual cost of air bags have run as high as $350 per car, while advocates of air bags insist that tooling would bring the cost closer to $100. Such advocates include Ralph Nader, the insurance industry as a whole, and a number of Federal regulators. Safety standards imposed by existing law have coincided with and probably contributed to a reduction in the national fatality rate from 5.7 deaths per million car miles in 1966 to 3.5 last-year; it is also likely that reduced speed limits and gasoline shortages also were factors.

Opponents of air bags insist that if 70 percent of automobile occupants wore seat belts, the saving in lives would equal that expected from air bags, at no additional cost to the consumer. In fact, fewer than one in three drivers use the seat belts now in cars. and air bags advocates insist that even where belt-wearing is required by law, as it is in Australia and Ontario, many people decline to wear the belts.

In 1974, all new cars were required to be equipped with seat-belts interlocks, which prevented the cars from starting if passengers in the front seat were unbelted. The interlocks proved so unpopular that Congress abolished them by legislation in October of that year.

Some Wrongs Are Righted

By August of 1973 residents of St. Albans, Vt., were sufficiently disturbed by the influx of "hippies" into their town to hire Paul Lawrence, a police chief in a neighboring town, to work as an undercover narcotics detective. Mr. Lawrence got quick results: Within a year, he had made more than 100 acrests, and other communities were asking him to belp with similar problems. But other law enforcement officials became suspicious of his methods, because so many of those arrested claimed they were framed, and because a disproportionate number of his arrests were for heroin possession, an unlikely drug of abuse in a small town in Vermont. An investigation resulted in Mr. Lawrence's arrest and conviction on perjury charges; he had in fact framed his "defeodants." He is now serving a four to eight year term. Last week, a special state commission recommended that those arrested in the 240 cases brought by Mr. Lawrence be pardoned.

What Every New Yorker Should Know About Tuition at the City University— And What You Can Do About It.

The struggle for free tuition at the City University is not over.

A test case challeoging the legality of the Board of Higher Education's action in abandoning the free-tuition principle is now in the courts. At the same time, friends, students and alumni of the City University system are mobilizing to demand "parity"-equal treatmentin the funding of the City University of New York (CUNY) with that of the State University of New York (SUNY).

Here are seven facts you ought to know about bow the State of New York treats the Fact 2: New York State pays substantially the entire cost of SUNY four-year colleges but less than balf the cost of CUNY's senior colleges. The people of the City of New York make up the difference.

Fact 3: If the State of New York treated SUNY and CUNY equally-allocating at parity instead of at a ratio of 3 to 1-CUNY would have received at least $350 million for fiscal. year 1976-7 instead of $175 million it actually Fact 4: If CUNY had been allocated $350 million by the State, tree unition at the City University could have been saved.

Fact 5: Within the past 12 mooths the State allocated $600 million for construction at SUNY -including oew huildings; not one cent was appropriated for construction at CUNY. In fact, some $250 million of construction in progress at CUNY has been halted. These buildings cannot be completed without State funding.

Fact 6: If CUNY enjoyed parity with SUNY, thousands of students who must now quit school because they cannot afford tuition charges of up to $900 a year would still be in college and enrolling in the City University instead of huoting oo the street for non-existent jobs. Fact 7: Some financial assistance for CUNY studeots is available. But in order to get the maximum tuilion aid, family income cannot exceed $5,000 per year. Hardest hit hy the tui-1100 charge, according to the New York Times, will be families in the $11,000 to $17,000 income bracket. Students from these families can only expect tuition aid of about $100 per year.

Here's How You Can Help

On June 11 the State Legislature passed and on June 12 Governor Carey signed a law calling for the appointment by the Governor of a five member commission to recommend a fair formula for State aid to the CUNY and SUNY systems. THE NEW SCHOOL Center for New York City Affairs is pleased to announce the inauguration of two new graduate programs for working professionals in critical urban services leading to

The Master of Professional Studies Degree

These programs are intended primarily for professionals already employed in the field, but also serve the needs of those who wish to prepare for careers. The programs emphasize the skills and methodologies of problem-solving and analysis so critical for the sophisticated planners and managers required in the private and public sectors of these fields.

GERONTOLOGICAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

This graduate degree program—the first of its kind in the New York metropolitan area—is intended primarily for those now employed in city and state departments of senior citizen affairs, and voluntary agencies and senior centers specializing in health, recreation, nutrition, education, housing, employment, and other services for the aging.

HEALTH SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

This program is primarily designed for administrators in nursing homes, mental health centers, ambulatory health facilities, health maintenance organizations, voluntary health agencies, comprehensive health planning agencies, state and federal regulatory agencies, governmental health and mental health departments, and other health agencies.

> Applications are now being accepted for the fall semester beginning September 16, 1976.

For information, call (212) 741-7920, or mail the coupon below.

Students without a Bachelor's degree who have professional experience in the field may now earn both a Bachelor's and Master's degree in a combined BAMPS program.

A limited number of students not seeking a degree will be permitted to register for individual courses.

Classes will be held evenings and weekends at the New School's Greenwich Village campus, conveniently accessible by New York City public transit and PATH from New Jersey.

BankAmericard and Master Change accepted at registration.

force that will release a draft of its recommendations in mid-September. In Connecticut, both a legislative panel and a gubernatorial commission are considering the possibility of streamlining that state's complicated system. New York's college systems dwarf those of Connecticut and New Jersey. Connecticut's total college population of 150,000 is roughly equivalent to the enrollmeot anticipated for the scaleddown City University this fall. New Jersey's total bigher education budget of around $300 million is half that of only one part of New York's higher education budget, the State University's. In addition to the State University, the largest single educational system in the world. New York bas over 120 independent colleges and universi-New Jersey and Cor each have a few over 20.

Despite the differences in systems, the issues confronting the three states are similar.

The fixing of attention on higher education signifies the end of one clear line of development, expansioo, and the beginning of another, contraction. Only New Jersey's public colleges, with an anticipated enrollment increase of about 8 percent for the fall, are still in a growth cycle. The economies of New York and Coonecticut have resulted in arresting enrollment growth, with each state anticipatiog at most a growth of about

The three states now have extensive networks of public two-year, four-year and university campuses. Most of these schools are relatively new higher education in the Northeast having historically been offered in the private domain. Today not only do the vast majority of students attend public colleges - in New Jersey 80 percent, in Connecticut 62 perceot and in New York 63 percent - hut the independent colleges and universities in the three states are becoming increasingly dependent oo state monies for their survival.

Large new populations of students who do oot fit traditional molds and who challenge traditiocal assumptions about collegiate learning are populating the states' campuses. The average age of students at Essex County College in Newark is older than the of faculty New Jersey's newest state colleges,

Thirty-five is the average age at Empire State College, an experimental and fast-growing system within New York State University. These students either cannot or choose not to attend on a full-time basis. Often their purposes are strictly vocational. Reaching out to them frequently requires moving off camous and out of regular teaching schedules.

These new student bodies are presenting major educational questions across the region, as educators try to define what Ralph Dungan, New Jersey's Commissioner of Higher Education, calls tains both a liberal arts program and vocational preparation.

With money becoming tighter and colleges reducing enrollmeot, the rigidifying of a caste system within state systems is also taking place. Some universities have become harder to gain admission to than many private ones. At the community-college level, where full access is still a reality, there is some coocern that the quality of education is not as good as it

With the ootable exception of those at the City University, bigher education officials in the three states acknowledge retrenchment, but feel that the Legislatures have left their schools iotact for another year, But trouble lies ahead. The three states have pallid economic outlooks and shrinking revenue bases with which to support their systems. In the 1980's is an inevitable and large drop lo college-age students, a deciloe already depopulatiog elementary and junior high

The special task forces must etch out delicate and complicated policies, as education involves matters of the spirit as well as the pocketbook. The question of a possible merger of the State and City Uolversities in New York is a dramatic example. Advocates of City University's autocomy fear that a merger would create a huge monolith, losensitive and unrespossive to the urban and ethnic characteristics of City Uoiversity. Another crucial Issue relates to tenure. Although threats and attempts to fire tenured faculty have yet been unsuccessi region, the problem will become aggravated. As schools are unable to hire new teachers and current faculty move on to tenure, administrators will be unable to introduce oew young blood unless oew employment policies evolve.

As bigher education becomes the property of the state, it is seen as becoming vulnerable to the political concerns of legislators whose interests may conflict with the integrity of the schools they sponsor. (More Ideas & Trends, Page 16)

How to Keep the Poor Impoverished

Charities File Brief Against City Schools

he beadline in The Times said: "City Hall Basks in Summer Calm As Frenetic Fiscal Pace Eases." Undoubtedly, the Mayor and his aides, who bave wrestled with disaster for a year, deserve some respite. But the picture of placidity that the story cooveyed provided a sad contrast with what New York City teachers are feeling this summer.

As Chy Hall enjoys the relative calm, teachers are going to their mailboxes to see if a notice has arrived telling them that they no looger have a job. The Board of Education is in the process of sending such notices to thousands of teachers, who will now join 12,000 of their colleagues and 9,000 other Board of Education employees laid off since last summer in the ranks of the unemployed. For tens of thousands of other teachers, the Bicemennial summer is a period of anxiety as well. When they return to school in September, will they have classes of 40 or 50 or 60 students? Will there be just one guidance counselor for 1,000 children? Will teachers who want to teach and students who want to learn have access to libraries and laboratories - or, as in this past year, will doors be shut, books unread, expensive equipment uoused?

Teachers have reason for their fears. Although the State Legislature enacted a law to protect education from disproportionate cuts — and overrode the Governor's veto to do it — the city has ignored the law and imposed new cuts in education on top of last year's devastation. The Board of Education is now in court demanding that the city abide by the law, but ultimate resolution of this issue may not come before the new school term.

The court case, however, is telliog us a great deal about the changes in our city—and not just the economic changes. A friend-of-the-court brief has been filed by I I agencies which argues that the city must not be required to comply with the provisions of the Stavisky-Goodman Law and that the cuts in education should be allowed to stand. These 11 agencies do include one labor union. District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, but the others can generally be described as "do-gooders." i.e., that is the way the general public perceives them — and deservedly so, because they have done much over many years to sustain our citizens and to enhance the quality of life in our city. Heading the coalition are Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York and the Diocese of Brooklyn, the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. These major private, nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations have filed and made public a brief which can only be characterized as anti-education, although they would certainly not admit it.

Although the brief makes many technical arguments, its central thesis is that if Stavisky-Goodman is implemented and more than $100 million in city funds has to be added to the Board of Education's budget, the "human services" dependent oo city funds would be severely burt. By "human services" the 11 agencies clearly mean the boalth and social welfare services that the major charity agencies provide, overwhelmingly with

Io the aggregate, Catholic Charities, the Federation of Protestant Welfare Ageocies and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies sponsor and coordinate more than 600 ageocies and programs dispension various forms of health and welfare services. In 1975-76, the city hudget allocated $579.1 million to charitable institutions, the lion's share of which went to affiliates of these three organizations. While their brief challenges the assertion of the Board of Education that its inadequate 1976-77 budget will inevitably wreak further havoc on direct classroom services - and that the cuts it must make cannot come exclusively from headquarters administration - in fact these charitable agencies today are vast bureaucracies subject to far less public accountability and public control than the public agency they criticize. In their brief urging noncompliance with state law, these charities clearly have a vested interest. Much of that interest may well be legitimate, but the public should be aware that it exists. They do not speak to the court as disinterested observers, exclusively concerned with what is good for our city and its people. Moreover, while these charities may have started with the noblest of motives and cootimue to fulfill many noble goals, they also have an interest in preserving jobs in their own bureaucracies. There is no other way to explain their stance against the educatioo of children. For example, at one point to their brief, the agencies assert:

A "Stavisky-Goodman" type approach to the budgetary process insures that the apportionment of service dollars in the budget will be reflective of political clout rather than the true needs of this City's citizens. Needless to say, those groups without an organized voice, characteristically the poor in our society, will be effectively denied an adequate slice of the budgetary pie.

What the brief and its sponsors fail to note is that "the poor in our society" are in the public schools. Today more than 60 per ceot of the 1.1 million public school children in this city come from traditionally impoverished minority groups. The longer we deny such children an effective education, the longer will they and their families—their children and their childreo's childreo-be clients of the agencies operated by Catholic Charities, the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. The surest way to keep them poor and beoeficiaries of charity and charitable services is to keep them ill-educated. The only way out of the cycle of poverty is through educatioo. It is bard to believe our friends in the charitable world don't koow this.

It is also impossible to believe that these agencies would or could have taken the stand they have against education 10 or 20 years ago when the majority population of the public schools was white and middle- or working-class. Their constituents, their contributors, their boards, their executives would have vetoed such a stance. But the agencies are right: the poor do oot have ao organized voice. And the ageocies are not speaking for the poor. Because when such agencies undercut the fight to save education in this city, they are in effect blocking economic salvation for the very people they profess to serve. It is time that private charities stop using their political clout to destroy public

The charitable agencies would do well to heed the 12th century admonition of Maimonides: "Acticipate charity by preventing charity; assist the reduced fellow man either by a considerable gift or a sum of money or by teaching him a trade or by putting him in the way of business, so that be may earn an honest livelihood and oot be forced to the dreadful alternative of holding out bis hand for charity. This is the highest step and the summit of charity's golden ladder."

Interlude

The American electorate at the momeot seems like the audience at a double-feature picture show during a brief intermission before the main attraction.

The excitement of the battle for the Democratic nomination is over; Jimmy Carter and bis strategists are relatively relaxed planning their campaign; the scratching for delegates by President Ford and Ronald Reagan generates all the excitement of a minor wreetling match. Even the brief excitement created by Mr. Reagan's surprise selection of Sen. Richard S. Schweiker as his running mate hae waned as the two men try to make it appear that the originally astounding fusion of political opposites ie only an opti-political illusion.

Thie atrange interlude before next week's Republican National Convention and the subsequent main feature of the election campaign itself may offer a welcome respite to the vutere. Yet, even such a lull before the battle might be put to better use by the real and potential protagoniels than ie currently the case. Little that is happening affords a waiting public much opportunity to sharpen its perspective on what may really be important.

Mr. Ford's managers are still talking mainly about the ups and downs of their efforts to "lock up" their man's nomination, while the President continues to be more involved in fights over vetoes than in charting a positive

Messre. Reagan and Schweiker have added little to the voters' enlightenment about their political elopement by stating that they were, respectively, neither "kneejerk" extremist nor liberal. Little light is shed on the future policies of the two men by their latest accounting of how much they have already learned from each other -Mr. Reagan about the sensitivity of the unemployment issue and Senator Schweiker about the virtues of his oppositioo to school busing, gun control and abortion in hitherto unfamiliar conservative territory.

And Jimmy Carter, who is on solid ground in making an issue, as he put it, of "Ford'e continuation of Nixon's policies" rather than of "the dishonesty and the disgrace of Nixon," nevertheless seemed content to concentrate hie public statements during this political intermission on the promiee to put an end to "the erosion and weakening of the family structure."

Temporary surreoder to the seasonal and political dog days is probably inevitable, and perhaps even restorative of the voters' and the politicians' power to look reality in the face when the time comes-if only the candidates will not allow the pleasures of this amiable intermission to delude them about the serious issues that must soon be addressed.

The nation's cities remain under siege. Unemployment -up again last week-conatitutes a grave buman and economic blight. Lack of realism about the limitatione of energy foreshadows disaster. The cutting edge of the nation's paet leadership in health, education and science is being blunted. Flashes of violence in remote but influential parts of the world underscore the need for an understanding American leadership abroad.

These are the issues that demand attention, when the political maneuvering has been completed and the present intermission'a small-talk loses its temporary at-

Life of the Condor

The history of a proposed Navy missile called the Condor is enough to make the strongest taxpayer weep and leave the most ineistent optimist shaken by what it discloses about the procese by which new weapons are sometimes promoted in Washington.

The Condor, luvingly called the Silver Bullet around the Pentagon, is being developed as a television-guided "smart bomb" for the Navy. It is also Rockwell International's way of getting back into the lucrative missile busioess. Last fall, after the investment of hundreds of millions of dullars in the project, Condor was almost derailed because uf duubts both about its cost and its vulnerability to defensive systems. The program was saved-in part by a decision made by an official who had been admonished and fined for taking a holiday weekeod at a Rockwell resort in the Bahamas-but continued only on condition that those questions be answered satisfactorily,

In an effort to obtain an "independent study" of tbose issues, the Navy let a no-bid, no-competition contract on the vulnerability study to a defense consulting firm. Unfortunately for objectivity, the director of the coosultiog firm had been responsible for the Coodor in the Defense Department until 1973. Later, at the time the contract was let, he was serving ae a consultant to both Rockwell and the Navy. Even after the Defense Department had Information about this conflict, a second no-bid, nu-competition contract was given to the consulting firm, this time to study the cost problem.

Unsatisfied with a half-stacked deck, Rockwell people. went up to Capitol Hill to prepare for a vute on the Condor issue in the Senate Appropriations Committee and found guardians of the public purse there who were no more alert than the Defense ufficials they had been cuddling in northern Virginia. They descended upon a 22-year-old assistant to Senator Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, a member of the committee, and not only convinced her of the merits of Condor, but also gave her language favorable to the project for the Senator to insert into tha committee report.

The assistant passed it along to Senator Inouye, who incredibly took Rockwell'e language and put it in the report. His explanation was that he had not had time to attend committee hearings and thus had to rely on the judgment of hia assistant. Ultimately, the ploy didn't work end language imposing quality control practices on development of the Condor was written into the report, but no thanks to Rockwell International, the Pentagon or Senator Inouye.

The power tu expend billions of tax dollars on new weapons carries with it the responsibility to make intelligent and disinterested choices. That requires at least that the Pentagon develop effective regulations to enable Government officiale to resist the kind of pressure Rockwell International and many other firme employ. And it requires substantially more of a United States Senator than careless acceptance of anything an assistant seta before bim.

U.S. Generalissimo?

The House Armed Services Committee, apparently acting in the bicentennial spirit, has decided to grant relief for what it considers an injustice committed in 1799. A majority voted to give General Washington a sixth star to allow him to outrank the First and Second World Wars' five-star Generala.

In fact, it might require seven stars to fit Washingtoo into such a historic table of organization. Generals Marshall, Eieenhower, Bradley and MacArthur all became five-star Ganerals with the title of "General of the Army." But General Pershing was called "General of the Armies" which, theoretically, might have entitled him to a sixth star. Actually, General Washington was named a Lieutenant-General (three stars) only after he had retired from the White House to Mount Vernon. He accepted the honor on condition that it did not result in "any immediate charge opon the public." Grandiose ranks of Generalissimo and Field Marshal are sometimes self-conferred by dictators, former village tyrants, and leaders of assorted Ruritanias and Gilbert and Sullivan operas. We would euggest to the full Congress that General Washington's memory rests secure, "first in peace, first in war, first in the hearts of his countrymen." He needs no posthumous promotion.

India's Broken Pledges

When Prime Minister Indira Gandhi last year lovoked the emergency that curbed India's democracy, she hinted that her drastic measures were temporary: "I am eure that Internal conditions will speedily improve to enable us to dispeose with the proclamatioo." Later, she reiterated that democracy was "the only system which can keep the country together; the days of democracy in India have oot ended,'

Given those assurances, many in India and elsewhere were willing to give Jawaharlal Nehru's daughter the benefit of their doubts. Since then the world has unhappily witnessed the systematic destruction of India's freedom and much of its democratic structure.

 Upwards of 100,000 political prisoners remain in jail, a docile Supreme Court has upheld the Governnieot'e right to imprison its opponents without trial or hearing, and the Government in June extended that power for at least another year.

· Mrs. Gandhi imposed direct rule on the only two among India'a 22 states not controlled by her Congrese Party, sileocing two major remaining centers of opposition to her authoritarian rule.

 Press censorship wae made permanent, appeals to the courts against punishments decreed by the Goverament for ceneorship violations were barred, and official harassment eilenced nearly every critical journalistic voice, two opinion magazines having been the latest casualties last month. Harassment of foreign reporters has also increased, the most recent examples being the closing of the New Delhi office of the British Broadcasting Corporation and the expulsion of the correspondent for The Guardian and The Economist of Britain.

 The Government will present additional dractic constitutional changes to Parliament this month, including further emasculation of the powere of the onceindependent judiciary.

Thus, in thirteen months, Mre. Gandhi has gone far to ahroeate fundamental rights and dismantle democratic institutione that her father regarded as inviolate. And if she was right last year in saying that democracy was "the only system which can keep the country together," what are the implications of her actions for India's future?

Corn

You can smell corn pollen from Connecticut to Oregon, in August. It is like no other fragrance in the world, and it predates European settlement here by untold centuries. For the next few weeks it will hang heevy over the land, but it was here when Rome was young.

The origins of our curn are misted in the remote past. The most we can say ie that the American todiane developed it, in one of the great botanical achievements of all time. It undoubtedly came from a wild grass, now tentatively identified as Central American teosinte. Indiane of both Americas were growing sweet corn, pop com and meal corn of various strains when the first Europeans arrived. Long before that, it had passed the stage where it would revart to the wild type if left unteoded. Botanists can make only very rough estimetes

Developments of corn since Europeaos came here and began to grow it have been ootable, but they still remain minor in comparison with the original development. We have altered its appearance, greatly increased the siza of the ears and the total yield, changed its milliog qualities. But nubbing found in ancient cliff dwellings of the Southwest are little different from nubbins in almost any backyard corn patch of today. Whatever its origins, it now ie a food staple on every continent. And the fragrance of its pollen is known all over the world.

Of Corruption and Public Officials

To the Editor:

I read with interest your editorial of July 22 entitled "The Watergate Reform" which discussed the proposed creation of a permanent special prosecutor's office for the Federal Govern-

Your reservations about the new office are my reservationa, namely, "that it could conceivably fall into tha hands of an unscrupulous or overzealous persoo who might do oeedless injury to reputations, buman beiogs and institutions."

But there are also more general considerations which are often overlooked in the rush to reform our governmental agencies and reassure a skeptical public.

Special appointments are increaslogly becoming the accepted way of dealing with headlioes and demands for lovestigations. But the dramatic steps taken to satisfy the critics of our official investigatory agencies may further undermine what remaining confidence and respect the public has for those who have been charged by statute to do the job.

Perhsps with the advent of Watergate end the special circumetances that arose, we have set in motion a precedent for temporarily-replacing public officials or auperseding their official responeibilities in order to ensure that justice is done. However, every alleged scandal is not necessarily a Watergata and we should be careful - press, public, and government as well-of assuming that those charged with tha responsibility for investigating and prosecuting cannot be trusted to de their job. We seem to be moving away from the tradition that those officials elected by the people or appointed to office should remain accountable for their performaoce in effectively dealing with the public business. The term "cover-up" could become a reckless and destructive charge if we are always ready to believe the worst about our public officials. There has been so much talk about the corruption of our system that we have become defensive and have taken measures to reassure the public measures that often do nothing more than confirm the prevailing suspicion that our public officials cannot be left to do their job.

I make no defense for the Watergate gang, or the C.I.A., or any agency or group of public officials who commit illegal acts. But when allegations are made, we should be careful that our remedies of investigation and prosecution assume we still have an ongoing system capable of purging itself without necessarily resorting to special prosecutors—temporary or permanent.

Suggestion for Delegates To the Editor.

I have a modest but perhaps useful suggestion for the delegates to the Republican convention. If they wish to have any chance of electing a Republican President, let a sufficient bloc refuse to vote for either of the two leading candidates. Then let them bring forward a man who might win and serve well. Who? There might be many such candidates, but they would have to meet two conditions: (1) They. would have to be unknown or almost unknown to party politicians, and (2) they would bave to be individuals of integrity, talent and achievement in their own vocations, Such persons of character and respossible capacity would develop great appeal-and in a surprisingly short time.

G. W. PTERSON New Haveo, July 28, 1976

President Ford's Move.

To the Editor:

It seems that the boldest and most dariog move of the Presidential primary season is now in the hands of President Ford, if be ehould find his delegate covot slipping after Reagan's recent move. That move is for Ford to endorse Sepator Schweiker as his running mate as well Aside from the obvious benefits of bringing the Pennsylvania delegation back into his camp, President Ford will also have the uodeniable right to the title of party unifier, showing that if the Republicane cao't agree on a Presidential candidate, at least they can all line up behind the same Vice President.

ROBERT BROOKS Cambridge, Mass., July 30, 1976

Canada's Stand on Taiwan

To the Editor:

I wish to comment on Mr. Sulzberger's column "End of a Tradition" which appeared in The Times July 25. While pleased to note that he underlined other iseues infinitely mora damaging to the concept of "pure" Olympic Games, I must take exception to Mr. Sulzberger'e atatement that Prime Minister Trudeau "for primarily huckster reasons (to keep grain export markets in Communist Chine), broke the rules by disallowing Taiwan's competition under its official recorded nsme.

The Canadian stand vis-b-vis Taiwan and the Olympice is a reflection of present Canedian foreign policy and is consistent with practice as established six years ago: Canada haa not prohibited Taiwanese access to Canada -quite to the contrary-but we ask that while they are in Canads, Tsiwanese refrain from proclaiming publicly that they represent "Cbina." The International Olympic Committee has no grounds for its claim that the Canadien position came ea e complete surprise, since as a matter of courtesy, the Canadian Government warned the J.O.C. oo later than April 1975 that there might be a "problem" with the participation of Taiwan, if athletes of that country refused to drop their claim of representing China; in fact, they were refused entry into Canada for a pre-Olympic boxing tournament as early as Jenuary 1976 precisely because they would not drop their claim of "representing Chins." Surely the International Olympic Committee cannot say that it was taken by surprise!

Concerning our exports to China: for the past three years, the People's Republic of China has annually purchased less than 1.5 percent of total. Canadien exports. In the same time period, wheat sales to the P.R.C. have amounted to less than one-sixth of total Canadien wheat sales. And there are no current discussions between Canada end the P.R.C. ebout possible future wheat sales. It is highly unfair (to say the least) to depict Canada'e atand on Taiwan as a cynical move intended solely for monetary gain, especially given these figures; and I suggest that if Canada's decision to let or not to let representatives of Taiwan (under the name of "Chioa") into Canada, was dictated mainly by such mercantile concerns, it seems to me that Canada would have tsken the opposite decision. given the equally consistent and strong etsnd taken by the United States, by

The Peaceful and Warlike Atoms-Living Without Both

By Jacques-Yves Cousteau

The world was hrutally introduced to the nuclear age. Insteed of stealing fire from heaven, Prometheus had extracted it from the very heart of matter.

During the years that followed World War II, there was no doubt in my mind that once again progrese born out of the horrors of war would be tamed for peaceful uses. Taming atomic bombs into atomic power was just a modern way to melt Roman swords into plowshares.

In 1959, as director of the Oceanographic Institute io Monaço, I hosted tha first international conference on the disposal of nuclear waste. It was generally agreed that the quantities of nuclear waste to be produced in the future would be enormous. What to do with it was the hot issue. Listening to all the debates, my conclusions were:

First, the only participants who dared express doubts about the planned disposal operations did not belong to a nuclear agency or had nothing to gain from atomic prolifera-

Second, with few exceptions, the pros came from specialists in physics and chemietry, while the cons were expressed by biologiste and physiologists. Finally, when the Russiana violently opposed Western plans to dump wastes in the ocean, I reelized that the issue was clouded by politics ae well.

Simple, basic questions about actual efficiency, economic validity and safety remaio unanswered after 17 years. Nuclear technology has formidable implications on the way the world has to be run. No other single enterprise touches all the issues of our time: the need to avoid nuclear war, and the correspooding need to provide e basia for justice and equity among the communities of our planet; the right of all people to lead healthy and fulfilling lives; our right to social structurea founded on dignity and freedom; our relationship to the beautiful, intricate, fragile and increasingly imperiled world on whose survival our own depends; and, above all, the obligations we bear to our descendants.

We are able to carry on our "energy trip" only by cheating-either we hurn in a few decades the fossil carbon accumulated over hundreds of millions of years, or we draw an atomic check on our descendants, endangering almost forever natural balances indispensable for the survival of mankind.

Since the war, we have entangled ourselves in a questionable energy option—the atomic cycle—and it will become more difficult and more costly to switch to other solutions with each passing year.

Today, however, the world energy policy is in transition. The nuclear commitments being contemplated now ful people throughout the world are pausing to re-examine the assumptions on which those commitments have been huilt with so little diecussion.

Could we not also pause long enough to consider the feasibility, on an international scale, of developing renewable resources to meet the energy needs of all people in all nations? Would not the advancement of appropriate non-nuclear technologies be a better place to concentrate international effort than nuclear promotion. which already has euch powerful private and national interests behind it? Should we not take advantage of this chance to consider alternatives before plungiog ahead with a nuclear policy that may well prove, on riper examioation, to be mistaken or impracticable? Should we not take advantage of the possibility that radical changes in energy policy in a few countries, even in the United States alone, might remove the political support that now maintains nuclear mnmentum elsewhere? Might not the movement for a non-nuclear energy policy in the United States be translated into a etrong international commitment to develop and make freety available those technologies that respect social and biological constraints?

It is long past time to recognize the proliferation of reactors and of bombs as two intertwined aspects of the same problem; nonproliferation of reactors and reduction of strategic arme as two intertwined eclutions.

The toxic and explosive material produced in nuclear plants will bave to be meticulously maintained for periods as long as tena of millions of years-far longer than any one human culture has ever lacted. This means that extremely high levels of dedication, vigilance and quality control must be maintained without interruption, indefinitely, a cituation locally alien to the human condition. In other words, ease containment for future generatione means all nations participating in the atomic venture will have to be ruled by stable governments. and maintain reliable police forces for millions of years!

Despite the best efforts and Intentions of the people of the United Nations, human society is too diverse, national paesions too strong, human aggressiveness too deep-seated, for the peaceful and the warlike stom to stay divorced for long. We cannot emhrace one while abhorring the other; we must learn, if we want to live at all, to live without hoth.

Through Detente's Looking Glass

By C. L. Sulzberger

SPETSAIS, Greece-Recent Soviet statements and earlier Soviet actions. only recently made knowo indicate that Moscow is again cleverly trying to split a shaky NATO alliance hy making the most of Western diplomatic mistekes.

The Soviet chief, Leonid Brezhnev, has associated himself with Italians and other Europeans (by no means all leftwing) who object to warnings against permitting Communist ministers in Rome's Government, something that has not yet bappened despite important parliamentary appointments, but which may eventually occur.

Such Europeans have protested that American and other cautions constitute undue interference in other nations' governmental processes although Brezhnev, author of the "doctrine" advocatiog Moscow's right to interfere in "socialist" etates and responsible for the 1968, Czechoslovakian tragedy, is hardly the best advocate of his cause.

Nor is the sincerity of hie argument helped by last week's "Kommunist" in which Borie Ponomarev, candidate member of the Politburo, wrote: "The Soviet Union, more than ever, must remain an example for all Communist parties including those of the West."

This is scarcely the view of the Italian, Rumanian, Yugoslav, Chinese, Spanish or even the French Communist Parties and it came nowhere near prevailing at the recent European Communist conference in East Berlin. The Yugoslavs have shown for 28 years they mean business when they proclaim ideological independence.

The Rumanians, late-comers to Tito's club, have until now been independent on external affairs, although internally their system has provided few liberaiizing innovations. The Chinese have been near war with Russia. The Italian Communists have committed themselves to remaining in NATO if their party moves into the Government, and even though the French Communists still must prove the validity of their shift, they have scrapped that old touchstone, loyalty to "dictatorship of in a war because they feared their the proletariat."

Unfortunately Italy's principal allies have shown clumsiness, aimed at their local political considerations, which makes Brezhnev's wooing job easier. Washington has toughly warned against naming any Communist ministers in Rome. And then West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, to every- frightening independent Marxist parties one's astonishment, swung into line.

As recently as April, Schmidt told me he was confident the next Italian and warn they'll be blown up-if they cabinet would not admit Communists to any key positions and that Italy would surely stay in NATO even if it: might be necessary to exclude it from nuclear planning. Yet he recalled that he had argued against expelling Portugal last year, when Lisbon was dominated by pro-Communists and Henry Kissinger wanted to oust it from the

He remembered that Communist ministers hadn't lasted long in two allied; cabiners, Icelano and Porrugal, and I, got the impression he was far more frightened by the thought of a United States President Reagan than an Italian Minister of Public Works named Ber-

Now Schmidt has shifted his intitially cautious views and joined the Americans, British and French in supporting a threatened aid boycott if Rome designates any Communist ministers. Even many non-Communiet French thought this was going too far.

Now comes a new factual element. President Foro reports that the Soviet: Union has started to arm its intermediate-range ballistic missiles with multiple (MIRV) nuclear warheads. There are about 600 weapnna in this category. With the longest range capable of 3,400 miles, they threaten NATO Europe as well as China, but most ere pointed westward.

These SS-20 miesiles are truly mobile (truckborne) and can be shifted anywhere. They are modeled on the So viet SS-16 ICBM and can even strike the United States from the Soviet Union if a third stage is added. But their major threat nowadays is egainst Western Europe and they are being given triple MIRV warheads.

Finally, they are not classified as "strategic" weapons under SALT definitions and are therefore excluded from SALT negotiations. Thus Western Europe ie more than ever under the gun just as the pattern of European Communism is changing.

Nikita Khruehchev told me in September 1961 he was convinced that in any superpower showdown Britain, France and Italy would refuse to join "absolute destruction." He referred to his medium-range missiles and said the European allies are "figuratively hostages to us and a guarantee against

Is Moscow's new tactic to exploit Western awkwardness with national Communism while simultaneously back into the Soviet-dominated fold? Does it hope to scare them to death don't first get real power and then use it to pull out of NATO?

Medical Detectives: A Pretty Good Record

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr.

Their aymbol is a shoe with e hole worn through its sole by much trudging after clues. Some of their methods and habits of mind are those of the detective, but the mysteries they solve are medical and their dedication is to the prevention of disease.

They are the epidemiologists of the Federal Government's Ceoter for Disease Cootrot in Atlente. The center is considered one of the most skilled and sophieticated public health investigation units in the

The center'e ataff got a heavy workout last waek because of an outbreak of illness in Pennsylvania in which 25 persons died of pneumonia after ao American Legion conventioo, The epicode caused national concern partly because of the war that it might be the first outbreak of swine flu in a burgeoning epidemic. As the week ended, that fear had been dispelled, but the mystery of the outbreak remained uosolved.

Studying the pattern of the occurence of disease is the province of epidemiologists. Those at the Center for Disease Control call themselves "shoeleather epidemiologists," meaning that they go everywhere and do everything necessary to find the cause of a disease outbreak so that it can be ended.

"Really, what we're trying to do is for prevention," said Dr. Philip S. Brachman, director of the center's Bureau of Epidemiology. tn one case the Federal investigators traced a mysterious outbreak of hepatitie among high school students in a Michigan city to the glaze on doughnuts in one local bakery. The medical sleuths found that the man who applied the glaze-by hand - was just .eco ering from a case of the virus-caused liver dis-

The investigators were led to the doughnuts and to the bakery worker - through a painstaking process of interviewing all the teenage victims of the outbreak until they found the one common thread that linked all the cases. There was a bakery in the neighborhood and all of the youths who got ill liked to buy doughnuts on their way home from school-not just any doughnuts, glazed doughnute. None of the others was contaminated.

In another case, the center beloed the city of Riverside, Calif., solve the frightening puzzle of an epidemic of digestive tract infection that hit 1.600 persons in a total population of only 115,000. The cause was readily apparent-iofec-; tion with bacteria of the kind called salmonella. But it was not until the investigators surveyed the city almost block and matched the cases of illness egainet the citywide pattern of water maina that they identified the source of the outbreak, it was one particular well used in the city water system. When the well was closed down, the epidemic ceased.

Typhoid Outbreak

Similarly, the Center for Disease Control helped the city of New York early this year end a typhoid outbreak that first appeared to be spread across seven states. The common factor proved to be one particular restaurant in New York and, most probably, just one dishthe mashed potatoes prepared from a dry mix and served during the early winter.

The center's experts go everywhere to solve puzzles of disease, but they only enter an investigation at the request of local authorities. Most of the center's field investigators are young doctors a few years out of medical school who serve two-year tours of duty in what is called the Epidemic Intelligence Service.

They are backed up by the center's laboratory staff and facilities as well as by more experienced epecialists in all kiode of disease, especially those that are infectious. The center is considered an international resource for identifying viruses and other causes of infection.

Usually, according to Dr. Brachman, the cause of an outbreak is quickly determined, and it is the source of the germ that needs to be found. In some cases, like the American Legion outbreak, the cause Itself is the mystery.

One euch case occurred in the 1960's in Pontiac, Mich., and la still famous among members of the center's staff as "Pontiac Fever." It was a strange illness that beset the county bealth department building there. Everyone who worked in the : building seemed to get ill-with fever, chilis, aches and pains.

Authorities io Pontiac asked the Center for Disease Control for help and an officer of the Epidemic Intelligence Service was dispatched immediately. He got ill too. The center sent another-who also fell ill, and another, and another. Finally, after an intense and prolonged search, tha ceoter's experts narrowed the cause down to something that was being apread through the air by the huilding's air conditioning system. This discovery brought the outbreak to an eod, but the virus, bacterium, fungus or whatever it was that caused the fevers was never identified.

A visitor to the center last week acked one of their experts if the Peopsylvania outbreak hadn't sent them all to their file to review the Pontiec episode.

It wasn't necessary, said the scientist with a smile. Everyone at the center knows the Pontiac case by heart. It was one of their very few failures.

Libel Suits, Britain's Indoor Sport

BY ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON-American freedom of expression has its roots in English history, but the British press today ie subject to legal restraints that would astonish and alarm American editors.

The British Government sits like a brood ben, for example, on "secrets" of a kind that routinely become public ln Washington. There was an outcry recently when a magazine printed details of the political argument that led the Cabinet to abandon a promised welfare reform. But the on most often used against the press is tha law of libel.

To American eyes this eeems e lihel-happy country. Hardly a week passes without some public figure euing over an alleged defamation that would pass without notice io the United States. Just last week libel writs were served by the deputy leader of the Labor Party, Edward Short, and the Conservative shadow Foreign Secretary, Regioald Maudling.. tn these cases an American politician would probably have reckoned that by suing be would just dignify the charge and make himself look eilly. Now the prese bere faces a new threat from the law of libel-or rather so old threat, long dormaot but suddenly brought back to life. It is a proceeding for criminal libel, which seeks not to extract money dameges from an editor or publieher or writer, but to put him in prison. The case is extraordinary in terme not only of law but of personalities. The complainant is Sir James Goldsmith, a ricb, well-connected, powerful figure with large business interests in the United States and France as well as Britain. He is prosecuting the publishers, printers and editor of Privete Eye, a magazine of curiously mixed character.

Private Eye combines serioue investigative reporting—on police brutality, for instance, and finagling at the Benk of England-with college obscenity, crude raciel jokes and the cruel ineccuracies of a nasty gossip columnist. The magazine bas a large circulation by British standards: 100,000 copies twice a month.

Last December Private Eve carried a story about the Earl of Lucan, who has been missing since hls wife was assaulted and their nursemeid murdered in 1974. The article said some of Lord Lucan'e frieode, including Sir James, bad met at lunch the day efter the murder and, the article intimated. agreed not to help the police find the fugitive. Sir James said the article charged him, falsely, with conspiriog to obstruct justice. Private Eye now concedes that it wee loaccurate: Sir James was a friend of Lord Lucan's, but he wae not pres-

That is what Sir James did. Uoder an 1843 statute designed to prevent frivoloue libel prosecutions, he had to have permission of a High Court judge to bring the case, which he got in April. Then hie counsel had to convince a magistrate, who commits people for trial by jury on serious offenses, that on the facts alleged there was a case for the defeodants to answer.

Since May, the right-hander has been pitching as well as he has any time during his 10 distinguished seasons with New York. What he has to show for it is a 9-6 won-lost record and a string of no-decisions in which he yielded little to the other teams, got as little if not less on his side of the scoreboard, left the game and was not the pitcher of record. In his last 12 starts, going back to June 4, Seaver bas compiled this record: 100 2/3 innings pitched, 68 hits allowed, 19 earned runs, 19 walks, 94 strikeouts and an earned-run average of 1.69. He lyielded four runs in one of the 12 games, three runs in another and less than three in the other 10.

Those kinds of statistics should have produced about 10 victories in the 12 games.

Mailbox: American Women, East German Women and the Olympic Spirit

I reed with shame Neil Amdur's Aug. I article concerning the aoger of some of the American women Olympic athletes toward their East German counterparts. Apparently an important espect in the training of these American athletes letes has been overlooked if remarks that reek of jealousy, cattiness and cruelty cao so easily flow from their lips.

If, as Rod Strechen comments, American girls are more aware of their femininity than the East Germans are, and therefore could not be confused with eech other, then I question his definition of "feminimity." He seems to be referving to superficial qualities of appearance, qualities found to he insufficient by thinking individuals, to describe a cans? Where is the grace, the selfrespect, the humanity? Perhaps the East Germen women take their skills more eeriously and are capeble of viewing themselves as attractive, sexual women, not by their measurements, but because of who they are as human beings.

lo en era when many women end men are becoming more conscious of oppression in many torms, and are striving toward human liberation, it is disheart-ening to read about the lack of human compassion displayed by some of our

Olympic athletes.

The "sour-grapes" atlitude that has been demonstrated toward these fine athletes points up again the shortcomings of the Olympics as they currently

When Baseball Was a Sunday Picnic and a Dream

By ROBERT E. HOOD

It all started during the 1934 season when even the moon looked like a basehall henging seemless in the sky. Sometime that year a hero elipped into my mind: Joseph Michael Medwick, called Ducky by the fans and Muscles by his friends. Good old Ducky Wucky, the Muscular Magyar, the Hammerin Hun-

I grew up in Mildred, Pa., a town of 1.000 people guarded by a dike of green hills sprinkled with leurel in the sum-mer and flinty with snow in the winter.: The remnieness of the place-Wilkes-Barre was 48 miles and e world away - and the lack of heroic happenings created a perfect climate for

Robert E. Hood of Boy's Life, played college, semipro and Navy baseball. This recollection of small-town baseball is excerpted from his new book, "The Gashouse Gang" (William Morrow, $8.95). @ 1976 by Robert E. Hood. It is printed here with permission of the publisher.

The young mea of the town loved to play baseball, and local fans overpraised them, believing, in their adult fantasies, that their boys were "fast" enough to pley professional ball. For the most part, they were semipros at

But sometimes professional ringers were imported from the big coal cities, from Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, l.uzerne and Nanticoke, players with names like Comorosky and Witek, Sahol and Suder. On such a glorious Sunday, the old ball park would bulge and there would be e huge picnic and supper after the game, and later a dance.

The ball park stood on a hill above town, screened by a thick belt of trees from the nearby coal mine and its mounds of culm. A dirt road wound through the trees past clapboard houses. A huge old grandstand sat like a cathedral in the side of the hill, and the entire field was surrounded by a fence. It was a thing of beauty, this fence, towering with sparkling billboards:

"Shop at Hoffman's for Shoes and Suits" . . "Weed's Brewery—the Best Beer in Town" . . . "Hit This Sign and get a Free Haircut at Tony's Barber Shop" . . .

· I saw myself. Muscle's Medwick, stonding at the plote, big brown but cocked hehind my right ear, the bases loaded, the grandstond chonting: "We wont o hit, we want o hit, we want o hit." The pitch came in belt high, the bat o blur of power, the ball soaring over second base, rising right over the letter "H" in "Hoffman's" . . .

The grandstand was packed on a Fourth of July. The fans overflowed onto the hillside along the right-field foul line where men in straw hats sat in the shade drinking beer iced in tin tubs. The women were in the grandstand wearing their Sunday finest and fanning them selves against the heat caused by the son's hammering against the terpaper

After the game, the fans wetked down the hill to Connell's Park to enjoy the picnic supper. Men, women and children moved in a stream of dust that powdered the leaves of the trees that lined the road.

The ballplayers showed up leter, faces reddened from the sun, hair wet from showering and slick with Vaseline. They looked nest and powerful, and they didn't have to stand io line. They went right into the dining hall while we waited driven wild by the sight and smell of a country meal.

Inside you could see women and girls bustling with bot platters of meat and pitchers of steaming coffee. My mouth stillwaters for that fried chicken. Rustybrown and buttery looking, it oestled on the plate next to big fluffy dumplings, soowy mashed potatoes swimming in gravy and juicy com on the cob. Big platters of homemade bread— brown hread and white bread and raisin bread-moved up and down the long table, and hands reached out to lather it with melting butter.

All this wes washed down with glasses of iced-cold milk followed by a chunk of chocolate cake or a slice of apple pie a la mode. Afterward you wandered in the shady groves among the concession stands wetching edults pitch pennies for prizes, killing time until the dance started that evening.

A tune lingers in my mind, reminding me of my uncle, Skinny, who played pieno and had his own dance band. He taught me to play and hoped I'd hecome a concert planist someday. But that was loo prosaic a dream for a disciple of Muscles Medwick.

To the Sports Editor:

Having been here from Australia for more than yeer, I have seen many instances where male/female problems in sport heve arisen and have been overcome. You now question me nn my thoughts of the recent Rubin Harris-Dr. Renée Richards match in La Jolla [in which Dr. Richards, who formerly was known as Dr. Richard Raskiod. defeated Miss Harris in the fical of a and, incidentally, without protest. To say Renée was a male masquerading as a female for this tournament is ridiculous. What was there to gain? A big mooey prize? A world trip for two? Nn. Nothing but the fun and enjoyment of participating

Renée is a very, very fice person who close to me, my wife and children. She is very well liked in her tennis club, and in her medical profession is outstanding and highly respected.

The question of whather Renée is male or female is a very personal and private matter and should be respected by one and ell. Renée is a private person and individual who leads her life as she deems fit. Should there have been a mele/female change as people persist in saying, then the reason for change is again very personal and private and this must be respected.

To make a change of this nature would take a tremendous amount of mental torture and guts. I could not make that decision. Could Bobby Riggs?

Still, Orr was quite willing to let Chicago bear that bur-den. The Bruina wouldn't take the risk. "They wouldn't guarantee anything," Orr, who in turn couldn't parantee the Bruins the health of his knee.

When Orr speaks of the negotiations with Boston he acts as if he was betrayed. "I believe they don't think I can play anymore," he said indignantly. Chicago has its fingers crossed that Orr will recover, Meanwhile, Orr says:

Congressmen in Toyland

Jest 100 150

In Suite 2358 of the Rayburn Congressional office huilding, a young man was saying into a telephone: "Forty-five billion, one-hundred thirty-six million." and inasmuch as this was Washington, it stood to reason that he was talking about dollars. When he hung up, he said: "The sports hearing? That door in the corner." Beyood the door were they were joined by Dick Dozer of The Chicago Tribune and Bob Roesler of The New Orleans Times-Picayune. They were present to tell the House Select Committee on Professional Sports about the hirds and the bees and the reserve system and why the stork hasn't brought Washington a hasehall team.

George Cunningham of The Atlanta Journal, president of the Professional Football Writers of America, and Don Wilno, Trenton Times, secretary of the Hockey Writers Association, had also heen invited, hut didn't show. Neither did six of the 13 committee members. However Representative B. F. Sisk of California, the chairman, had a quorum with Frank Horton, John W. Wydler and Leo Zeferetti of New York, Gillis W. Loog of Louisiana, Joseph L. Fisher of Virginia and Ronald M. Mottl of Ohio.

Bernie Sisk likes haseball. A couple of years ago, when Washington people were trying to huy the San Diego Padres to move them to the Capital, Sisk actively supported the effort, but at the last momeot Ray Kroc strode through e golden arch and saved the team for Southern California. At the chairman's invitation, Dozer and Roesler read hrief opening statements. Cosell didn't have a statement prepared, but he made one denounced . . . . At this point a loud huzzer sounded, a quorum call. Chairman Sisk explained that he and his colleagues would bave to go vote on a bill now, but would he back in a few minutes. The Coogressmen withdrew.

"The power of the Congress of the United States!" whispered Dave Brady, who was covering the hearing for The Washington Post. "They dared to inter-rupt Howard Cosell"

Committee members returned and Howard resumed. He denounced the "rape" of cities like Seattle, Milwaukee and Washington by basehall carpetbaggers out for a quick huck. He pointed out that haseball was the only husiness exempt from both antitrust law and governmental oversight and urged that it either be stripped of its antitrust immunity or be regulated by a Federal sports authority. He hinted of potential scandal in connection with the million spent on the new Meadowlands sports complex in New Jersey, a state with impoverished cities.

Always in serene command of the mother tongue, never pausing for an iota of time to grope for a polysyllable, he exhibited the eloquence which—he has occasionally suggested—might some day enrich the Senate chamber on Cap-itol Hill He did not remove a shoe and pound the table with it, but when he said that players' salaries today represeoted e smaller percentage of the basehall income than in 1950, he rapped the table with emphatic knuckles.

When he stopped, the Congressmen were asked whether, in their judgment, the United States Senate was ready for Howard Cosell. They turned pale.

Most Congressional hearings hava two purposes: to determine the need for legislation and to get the members' names in the headlines. This inquiry has a third goal: to hring baseball back to Washington.

As for legislation, the tone of the members' questioos and remarks sug-

A Sermon by Charley

Representative Horton sounded unhappy about basehall's expansion into Canada when, he said, there were cities in the United States that wanted a team and could support one. He said Buffalo had been shortchanged. Representative Long from Louisiana said New Orieans should have a franchise for its Superdome. Rep. Zeferetti of Brooklyn mourns the Dodgers.

Representative Wydler said how ahout a city like, say, Buffalo owning a pro sports franchise and turning its operation over to knowledgeable individuals? Under such an arrangement, he suggested, the team couldn't be pulled out of town unless the voters were willing to let it go.

Len Koppett read a paragraph from The Times of Nov. 26, 1964, when basehall, frightened by the bonuses being paid to high school and college kids in a scramble for new talent, was talking about a free-agent draft that would give a club exclusive right to negotiate with a prospect. Said Oakland's Charley Finley, then in Kansas City, of the draft that was adopted a few weeks

"It would prohably save me money, hut that doesn't make it right. If I can't solve my financial problems without depriving a kid of his right to bar-gain, then I'd hetter get out of baseball in e hurry. It broke them up.

"But how can we get a team for : Washington?" a Congressman asked. "Your chairman had a plan," he was told. "Even though he is from California, he was going to hring San Diego's team here."

Chairman Sisk said, Hey, wait a minute, he'd heen named in a $72 million lawsuit over that. After the hearing he was asked to amplify. "When it looked as though the Padres were going to leave town," he said. "the city of Sao Diego sued for $72 millioo and I was named as one of the defendants. I was hurned in effigy out there."

"But those aren't your constituents, are they?" he was asked.
"No, I'm 400 or 500 miles north."

Giants Play Visitor Role Against Jets Tomorrow

Namath, Randy Rasmussen and Winston Hill of the Jets and Doug Van Horn and Willie Young of the Giants.

A rookie quarterback, Richard Todd of the Jets, has some vague notion that this game might mean something.

"I suppose," he explained, "it's like Alabama versus Auburn.

And Holtz says, "I have heard that this game carries some importance."

The game, really, has become more important to management and fans. The Jets have become wealthy. They don't feel the real or imagined slights of their rivals, the Giants, who, it was once reported (and denied), were instructed not to talk to the Jets.

Once, the Jets believed they had to win, because Giant-backers believed the Super Bowl victory of 1969 was a fluke. Then again, the Giants, ooce had the greatest season's-ticket sale in the world: 58,000 seats that were gobbled up for their Yankee Stadium games.

Now it is the Giaots who are trying to gain credibility. It is the Giants who must produce to keep their huge oew stadium filled after the initial curiosity Still, for meny Giant fans it is as if their heroes had never been away. They bought up virtually every seat in New Jersey within hours of the public offering. And the Giants continue to outdraw the Jets in faos attending practice, if that proves anything.

Much 'Head-Banging' Expected

On one level, then, the players are performing to see which club owns New York. Jobs have been won and lost beberserk on the sidelines during its playing. Owners have looked heavenward after bad plays by their players.

On the field this contest will probably see the most head-banging of any preseason game either club plays. The last Jet game was marked by "the loudest hitting I ever heard," according to the training-camp coordinator, Tim

The Giants' offensive line will be at-tempting to blow down the Jets' defec-

sive line to clear Csonka's path. The Jets' line is the same front four as last year. If the Jets' tackling hasn't improved, Csonka could have a big game, and so could Doug Kotar, sweeping to the outside. And if the Jets' linebackers and secondary don't control the flow of action, Morton could have a big game picking the Jets apart.

It may look strange to fans, but picking the Gisots apart is what Namath will ettempt to do. "Big play" is not now the major phrase in his football vocabulary. He will be throwing screens to Ed Marinaro and Lou Giamorma, the 5-foot-9-inch rookie from Utah State who was listed as the Jets' sixth halfback when camp opened but has moved up to No. 1 through defections, trades and injuries.

Of course, Namath will also be hurling to David Knight, Jerome Barkum and Rich Caster, and Marinaro and Giamoona will run as well as catch. But there will be more variety to the Jets' offensa this seasoo.

Namath will play into the third quarter, with Tood to finish. Only these two quarterbacks are expected to see action for the Jets, and Holtz indicated that Namath might play longer if the situation required his presence.

The Giants may take the wide runs away from the Jets. If so, then Marinaro may get his chance at the hard vardage up the middle. He wents to vindicate himself after an undistinguished career at Minnesots, where he was hardly em-

New Jets will see action at middle linebacker, where Greg Buttle, the rookie from Penn State, will take over, and at left lioebacker, to be held down by Rsy Kiog, an lowe State rookie. Harry Howard, a free agent, will start at one corner. There is a lot of inexperience on defense.

Yet, says Holtz, "this should be a great experience for the rookies, especially those who have oever beeo in New York traffic at 5 o'clock io the

Redskins Show Problems, Offensively and Defensively

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7-A problem about National Football League summertime exhibitions is perception. How much of what we perceive can we believe? Take last night's game here between Balti-more and Wash-Football N.F.L.'s top 10 teams, in which

November truths on display in August theo George Allen has concerns and Teddy Marchibroda has none.

"Our minds were some where else," said Alleo the Redskin coach after watching his offense gain but 134 yards and his defense collapse in the second half. Where?

"If you know you, teli me," said the 54-year-old Allen, who shows lices of stress in his handsome face in his 29th year of coaching football teams. But in the world confidence always conquers crisis, especially in August when the scores do not count, "We always want to win," he added.

The Colts, who won nine straight times last year be-fore tripping over the Steelers in the playoffs, remain ball world. Marchibroda, in his one season as head coech. fit together so well the players that Joe Thomes, the general manager, acquired in Iwo prior seasons that Balti-more seems likely to march over Miami, the key division rival, and into the playoffs Qualification is needed because it was an exhibition game, after all. Was it significant that the Colts' secand team offense wiped out the Redskins' second defense? Perhaps this display of depth has meaning if Washington's first-line defense, around which Allen built this team five years ago, is truly wear-hilarious. To save on a hotel base in Baltimore, the Redskins bad their pregame meal back in Carlisle at 2 P.M. Four frontoffice people are sharing one telephone, with three others cut off; the club has resigned from the C.E.P.O. scouting group to save the cost, and a dozen pleyers remain unsigned while shout-

With Bass gone, George needed a new comerback, loe Lavender, the best of the Philadelphia defensive backs, if that's saying much, had been dismissed from the Eagle camp by the new coach. Dick Vermell after a salary squabble. Lavender's demands were regarded as exorbitant.

Last Thursday. Allen got Lavender, who then signed a Redskin contract. Washington traded Manny Sistrunk, a reserve defensive tackle, and typically a bunch of Redskin future draft choices, a sixth, fifth and fourth in 1977, 1978 and 1979, respectively. A fourth draft choice in 1979 might be one of George Halas's

"I really thought that the Rams' offer would put the Bills in the playoffs," O.J. said, "but Mr. Wilson didn't think so. At least three of those players would walk in and start on the Bills, and two of them would start on any team in football. It's too bad it didn't go through because if the Bills and the Rams each made it to the Super Bowl, that would be the dream—both of us in the Super Bowl because of the trade."

Ralph Wilsoo also talked vaguely of the Rams adding some mooey to the

"If he wants $1 millioo," says Carroll Rosenbloom, "I'll give him $1 millioo." Financially, the Rams can afford O.J.'s expensive salary. They averaged 62,000 customers last season in their huge Coliseum but they still averaged nearly 30,000 empty seats that O.J. would fill. Even with no seats to sell in their sold-out Oakland Coliseum, the Raidera also have pursued O.J. as the catalyst in their obsession with winning the Super Bowl game. But the Raiders believe in the pass more than the run. O.J. dislikes toeir offense. "Then we'll change it," said John Maddeo, the Raiders' coach.

The Lamonica Deal

Madden talks to Lou Saban, the Bills' coach. Saban submitted a list of eight Raiders, saying he would accept any three plus two draft choices. But then Ralph Wilson upstaged Saban's authority. Raioh also remembers how Al Davis. the Raiders' clever owner, bad fleeced him in a trade for Daryle Lamonica a decade ago. Ralph Wilson wasn't about to get stung again.

"Rairb doesn't seem to want Oakland to bave O.J.," Al Davis says. If a trade does not materialize, Relph

Wilson will lose O.J. to retirement and get oo players in return. That is grounds for impeachment by the Bills fans. There seems to be no chaoce of O.J. return-ing to the Bills unless his wife. Marguerite, will agree to accompany bim to Buffalo this seasoo. She stayed in Los Ahgeles with their two school-age children last season, a situation which eopardized their marriage. She's beeo insistent oo remaining in Los Angeles

"We want to keep the kids in one school the whole year," O.J. says. "But with them there and me in Buffalo, it wasn't conducive to a lasting marriage. My wife and I talked it out. She oever said if I returned to Buffalo this year, that's it. but she waots me in Los Angeles with her and the kids."

It's typical of O.J. to nut his marriage ahead of his career. Not everybody does.
"But," says Al Davis, "Whose marriage isn't in trouble who's involved in tootball?"

Whatever, the important thing is to settle the O.J. situation. As he asks: "Am I not going to play football this season because the deal didn't go through?" Your move, commissioner.

THE POST OF THE PARTY OF THE PA PRICE NEW CARS C PRICED SECOND FEMORE BOSE STATE LAND, WESTER

Why didn't they tell you all this in the ads?

New cars don't seem that expensive in most manufacturers' advertising. That's because the prices therein are for the bare bones of a car. Where the jolt comes is in the new car showroom. That's where you have to pay to complete the job the factory started.

At Volvo, we sell a complete car. So we can assure you now that you won't have to pay extra for little extras like these: inside hood release, carpeting, trunk and glove compartment lights, trip odometer.

Or for big extras like these: tinted glass all around, seat belts (deluxe), electric rear window defroster, steel-belted radials, front power disc brakes. (We even give you two extra power disc brakes at no extra cost.)

Or for bucket seats, undercoating, electric clock, cigarette lighter, stereo speakers. Even the hidden compartment comes already hidden in our wagons.

And yet all these items are extra-cost equipment that you'll find in other showrooms if you look at enough new car price stickers.

You'll even find equipment that it costs you extra to remove and not replace. So why not come to a Volvo showroom instead. You'll find our prices aren't cheap because the cars start out from the Volvo factory with so much equipment standard. But you'll also discover there isn't nearly as much you have to add. And pay for in the process.

Why, three of our Volvo models come with air conditioning, standard. So there's only one option we're sure you'll want: a radio. That is all. O 1876 YOU'VE AT AMERICA CORPORATION. LEASING ADMILLEN.

Roberts and Lemon Will Be Enshrined

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y., Aug. 7 (AP)-Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon, standout right-handed pitchers during the 1950's, and four others will be formally inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame Monday in this sceoic village.

Both Roberts and Lemon were voted into the Hall by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The Veterans Committee selected Fred Lindstrom, a third baseman for John McGraw's New York Giants in the 1920's: the late Roger Connor, a pre-1900 home run king, and Cal Hubbard. former American League umpire. The special committee on Negro Leagues named the late Oscar Charleston.

The inductioo ceremooies, bringing the hooor list to 157, will be followed by an exhibition game between the New York Mets and Milwaukee Brewers at Doubleday Field. Roberts the Whiz Kid

Roberts, a right-hander who had a lively fastball and excellent control, spent only a half-season in the minor leagues in 1948 before joining the Philadelphia Phillies. He helped the 1950 Whiz Kids to the National League pennant by posting a 20-11 won-lost record, the first of six straight 20-victory seasons.

His best year was 1952, when he had a 28-7 record for the fourth-place Phillies. He later pitched for Baltimore, Houston and the Chicago Cubs, winding up his career in 1966 with a 19-season mark of 286-245.

Lemen, who began his career as a third baseman and outfielder, won 20 or more games seven times for the Cleveland Indians. His career mark over 13 seasons was 207-128, and he helped the Indians to American League titles in 1948 and 1954. He was a manager of the Kansas City Royals and now is the New York Yankees' pitching coach.

Lindstrom was the youngest player ever to appear in a World Series—1924, when he was 18. He had 10 hits in that Series, four off Walter Johnson, an original Hall of Famer. In 1930 he hit .379 with 22 homers and 106 runs batted in. He later played for Pittsburgh, the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn. Now 70 years old, he lives in Port Richey, Fla.

Mark Fidreih, Detroit's eccentric pitcher, after two Yankee homers beat him: "I telked to the ball, but that's life I guess."

Denny McLein, a former eccentric Tiger pitcher, on seeing Fidrych perform: "God bless him-I hope he wins so many games people completely forget about me."

Baseball's most animated umpire. Ron Luciano, answers his critics: "If you're serious 90 percent of the time, you'll go crazy out there." The last of the original Miami Dolphins, Howard Twilley, evaluates his chances of making the team: "I'm as quick as I ever was and as slow as I ever was." Dwight Stones, the outspoken high jumper, jokes about whether he had reported a death threat he received to the United States Olympic Committee; "I wouldn't be surprised if the threat came from

Jim Kaat of the Phillies, on why he pitches so rapidly: "If the game lasts more than two hours. my pitches turn into pumpkins."

Unsigned Players Dwindle the structure of the game. Ironically, it might even work against those players, espe-

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn convening a telephone conference call Nov. 8. getting 24 general

Baseball managers on the phone for the draft for negoti-ating rights to baseball's free agents and then finding out the player what he wants. However, if only one or there aren't any free agents. Club owners declared throughout the labor negotietions that abolishing the reserve system and creating any kind of player-inspired system would destroy the vary structure of the game. The reserve system, they asserted in a statement last and less-affinent clubs. Therein lies a danger that spring, "is probably the single most important development in the growth of baseball in the eyes of the public." "Without it, haseball, as we know it today, could not have developed into the na-tinnal pastime it has become, nor could it have grown in esteem over the decades," the statement went on.

Give the players the right to become free agents, the owners argued, and they all would flock to New York, Los Angeles and any other city where a team's nwner had a faw million dullars

lying around.
The flock, however, is ont flocking. Having entered April with 102 unsigned players, basehall has watched that number dwindle slowly but steadily. Today there are 34 unsigned players, noly 27 of whom are corrently playing in the majors.

Miller's Earlier Prediction

With recent developments the signing of eight players. iocinding Ken Holtzman, Carl-ton Fisk and Willie Montanez, in the last two weeks-that total figures to be reduced significantly by the time the season ends. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Associatioo, predicted last spring that no more than two dozen players would play nut their options and hecome free agents. It now seems possible that fewer than a dozen major leaguers will voluntarily change clubs this winter. In contrast, there figures to be perhaps 90 players who will be traded involuntarily this winter. Whatever the number of free agents, it doesn't threat-

cially the stars, who are free

Despite Free-Agent System

The star player most likely would want to sign with one of the better teams because. first, those teams would have a better shot at playing in the World Series, and, second, they probably would earn money and be able to pay

two star players populate the free-agent ponl, the maximum of 12 clubs could select negotiating rights to one player before the draft gets through too many of the 24 teams, thereby forcing the star to negotiate with mostly weaker

Miller raised in oegotiations, when he insisted that he couldn't negotiate away the rights of the players. It's con-ceivable that, if a Reggie Jackson didn't like the 12 clubs he had to deal with, he could sue the owners and the Players Association for hargaining his right to negotiate with all 24 teams.

A player of Jacksoo's cali-her could take another approach to such a problem. Having become a free agent at the eod of a season, he cerned that he had nn desire to play for certain teams and would consider oegotiating only with certain other teams. It then would be up to the "undesirable" teams to decide if the wanted possihly to waste their choices io selecting rights to Jackson. Or they could select him just to thwart his desires.

Actually, Jacksoo already has started putting that plan into practice. The Baltimore outfielder made clear both in Cleveland and Milwaukee last week that he wouldn't play in those cities. He will make no such statement in New York this weekend, hecause this is nne of the few places he would play for either the Yankees nr the

His nuher favored locations would seem to be Philadelphia, where his aging father lives, and the five West Coast cities—yes, even Oak-land, if Charles O. Finley, his old friend, came up with the right figures.

Jerry Kapstein isn't on the

he nevertheless will play a significant rola in determining how many free agents jump into the pool.

Kapstein is baseball's busiest agent, who represents 15 potential free agents, including five of Oakland's unsigned six players and four of Baltimore's seven. If anyone had the idea that Kapstein was following a strategy that would make all his players free at the end of the season, that thought was dispelled in the last two weeks when Hultzman signed with the Yankees and Fisk and Rick Burleson signed with the Boston Red Sox. The players received much mnre money for more years than they would have without the threat of free agency, of course, but they stayed with their teams nevertheless.

"There are several of my players who have made up their minds that they're going to be free agents," Kapstein said, not naming them, "but the nthers, if the club offers them fair contracts, we will sign. We're just trying to get fair contracts for each player."

Kapstein's clients are Fred Lynn of Boston; Bobby Grich, Wayne Garland, Ross Grim-sley and Mike Flanagan of the Baltimore Otioles; Garry Maddox and Dave Cash of the Philadelphia Phillies; Don Gullett of the Cincinnati Reds; Doyle Alexander of the New Ynrk Yankees; Steve Brye of the Minnesota Twios, and Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers, Bert Campaneris, Gene Tenace and Don Baylor of the Oakland

The Red Sox reported the other day that Lynn whuld agree to terms within a couple of days, hut Kapstein said that this was premature and optimistic. 'Lynn hasn't made up his mind one way or the other whether he wants to stay in

Jerry Kapstein, who has

Boston," the Virginia agent said of last year's rookie of the year and most valuable player. "There are some days he loves his teammates and wants to play in Boston, but then there are days he feels nn matter how much they offer him he wouldn't stay, because of the treatment he receives from the fans and the press. The more pressure put nn Lynn, the less chance that he'll stay with the Red Sox. If he's harassed, he won't stay. It will be important to see what the reaction to him is in the next couple

Kapstein said that there also was great pressure on Gullett in Cincinnati and that there had been a lot of pressure earlier on Grich in Baltimore, but that his unsigned players with the Yankees and the Phillies, clubs that havebig division leads, had no problems with the fans or the

A Strange Season For Seaver at 9-6

But Seaver won five, Inst two and had five no-decisinnsand he has not won a game since July 8. In his last four stars, the Mets have scored a total of four runs.

Seaver, who has been known to take defeat hard in the past, has been almost philosophical through his current spell, though each nodecisioo probbaly costs him $5,000.

"I won't let it bother me, period," he said. "If I got uptight, it could affect my that."

Seaver said if the situation had occurred five years ago, he probably would be climb-ing walls. "It's all a reflection of 1974," he said of his present calm. "After strug-gling through that, nothing seems as bad." That was the year he was troubled by a sciatic nerve in his back and ended the season with an II-II record. "If I was in my third or fourth year oow, it would be terribly frustrating," he said. "But with th eexperience of 1974, I have something to re-late to it. I just feel if I do my job well, regardless of the nutcome, I'm satisfied.

There are four columns of statistics that are important tn pitchers — wins, losses. innings pitched, earned-run average. If youtry to be coosistent with the last two, the others fall into place,"

Seaver has a career e.r.a. nf 2:46 in 2,632 innings pitched. It is the lowest figure for anyone with more than 2,000 inniogs pitched since the major leagues started keeping earned-run everages in 1912. His won-lost record is 177-102.

The right-hander's proposed three-year contract. still under consideration in the league office, provides inceotives for victories and earned-run average. Under its provisions, he receives a base salary of $225,000 a year. If he reaches 19 victories io a year, he would get a bonus of $5,000 every five days (his normal rotation) from that point until the end of the season, whether ha wins, loses, draws or doesn't

If he wins 16, 17 or 18 games in a season, his base salary could be cut 10 per-cent, and if he wins fewer than 16, it could be cut 20 percent. However, if his earned-run average is below 2.50, no matter how few victories he has he cannot he

Since Seaver has nine victories and only about 13 starts left in the season, it. is unlikely he will reach the 19-victories plateau. However, his current earned-run average of 2.48, if continued, would have him from a cut.

All Mrs. Higuchi needed was a steady par game today and she was virtually certain of victory. And that's the way it turned nut. Her solid hut unspectacular gald was marred only at the end with a 6 on the par-4 18th holes. Until then, the marks of her game had been the consistency of her chip shots and the accuracy of her putting. On the 3d, 10th and 14th holes her cips dropped with-

Nicklaus Is Not Alone at Top For Defense of P.G.A. Title

By JOHN S. RADOSTA

For more than a decade it has been Standard Operating Procedure to characterize any major golf tournament as Jack Nicklaus against the pield. But that lineup is not is inevitable any more, and Nicklaus will have his hands and this week in defending his title in the 58th Profescional Golfers' Association championship.

The toornament, with a field of 144, runs Thursday through Sunday at the Congressional Country Club in the Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md. site of the 1964 United States Open.

. It is the last of tha season'a Grand Slam events on the pro tour, the earlier ones being the Masters, which Ray Floyd, won: the United States Opao, which Jerry Pate wnn for his first professional title, and the British Open, where Johany Miller was the win-

The 1975 seasoo was one the most successful of Nicklaus's career: he won five tournaments, including the Masters for the fifth time and the P.G.A. for the fourth time. This season has been a letdown: althnugh he has finished among the top 10 in eight of the dozen tournaments he has played, Nicklaus has won only one event, the Tournameot Players Championabip, and that was 'way back in February. Facing the Lions

It is still too early to make the comparisoo, but unless Nicklaus reasserts his su-premacy soon, the railbirds may be placing him in the same category as Arnold Palmer—tha legendary win-oer whose outside business activities have eroded his competitiva edge.

Nicklaus plays only 16 or so tournaments a season, just eoough to keep the franchise warm, Next week he will be facing a horde of players who stay sharp with more frequent competition - and who are bungry to wio this major title.

Start with Johnny Miller, the 1973 United States Open champion, winner of a pair of desert tnurnaments this year before the British Open. Then there is Hubert Green, who won three straight tour-naments earlier this season.

Tom Weisknof blows hot and cold, but next week may turn up a hot cycle. Hale Irwin, the 1974 United States Open champion and winner of two events this season, is always strong in major turnaments. Lee Trevino, the 1974 P.G.A. champion, is returning after a layoff forced by a back injury.

Jack Nicklaus

Then there are Jerry Pate, who followed his Open victory with noe in the Canadian npen; Al Geiberger, Floyd, Ruger Maltbie and Tom Kite. For the first time in hia 22 years as a golf professional, Arnold Palmer is coming into the P.G.A. Championship nnt by qualifying, but as an invited guest. This season Palmer has earned none of the exemp-tion points that would qualify bim for the P.G.A. Cham-pionship. lo 13 events he has missed the 36-hnle cut four times, and bis best finish was a tie for 15th at Tallahassee. He has won only $9,969 and he atands 123d on the money list. He has not won an American tour evant since the Desert Classic of 1973.

Not Good Enough Palmer has won the other units of the Grand Slam—the Maaters four times, the British Open twice and the Unit-

States Open once. Although he has not woo the P.G.A., he has almost always been formidable — he has been runnerup three times.
Io 1964, at Culumbus, Ohio, Palmer became the first player to shoot four rounds the 60's without winning. He finished three shots behind Bobby Nichols's record

This season the executive committee in the P.G.A. recognized "it wouldn't seem like the P.G.A. Championship witbout Arnold Palmer," and an they extended him the courtesy of an invitatino. Palmer said he would prefer to have played his way in, but he accepted any way. In-vitations have been given to only two other players, Doug Sanders and Munte Kaser in Despite its name, the P.G.A.

Whenever the name of the Congressinoal Country Club comes up it evokes an instant recollection of the 1964 United States Open with Ken Venturi, on the verge of collapse, overcoming the inferno of mid-June weather to win. In the deep hollows of that hilly golf course, the temperatures were reported to be around 115 degrees. The first-aid stations were canvas-to-caovas with heatprostration cases.

Design by Sparkman & Stephens selected by the New York Yacht Club for new nue-design offshore racing class.

New Design Picked By New York Y.C.

The New York 50 is here on paper, at least. The New York Yacht Club has selected a design by Sparkman & Stephens for its trendsetting one-design offshore racing clasa.

yacbt, measures which nearly 50 feet on Boating the center line and 36 feet 7 inches on the waterline, was selected from plaos submitted by 18 designers in the United States and abroad. The two other finalists were designs by Ted Hood of Marblehaad, Mass., and Robert E. Derecktor of Mamaroneck, N. Y. For Olin J. Stepheos. the 67-year-old head of S. & S., the commission arrives 40 years after his design of the last great New York Yacht Club one-design class, the New York 32. From his drafting table also have come the designs for four of America's five winning I2-Meters, and construction begins next month on his next America's Cup contender, Enterprise. Stephens describes the New York 50 as "evolutionary, not revolutionary . . . It's a wholesome cruising boat, the type that critics of the International Offshore Rules prefer, with racing in the grandprix sense secondary to cruisiog." Commodore Robert McCu lough of the New York Yacht Club says some might have expected a "radical boat. But we didn't want this. We wanted a good, fast boat with more uses than just as a racing machine. And we hope yachtsmen all over the world, who are interested in good, level (head-to-head) racing, will join us in this."

McCullough saya yards soon will be invited to submit construction bids for anywhere from six to 20 boats, which would be built over the winter and, hopefully, the first fleet would be racing on Long Ialand Sound this spring.

The yacht club decided last December to start a new onedesign class for level racing because of some diaturbing development in recent years:

The trend in design under the I.O.R. toward boats so stripped-out for weight considerations that they were not usable for cruising.

The high obsolescence rate of boats designed under the I.O.R. rule, which encourages development rather than equitable handicapping designs. With the New York 50, expected to cost in the $200,000 range, the hull material will be either fiber glass or aluminum. Plans include accommodations for seveo persons, two heads with ahowers, and a diesel engine. The yacht, a keel-centerboard design, draws 5 feet 6 inches with the board up, making it accessible to the Intracostal Waterway and shoal areas of the Chesapeake Bay and the Bahamas. With the board down, it draws 8 feet 8 inches, to provide good windward performance.

The club also wanted the boat to be manageable by a husband-and-wife team, so the sail area was limited to 1.114 square feet. The beam is generous at 14 feet 3 inches and the I.O.R. rating should be about 35.9, says Stephens, "which is low," considering the size and potential apeed of the boat."

There is no business lika show business, all right. In the battle of the boat shows, the in-the-water boat ahow group has made a strategic retreat, moving its fifth nual North Atlantic Boat Show in Stamford, Conn., up one week to Sept. 9-12. This leaves a clear field for the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers' entry into io-the-water show business Sept. 16-J9 in nearby Norwalk.

Meanwhile, Long Island's first in-the-water ahow will follow Sept. 23-26 at the Anchorage Marina in Linden-hurst. If you're wondering why all the commotion, the New York metropolitan area is the top boating market in the country and fall has evolved into a prime buying seasnn for spring deliveries.

Jnseph Ummarino of the York Athletic Club Yacht Club has won the 62d annual Block Island predicted-ing contest in his 35foot cruiser Sea Dancer. Joseph Brocia Jr. of the Huguenot Yacht Club placed second over the 103-mile team trophy, followed by the New York Yacht Club team.

Ramirez Defeats Richey; Connors Match Rained O

NORTH CONWAY, N. H. Aug. 7-Paul Ramirez was prbably one of the few people who were not disheartened when a chili rain coated the red clay courts of this tiny mountain community early today. Rain packs clay well, making it slow and heavy to play on, and such a surface suits the 23-year-old Mexicon inst fine.

It suited him well enough to ellow him to make his opponent, Cliff Richey, look like an amteur in a semilfinal match of the $100,000 Volvo ioternational tennis tournament. Ramirez said later. "I like the court when it is just a little wet. I hit he ball a lot-I got more feel today in my game.

It was a game that was not expected to end in less than an hour as it did. The unseeded Richey had shown top form yesterady in demoliahing the second-seeded Manuel Grantes, 6-4, 6-3.

But the 29-year-old Texan was hopelessly outplayed by the peripatetic Ramirez, who is seeded fourth in this tournament. Ramirez would engage his opponent in long rallies, then draw him to the net with a short ona and then hit winners past Ricb-

Toward the end of the first set, Richey just accomed to wither, to the dismay of the crowd of 8,000 that had lustily cheered him yesterday. The speed that had dazzled spectators was gone.

.C.T. Now Serving Profit Sharing Plan

By CHARLES FRIEDMAN Davies would not say how

World Championship Tennis, which says it has made money in four of the last five years, is offering a profitsharing plan to its players.

This is a "firat" for teonis, Under the plan, players will accumulate "units," according to the number of tournaments they sign up for on the W.C.T. tour and how well they do in them.

Why is the organization being so generous? Mike Davies, executive director and a former world-class player, saya that, first, the plan "is an added incentive to the players" and, second, he hopes that it will make them feel "more responsible for tournament appearances." "Other sports have retirement programs or benefit plans that are not feasible under the structure of tennis," he says. "This plan will offer a player the opportunity auccess of W.C.T.

much money W. C. T. was making. The profit sharing, he said, will come out of revenue from its tournament operations, which include fees, televisioo income, ticket salea, films, concessions, programs and the like. W.C.T. has other operations-leaching schools, endorsement contracts, tennis clubs and resort developments. Those will not be included io the plan.

Money received by the players under the plao will be in addition to the regular prize money and bonuses awarded on the tour, Davies explained. If there is oo profit for the year, he said, a player can retain his units for the following year.

"In this manner, the men who help build W.C.T. will share in its future success, he aaid. Had the plan been in effect this year, said Davies, a middle-echelon player like Bob Hewitt of South Africa would have realized about $10,000 from his units, even though he suffered from ao elbow problem and could not do well.

Next year, however, W.C.T. ia reducing its number of players to 22—from 57 this year and 84 in 1975. They will battle for $2.5 million in prize mnney.

The reason for the cutdown, Davies said, is that we want to go with the very best in the world." Won't that present an unemployment problem?

"I doo't think so," he replied. "It looks like the Grand Prix series is going to expand, and there will probably be at least a tournament each week." W.C.T., owned by Lamar Hunt and based in Dallas, had considered merging with the Grand Prix. But talks collapsed on the issue of conflictiog tournament dates, The 1977 W.C.T. schedule will consist of the World

Series of Tennis (II tournaments of $100,000 each, plus the United States pro indoor for $200,000, the world doubles championship for $200,000 and the W.C.T. singles finals for $200,000); the Tnurnament of Champions for $200,000; the Challenge Cup for $350,000; the Aetna World Cup between United States and Australian teams for $100,000 and the

The big mystery of the Moomouth meeting is the overall increase in business. Since the start of the meet on June 11, daily average et-tendance is up 7.8 percent over last year, and betting is up 6.3 percent.

"We can't reslly pinpoint the reason," said Ray Haight, a track executive, "There's no way to explain it. There are so many negative factors, maybe it's because the economy is getting better."

The inhibiting factors include concurrent night-time thoroughbred racing at Atlantic City, 90 miles away; headto-head daytime competition with harness racing at Free-hold Raceway, only 20 miles away, and skimpler patronage at several beach areas that bave lost some of their prestige over the years.

ing on the surface so we first approached them with wet flies and sinking lines, Later, io desperatioo, we resorted to deep-trolled spoons or spinners and worms. Nothing worked.

There was a possibility that the whitefish, which the lake also holds, could be caught at dusk on flies, but that en-terprise fell through also, for the wind refused to die with the sun and it is almost impossible to spot surface-cruising whitefish unless the water is glass-smooth.

> Special to The New York Times ROSLYN, L. L. Aug. 7— Nancy Fuld of New York defeated Lisa Levins of Massapequa, L. I., 6-4, 6-1, today to win the Long Island women's tennis championship at the Tower Tennis club, Steinkraus, who retired from active competition after the 1972 Games in Munich, "Of course, we would like to have had the jumpers win a medal. "But we had to be realistic about it. We did not have as good a crop of horses in Montreal as we did in the 1972 Games when we won the silver medal."

While Steinkraus as an exjumper-he won the individual gold medal in the 1968 Games in Mexico City-obviously has a deep interest in the jumping team, he was enthusiastic ebout performance of the dressage squad. The jumpers and the threeday team always have been important factors in any competitioo. Not so the dressage squad, which has been play-ing a game of catch-up with the rest of the world.

The dressage riders won the bronze medal with 4,647 points, behind West Germany, which won with 5,155 and Switzerland, which finished second with 4,684. Christine Stueckelberger of Switzerland won the individual gold medal. "You know," Steinkraus said, "the Russians confidently expected to win the branze medal and most of the other dressage riders in the world agreed. So the per formance of our team was all the more surprising. I couldn't be happier."

The three members of the dressage team were Edith Master, Hilda Gurney and Mrs. Dorothy Morkis. Mrs. Morkis finished fifth, Miss Gurney 10th and Miss Master

In the dressage competition the final 12 contestants are summoned for a rideoff to determine the final placings. This marked the first time since the U.S.E.T. was founded in its present form after World War II that an American rider has been in the rideoff.

"What makes it even more surprising is that we had two in the rideoff," said Stein-kraus. "It was, indeed, a fine performance. In fact I believe marked the high point for us in the Olympics since the present U.S.E.T. was founded." the four medals we won

In the team competition, West Germany finished far behind the U.S.E.T. in second place and Australia was third. The U.S.E.T. had 441.00 points to 584.60 for West Germany and 599.54 for Australia.

"The three-day team was the world champion and Dsvidsoo was the individual world champion," Steinkraus said. "so we were expected to make a strong performance. But the hig point is that we showed the rest of the teams thta our world victories were not flukes."

In the individual jumping competition, Alwin Shocke-moehle of West Germany. one of the favorites, woo the gold medal. He scored the only clean rounds in the competition. Frank Chapot, captain of the U.S.E.T., was tied for fifth place.

gique Internetional. Each dog was worked individually. When the animal completed an exercise, Schellenberg addressed the spectators and gave a critique of the performance.

In tracking, the dog had to retrace the path of a per-son, ranging from 400-to-1,500 yards, after a period from 20-to-180 minutes and he had to find a couple of objects. In obedience the exercises were similar to those in C.D.X. (companion dog excellent)—work, heel, sit, down, recall, retrieve over a 39-inch wall, etc. In protection, the dog, without his handler's assistance, had to respond in critical situations, like harking when he found a hidden person, preventing an assault on his handler, stopping a "criminal" from escaping fighting fearlessly hut stopping immediately, when the "crimical" gave

"I've been training him since he was 6 weeks old," said Seaman, treasurer of the Long Island cluh."He's hlind in his right eye and still able to follow my hand signals."

The Rottweiler earned both the SchH I and SchH II degrees, even though Seaman never had trained him to tha II exercises. "He did so well io the I, the judge suggested I let him try for the higher degree and darued if he didn't make it," said Seaman. For the I, the dog had a 93 in tracking, 92 in obedience and 91 in protection, for 276, and for the II, a 92, 80, 83-years of age and that 60 percent earn $20,000 or more a year.

"We were o little surprised at the income figures," Sonderegger says. "Canoeing is a rather inexpensive form of recreation, but it doesn't seem to be a low-income activity. The data appear to say that it's part of the middle-class fascination with ecology, with getting back to nature."

Indications of the popularity of the sport come from all quarters. Most major cities now have thriving canoe clubs, some with a fixation with racing or white water but most oriented toward family-style outings. There are growing numbers of canoe rental agencies for those just getting their feet wet in the game; they offer not. only canoes by the day but also transportation back to the point of departure and, in some cases, bus transportation from o nearby city.

The accompanying article tells of one family's first canoe experience. Further information-including equipment prices, rental costs and canoeing sites-appears on Page 12.

White water" is one of those expressions that struck fear (and a little envy) in my heart, and it seemed no more likely that I'd try it than skydlving motorcycle racing or driving pltons in a rock face to reach a summit

But here I was with three sons getting into their teens, yearning for an outdoor experience we could share (never having had one with my own father, unless you count a Yankee game), anxious to transmit to them the lore I had picked up 20 years before in the Army and discarded long

I know my kids, however, and accepted the fact that they were too lazy for three days of biking and too restless for three days of camping. I needed an activity that would excite them at dawn, keep them from one another's throats doring the day and exhaust them by nightfall. I thought of canoeing.

The last time I paddled a cance was on a quiet Adiroodack lake, long before I was married. That fixed my notion of canoeing, just as 'Deliverance" fixed my wife's. She didn't like our going out there where a river would

Having somehow acquired a Rand McNahy outdoor recreation guide, I looked up "canoeing" under "Virginia," our oeighboring state, and learned that one could enjoy an "excursion of from 30 to 40 miles" on the Shenandoah River, The listing didn't even talk of paddling but of "carefree float trips." It turned out that good canoeing rivers, and outfitters, exist all up and down the Eastern Seaboard.

I learned of the existence of a river outfitter in Luray, about an hour and a half from Washington; and found out by phone that, for less than $10 a day, I could rent a canoe, life preservers, a tent and all the rest of the basic paraphernalis. The man at the other end of the Ere, exuding compassion and competence, also told me that, for another $10, he would truck us upriver and meet us at some prearranged point downstream.

The boys and I stopped by at the local surplus store and acquired rucksacks, mess gear, flashlights, tarpaulins and Sterno stoves for an investment of about $25. On the way home we stopped at the supermarket and, calculating shrewdly, purchased enough canned and powdered food to last us for three days in the wilder-

The oext morning we set out, drove over the Blue Ridge Mountains to Luray, crossed the river, rode downstream on a dusty gravel road and parked in an open field behind what looked like a country store. The dozens of aluminum canoes stacked upside down told us we were at Shenandoah River

With little fuss, I negotiated the rental of our equipment, received instruction on the selection of paddles of proper length and was presented with several copies of a sketchy map of the river. The canoe was then tied to the top of a small van, and the four of us were driven back upstream to the Luray bridge, where we were left to ourselves and the lazy current.

After unloading, we placed our gear in the canoe, changed to our shorts, ate a candy bar for energy and, in response to a warning I didn't yet understand, put sneakers on our bare feet. Then we pushed off, with me sitting commandingly in the stern. We hadn't gone 10 yards before I saw ahead of us a patch of telitale ripples. "White water," I thought, and suddenly felt a bit like Captain Ahab, and a bit like Charlie Brown. Indomitable, I ordered my crew forward.

The consequence was that, within a few minutes, we were hung up on a bed of stones that lay some eight or 10 inches beneath the surface. I jumped out of the canoe to push us off, lightening the boat thereby, as well as providing some force. When the cance continued to stick, my oldest son leaped out of the bow and pushed,

I understood immediately, then, why we needed the sneakers. Without them, our feet would have been cut to shreds. The speakers received a great deal of wear during our three days on the river.

We were quickly affort after our push, but fastened a few minutes later to another bed of stones. This time the cance rotated slowly in the water, pivoting oo some high point of rock, as we tried to release it and redirect it along the line of the current.

It was at this moment that I coocluded we had somehow been led to a false conception. This was not going Continued on Page 12 only in the Northeast." Lusich and other observers estimate that more than 75,000 people across the country tube regularly. One event, "The Fahulous Point Pleasant (N.J.) Atlantic Ocean Inner Tube Grand Prix," drew 50,000 spectators last summer. The organizers expect a crowd twice that size and 150 competitors—each paying a $25 entry fee-when the fourth annual grand prix takes place on Sept. 12. (The contestants start off by plunging into the surf, pulling their inflated tubes with them and swimming out to marker buoys. They then scramble onto their tubes and paddle with their arms-back to shore on the incoming waves.)

River tubing requires special skills. One gets aboard at water's edge in a current by finding a solid footing, jumping up slightly, then plopping right onto the tube bottom through the hole, sinking almost to the armpits. It is necessary to "jump and plop" in a strong current, because if you simply sit down decorously the tube moves downstream, you lose your footing, and you may lose the tube

Once afloat, the best place for your feet is up in the air, going downstream with the feet danging in the water is an excellent way to acquire crushed shins against submerged rocks, or to be tipped right out of the tube. The best mode of travel is the partial imitation of a crab: Keep sideways to the current. If you float feet first, the downstream view is blocked. and you don't want to miss advance warming of rapids.

When tubers hit white water, they save wear and tear on the posterior by arching the back slightly, raising the posterior level with the bottom of the tube. This posture can be relaxed whenever there are quiet stretches of

But the single most important aspect to remember is balance. An inner tube will tip at any point in its circumference; and the first rule is to keep the weight evenly distributed. Women have a slight advantage over men in this respect, since their center of bal-ance is in the hips, while men carry more heft in the upper torso.

For serious tubing, as practiced, for example, on the more turbulent stretches of the Esopus Creek at Phoenica in New York's northern Catskills, it's advisable to purchase equipment costing $100 or more. The basic uniform begins with a United States Coast Guard-approved flotation device, otherwise known as a life preserver, and includes a wet sait tunic covering the upper body and thighs, plus gloves and boots or sneakers, for protection from the chilly water and rocks. Another reason for protection is the incidence of "tuber's rash," caused by the constant rubbing of bare arms against the tube while paddling with the arms or a paddle. Also recommended is a kavaker's helmet. As for the tube itself, the best kind, according to an employee of General Time in New

Shirley had equipped herself with a tube but little else when she took her first tube run-on a deceptively. peaceful stretch of the Esopus Creek (which is actually a river). At first, she ambled downstream for 100 yards. thrilled by an apparent immediate. mastery of the art. But then she was confronted by her first run of rapids. She lost control, panicked and bounced off several boulders with her posterior Recovering her composure, she then arched her back slightly to lift herself and began to paddle furiously with her arms to avoid the rocks?

She soon passed into a stretch of quiet water and a momentary feeling! of triumph. Then the cold struck those parts of her that had been constantly in the frield water bottom and hands. With a beginner's foolbardiness, she was wearing only a hikini.

Although the sport can be practiced in any river or stream, the beginner should pick quiet stretches far from rapids. The Esopus, for example, from the town of Mount Tremper through Cold Brook and toward its mouth at the Ashokan Reservoir in Bolceville, is almost as languid as the Mississippi - even though a few sharp turns and rocky obstacles crop up. (No tubing is permitted in the reservoir.)

At Phoenicia, however, the creek offers an absolutely daredevil run that York City, is that used on tractor trail- is definitely not for beginners or trip, the tube should be placed in the water at a launching point on Wood- at the bemused visitors of two campland Valley Road, near the Phoenicla ski area lodge, preferably at a spotimmediately in front of the old wooden: Penn Central railroad bridge. From there, the waters bounde the fuber southward around a pleasant right-hand curve, under a vehicular bridge and then into treacherous rapids that sprint, roll and boil alongside the railroad tracks for about 100 yards.

In the slightly less than five miles between Phoenicia and the next village, Mount Tremper, there are 10 more small rapids—some shallow and broad, some narrow, fast and deepall requiring constant surveillance, and some navigating skill. Along the blackberries and phlox in bloom, wave grounds or contemplate a wondrous variety of birdlife. On the left squats 2,730 foot Mount Tremper, while Mount Pleasant, 2,180 feet, provides shade on the right.

If the Esopus rates four stars, the three-star selections in the Northeast include Wappinger Creek, south of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and the picturesque Delaware River, along the New York-Pennsylvania line and running south into Port Jervis, N.Y.

The Wappinger's most "tubable" section is a nine-mile stretch from Manchester Bridge, just west of Poughkeepsie, south through Titusville and Red Oaks Mill, and a delightful nonstop run into Wappinger Lake, just northeast of Wappingers Falls.

Another stretch of the Wappinger to the north flows from Pleasant Valley south to the Poughkeepsie Recreation Park. This is a canoeist's delight, and less dangerous than the aforemencioned run.

The creek's depth ranges from 12 eet to a mere foot, and its serenity is broken by 50-yard stretches of white water. The course is a hardnosed tubers' dream with its straightaways, twists and turns. It also has many submerged trees and a few other obstructions.

While the Wappinger is relatively new to tubers, the Delaware near Port

To the Editor:

I am compelled to voice my anger surprising fact is how long it . at being ripped off at Kennedy Airport several weeks ago.

As it is our custom, we park our car at the long-term parking terminal and upon our return flight to Kennedy have a porter carry our bags to an awaiting cab to take us back to our car. It is the quickest way to get to the parking lot and a precautionary measure for safety at a late hour since the parking lot is isolated.

The meter plainly showed $2.90, and the cab driver requested $5.80. I questioned him and be stated that the meter was there because it had to be there, but his price was $5.80. Rather than argue, I paid him since I was in no mood to become involved after returning from a vacation.

After weighing all the facts I decided to drop it. However, my question is: Is there actually any way that a traveler can be protected from a "gypsy cal driver" who sits waiting for his next victim at Kennedy Airport or any other airport. Why can't stricter controls and regulations govern this group just as it does to the bonest cabbi 3? This is the very first time we have been "taken" by a cab

[A spokesman for Kennedy Airport says gypsy cabs are not allowed in the airport and that travelers should avoid taking any cabs that do not carry the light on the roof. A passenger who is victimized, as was Mr. Kramer, should either refuse to pay and demand to be taken to the nearest policemon or pay and jot down the driver's name and number and report him to the J.F.K. police or the New York City Taxi Cab Commission.]

TRAVELER'S CHECKS

To the Editor:

Regarding the warning on traveler's

PENNSYLVANIA

checks contained in the Letters Column (Travel Section, Aug. 1), 1 think your readers might further be cantioned about cashing traveler's checks at their hotels abroad instead of at a bank unless they know beforehand the precise official rate of exchange. Many hotels make substantial deductions from the current rates.

Here's a typical example: the cashier of a famous London hotel tried to charge me the "hotel rate" of $188 for 100 pound sterling, although the official quotation was nuly $178. Fnr one week's cash requirements (about 400 pounds) the botel's attempted ripoff amounted to $40, while a reasonable and internationally acceptable deduction would have been somewhere

This practice takes on almost fraudulent aspects when-on checking in-the registration desk demands to know (and to enter into your file) whether you plan to pay your bill in traveler's checks, and then recommends that you do so at the cashier's windows, while emphasizing at the same time that there is no need to exchange your checks at a bank; the information is then conveniently withheld that there is a branch of Barclay's Bank right in the botel building,

It is interesting to note that the hotels in the above examples are supposed to be first-rate establishments recommended both in the AAA and Michelin guide books,

HOTELS AND GROUPS

To the Editor:

1 refer to Bernadine Paulsbock's letter (Travel Section, July 11), in which the correspondent implies an indifference to groups on the part of boteliers. As a hotelier having recently been employed by a Caribbean resort, 1 should like, on behalf of my fellow hotel managers, to answer that charge.

Within a hotel's "high season" there are peaks and doldrums of business from individual full-rate travelers. Hotels fill the gaps with group business (O.T.C.'s or incentive travel groups) in order to maintain occupancies so that seasonal staff members do not have to be laid-off or facilities cur-

Conscientious boteliers realize the value of group packages but would not compromise their reputations by permitting standards to deteriorate. In reality groups tend to mean extra service, e.g. get-togethers, cocktail parties, tours and beach barbecues.

I will admit that problems do exist,

Notes: Directories Aid Toll-Free Calling

By JOHN BRANNON ALBRIGHT

The toll-free telephone number looms ever larger in the travel business. The latest figures: close to 200 hotels and motels, 150 travel agencies, 70 scheduled airlines, 20 car and truck rental agencies, 16 cruise ship lines and as many golf resorts, 15 charter tour operatora and at least 9 ski lodges. The nationwide total of toll-free lines is 85,000—and it's growing at the rate of 25 percent a year.

The telephone company offers free directory assistance for toll-free numbers; the consumer can obtain a number by dialing 800-555-1212-but he must know the exact name of the business he's trying to reach. There is an alternative, with the publication of two directories of toll-free numbers: "Toll Free Directory," published by Toll Free Digest Company, Inc., Box 800, Claverack, N.Y. 12513, and "Save the Toll-Free Way," published by P. J. Publisbers, Box 82, Center Square, Pa.

"Toll Free Directory" contains more than 2,500 numbers in its current edition; a spokesman for the company said that a revision is being prepared that will have 3,300 numbers. The directory has 36 magazine-size pages that measure 81/2 by 11 inches, and it carries a few advertisements for businesses such as a tire company and one or two motels. The price, postpaid, is $2.

"Save the Toll-Free Way" contains about 2,000 numbers and is smaller in format, having 88 pages that measure 81/4 by 51/4 inches—and no advertising. Its price, also postpaid, is $2.95.

Neither of the companies publishing the directories, incidentally, has a tollfree number. The regular phone number of "Toll Free Directory" is 518-828-6400; the number for "Save the Toll-Free Way" is 215-272-3754.

BICENTENNIAL MISCALCULATION

Experts in the travel industry are conceding that predictions of record increases in the number of visitors to the 13 original colonies because of the nation's Bicentennial celebration proved unwarranted. But just because travelers have not flocked to the East Coast does not mean that they are not packing their bags and taking off for other parts of the country, According to a survey conducted by Discover

America Travel Organizations, the Bicentennial traveler is going to the West Coast, the Southwest and Hawaii

The survey shows, says DATO president William D. Toohey, that travel gains were "impressive" in the first five months of the year but that they were slowed by a dismal performance in June and a disappointing July Fourth weekend." It is the consensus of the industry that many Americans stayed homa to participate in local celebrations, be says.

Statistically, the survey shows that, nationwide, botels and motels are reporting occupancy increases ranging from 2 to 8 percent; airlines are reporting traffic increases of 14 percent; car rental firms are reporting gains of 30 to 40 percent, and Amtrak is reporting gains of 4 to 5 percent.

Also reporting increases, ranging from 5 to 50 percent, are such attractions as theme parks, historical sites and national parks. But a drop in business was reported by intercity bus lines. Some lines say traffic has declined by as much as 6 percent.

ATR FOR SALE

At least two West German tourist destinations are merchandising one of their natural resources-fresh air. In souvenir shops in Berlin, visitors can buy cans containing about balf a pint of air labeled "Berliner Luft." The phrase, which means "Berlin air," is based on a song from the operetta "Frau Luna" by Paul Lincke and refers not only to the actual air but to the lively ambience of the city as well, according to the German National Tourist Office. The price of a can is about 80 cents. In the small country town of Neuenkirchen in the province of North Rhine-Westphalia, the local tourist office sells cans of "Fresh Vacation Air" for about $1 each. The Neuenkirchen project started as an April Fool's joke, but when a newspaper advertisement the town ran drew a large response, tourist officials decided to fill the orders. The office's address is Tourist Office, D-3041 Neuenkirchen, Lüneburger Heath, Western Germany.

There are several usually helpful starting places. The local newspaper is apt to have a listing of current art exhibitions. The Cultural Office of the American Embessy and the national tourist office of the country can be

LONDON: Long a stimulating city for antiques and traditional art huys, London today also entertains a dynamic contemporary art movement, in sculpture especially, but also in painting and graphics. It is the graphic art renaissance that puts art in London well within reach of many art-conscious visitors. The work of numerous young printmakers is available at prices from $25 to $150. The pound's current decline is a boon to art buyers.

Galleries proliferate. If time presses, check those on side streets off Bond and Regent Streets. Cork and St. James's are often fruitful. Small prestigious galleries that feature voungish British artists include the New Art Centre, Lefevre, Obelisk, the Portal, Felicity Samuels and Marjorie Parr. The Curwen specializes in graphics. So does the Redfern, though its repertoire is more international, not specifically English.

If your taste is traditional, you'll find galleries along Duke Street, St. James's and Bury Street. The ambience is more rarefred and the works considerably more expensive. Excellent buys in London, though, are old prints. To find them, you'll be doing brokenfield running all over town. Cecil Court and St. Martin's Court are treasure troves of bole-in-the-wall old print dealers, such as Suckling, Barry Duncan and A. Reader, among the more interestingly eclectic. For hetter quality Whistler, Piranesi, Callot, Durer and other Old Master prints, try Craddock and Barnard, Colnaghi's or Walter P. Spencer. Old print specialists sometimes keep erratic hours. You'd be advised to call before dropping hy.

PARIS: Don't delude yourself that you can still find cheap Picasso prints overlooked in some Left Bank hook stall. Beware a Picasso print that's too cheap-it's most likely to be a reproduction. Paris prices on big names have escalated in receot years, though they are still a little saving over United States prices on many items. But with 40,000 artists living and working in the City of Light, there are many huys, especially in graphics, hy "unknowns's of quality.

The most comprehensive galleries for 20th-century graphics are probably Berggruen and Maeght (Maeght has two locations, one devoted to paintings and prints, one to prints alone. The rue de Teheran gallery, devoted to graphics, is larger.) Other print special-... ists include Galerie Seder, La Hune and, for fine old prints, Paul Proute. Certain streets are heehives of galleries, such as rue de Seine and rue Bonaparte for graphics especially, rue Jacob, rue Mazarine, Quai Malaquais

auctico. At Musée Galliera, art auctions are held all winter long, with many museum-quality works for sale. The Saile Drouot's auctions run all year, except in August. For specific dates and hours, consult one of the Paris art magazines.

MADRID: The emphasis here shifted from graphics to paintings, and it's still possible to get first-rate works by upcoming Spanish artists for less than in the United States. Even the higger Spanish names, the Tapies-Saura generation, sometimes have small works at prices helow the New York-Paris going rates.

The places to find the "hottest" local names are Galeria Biosca, Theo and the current Spanish strong points, Juana Mordo often has on hand limited editions of etchings and lithographs by the leading artists in her "stable." Egam specializes in prints. For $100 you might be able to get a folio of several color prints by well-known

If you take a side trip from Madrid to Cuenca-it's two and a half hours by rented car-you'll find the superb Museo de Arte Abstracto Español (Museum of Modern Abstract Spanish Art), one of the finest small museums in the world. At the sales desk there are superb print editions for sale at surprisingly modest prices.

TOKYO: Europe has no monopoly on art buys. Japan's contemporary art. scene is full of vitality, variety and good values. Certainly of all Asian countries it offers the richest lode for exploring collectors. Japanese antiquities-scroll paintings, old porcelains, swords, armor, woodcuts-have become expensive in recent years, dua partly to the Japanese mania for collecting and preserving their past. You're best off concentrating on the contemporary scene. There's plenty to keen vou busy.

Japan's forte has long been graphics. especially woodcuts."But today printmakers are experimenting in all kinds of graphic forms. Prices range from as low as $5 for small works by less well-known artists to $200 for a large print by Saito, Munakata or other notable masters. A wide range of bigh quality work can be bought for $20 to

The leading Tokyo print center is indisputably the Yoseido Gallery in the Ginza. Kaigado also has a good, if more limited, selection. For avantgarde work-painting, sculpture and prints-top galleries are the Minami, Nihonbashi and Tokyo. In Kyoto, ancieot art center of Japan, the place for contemporary art is the Yamada Gallery. But the city is full of dusty old antique shops that are fun for browsing and minor purchases. I'd strongly avoid major purchases unless you are well-versed in the subject and period of interest. (I've always found Japan's antique dealers unusually honorable, but you really have to know your subject well to know if you're getting a good value. There are few bargains" left.)

Big department stores in Tokyo, Ryoto and other large cities are other surprisingly good art sources. Most have galleries with frequently changing exhibitions of high quality. (See the local English-language newspaper for listings.) Their range is tremeodous, from ancient to modern art and the ficest "collectibles" in handcrafts, and their prices are on a par with other galleries.

Why are oil paiotings framed behind glass?" I once asked a gallery owner. "Western art is still a relatively oew concept to us Japanese," he explained. "Japanese collectors will oot huy unless they think they are buying museum-quality for investment. To reassure them, we provide museumframing-behind glass. It comforts PHILIPPINES: An active, at times dynamic modern art movement exists io this country. The place to see what's going on is the elegant Luz Gallery is one of the country's major artists. a first-rate painter-turned-sculptor. Prices for high-quality paintings are still surprisingly modest. Other good art buys are 18th- and 19th-century wooden santos (small household saint images), Chinese porcelains excavated locally, and Moro (Mohammedan) artifacts from the southern islands.

Admittedly, not every country has a viable modern or even classical art tradition. But for travelers—and collectors-part of the fun and the travel enrichment is the hunt. It can lead you to artists' studios in sections of a city you'd never discover and spark encounters you'd never have otherwise. Sometimes it leads, I have found, to lifetime friendships with foreign artists and dealers.

Once you've found the work of art that speaks to you and have made it yours, there are a few realities to keep in mind. Namely United States Customs. It is essential to obtain an invoice, receipt or certification from the gallery shop, dealer or artist that the work purchased is an original. If the work is being shipped, ask for an invoice for yourself, as well as a copy to accompany the shipment. It might read as follows, though oo specific text is required:

"I (artist or dealer's name) do bereby declare that (title and medium) is an original done hy hand by (artist)."

Unless the work is very costly, you aren't likely to encounter any problem with Customs. If there is a conflict. the Customs officer usually takes the work aside for a Customs art specialist to determine its originality. If inadvertently charged duty, you may later protest and request a refund by writing Customs for Form 3307, which is an affidavit of originality.

Specifications for paintings are pretty clear-cut. But it may be helpful to quote Customs regulations for sculpture and original prints, which are areas of possible confusion.

Sculptures must be "the original works or models of one of the first castings, replicas or reproductions made from the sculptor's original work or model."

"Etchings, engravings, woodcuts, lithographs or prints . . . made hy other hand-transfer processes . . . must be printed by hand from hand-etched, hand-drawn, or hand-engraved plates, stones or blocks."

What this means is that reproductions are dutiable, original works are oot. Oo old prints, where signing was not customary, a dealer's verification is essential. Regarding sculpture, a direct, limited edition cast of a Giocometti sculpture made by the artist would be duty-free, but a companyproduced small reproduction of a large Giocometti piece would be a facsimile and subject to duty.

Geoerally, it is a saving if you can hand-carry your art work home. Prints are convenient because they can be rolled and packed safely in a cardhoard tube.

Although framed paintings or prints are not dutiable, the frames are—at 6 percent. A gilded, ornate frame can be a costly "extra." Eliminating the frame at the time of purchase could knock off a substantial amount oo the purchase price as well.

Equipped with verification of chase and originality, you shouldn't have any trouble with Customs. ("It may look like a bedspring, Inspector. but that 'Bedspring' is by Giovanni Giovanni, Italy's foremost pop artist, and it set me hack $250.")

What's Doing in BALTIMORE

By ROBERT KANIGEL

OUT OF THE SHADOW—Settled in 1660 and founded in 1729, Baltimore is immersed in the early history of the Republic. Its streets have borne the tread of Frunding Fathers, its skies have been pierced by those very "bombs bursting in air" over First McHenry that inspired "The Star-Spangled Bamer." For most of its 250 years "this gity of just under a years, this city of just under a million has fain in the shadow of bigger and better-known neighbors—Philadelphia, 100 miles to the north; Washington, barely 40 miles south. But Baltimore is holding its head higher these days. Theater is thriving, festivals and museums are drawing crowds museums are drawing crowds— and above all, extensive renova-tion in Colonial-era neighborhoods like Federal Hill and Fells Point has given the city e new national image. Under the Dollar House program, decrepit hulks by the hundreds are heing hought by private citizens from the city for $1 each and transformed into GETTING AROUND-It's no fun crawling through fume-ridden traf-fic snarls in the heat and humidity nf a Baltimore summer. So hest-forget your car and rely on public transportation or your own twn feet. Once settled in e downtown hotel, you'll find most historic and cultural ettractions within walking distance. Those that aren't can be reached through the Mass Transit Administration's fleet of almost 1,000 air-conditioned, almost-new huses. Fares are 35 cents, exact change; 40 cents doring weekday rush hours (6-9 A.M.; 3-6 P.M.). Pick up a route map at the vis-itor's kiosk at the Constellation Dock off Pratt Street, or call 301-539-5000 for information. Until Oct. 31, the M.T.A. else offers a three-hour guided bus tour nf many of the city's historic and cultural attractions. The $4.50 fare ($2.25 for children under 12) in-elndes any applicable admission charges. The bus leaves from downtown hotels et about 9 A.M. every day but Sunday, when it leaves at about noon. Call 301-385-1776 for information. For the wee hours, when buses are scarce, ur for out-of-the-way destinations, take a cab: 50 cents for the flag, 10 cents for each additional city's geographical center, where the street numbering system starts, is Charles and Baltimore Streets, its enliural beart is surely Mount Vernon Place, eight blocks np Charles at Monument Street, This impeccable spot of urban green-cry, evocative of 19th-century London at its gracious best, is home to thu Waiters Art Gallery, the Maryland Historical Society and the Peabudy Conscrivatory, among other cultural institutions. The area consists of a cruciform of small trec-shaded parks replete with statues, fuuntains, handsomn brownstane homes and Barye bronzes. At the intersection of the cross is the first monument to hourr George Washington, a 178-funt-high marble tower capped by a 16-foot statue, built between 1815 and 1829. A historical exhibit et its base is open Friday through Tnesday, 10:30 A.M. to 4 P.M.; no charge. Admission to the tower which is open only till 3:45 P.M. is 25 cents. The view from the top, 228 steps up, takes in downtown Baltimoro and the harbor. Of Mount Vernon Place's four miniparks, the one to the east is most favored for lunch and sunbathing -perhaps because it offers the best seats for listening in on the budding classical musicians at the Peabody Conservatory across the street. For a visual treat, duck into the Peabody Institute Library 17 East Mt. Vernon Place, and view its fire time of law contribute. its five tiers of lacy cast-iron work arrayed around a central court. The library is npen week-days from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. While in the neighborhood, go up Charles Street to Read Street. In its west 200 block you'll find a collection nf boutiques intersocted, at Tyson Street, by a tree-shaded lane of besutifully restored early 19th-century townhouses. For a neighhorly dining spot, try the Mt. Ver-non Inn, at 904 North Charles Street. Its shish kebah, et $5.75, is recommended. Open 10 A.M. to 11 P.M. daily except Monday. No reservations. Across the street is the Pesbody Book Shop and Beer Stuhe, long associeted with H. L. Mencken and a mind-boggling as-sortment of dusty old books, initial-chiseled tables and freely flowing beer. It's open daily from noon to 2 A.M. Sunday from 7. P.M. to 2 A.M. Entertainment, be it poetry reading, hine grass or rinky-dink plano, usually gets under way about 9 P.M.

NEW INNER HARBOR—Perched on e tributary of Chesapsake Bay, Baltimore is a city whose history, economy and cuisine reflect its link to the sea and seaborno commerce. The port, fourth busiest in the nation, remains the city's economic mainspring. Baltimore is in the midst of a half-billion-dollar reconstruction of its Inner Harbor, the area just south of downtown around which the city began. While traces remain of the demolition of old structures, the area's bricked shoreline promenade and hexagonal-shaped World Trade Center rising at the water's adge have already made it a magnet for people and events. One of the few reminders of the past is the Mc-Cormick spice factory at 414 Light Street. Free 30-to-45-minuts tonrs, capped by a stop at an uld English-style tea roum, are given weekdays through Sept. 1 st 10:30 A.M., 1:30 and 2:45 P.M. The angular brick structure at the southern edge of the harbor area at Light Street and Key Highway, at the foot of Federal Hill, is the newly opened Maryland Academy of Sciences Building. On exhibit is a five-font moving, talking modreminders of the past is the Mcof Sciences Building. On exhibit is a five-font moving, talking model of e hlue crab that introduces visitors to the ecology of Chesapeake Bay. A modern planetarium is included in the $9.3-million center, which is open Monday through Friday from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.; Saturday from 10 A.M. to 10 P.M.; Stretay from poor to 5 Admission Sunday from noon to 5. Admission is $2.50 for adults; $1.50 for seniors, stodents and servicemen; $1 for children. The Frigate Constellation, launched from Baltimore in 1797 as the first commissioned ship of the United States Navy and 1797 as the first commissioned ship of the United States Navy, and billed as the world's oldest ship continuously afloat, is herthed et Picr 1, just off Pratt Street. Through Labor Day, it's open for inspection from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. daily; the rest of the year the bours ere 10 A.M. to 3:45 P.M. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for children 6 to 12. There's lots more around the Inner Harbor—a floating restaurant (the bor-a floating restaurant (the steamer Nobska), e World War II submarine open to visitors, harbor

wankee. For ticket information, call 301-243-9800. The Colts (foothall), also based at Memorial Stadium, open their season on Sept. 19 against the Cincinnati Bengals. Tickets, which arn some-times scarce, run from $4 to $15. Call 301-243-3611 for information.

MUSEUMS-With the opening of its new 50,000 square foot wing in 1974, the Walters Art Gallery has become all the more a treat Paintings and tapestries, urns and vases, Islamic manuscripts, Li-moges cnamels, Sevres porcelains, medicval armor—far too much the attempt in a single visit; it's best attempt in a single visit; it's best to zero in on a single floor. Open from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M., Tuesday through Saturday; 1 P.M. to 4 P.M. on Monday; 2 P.M. to 5 P.M. on Sunday. Admission free. The Walters is a block down from the Washington Monument at 600 North Charles Street. A 10-minute ride up Charles Street on the No. 3 or No. 11 bus brings you to the Baltimure Museum of Art. (Get off at 31st Street and look for Art Museum Drive.) The museum Museum Drive.) The museum boasts one of the finost Matisse boasts one of the finost Matisse collections in the country, and also features a photography gallery. American period rooms, an Old Masters wing and art from Africa and the Far East. Hours are 11 A.M. to 5 P.M., Tuesday through Saturday; 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. on Sunday: 7 to 10 P.M. on Thursday. Free admission. Rallroad fanciers will head straight for the B & O will head streight for the B & O Transportation Muscum, haused in of activities, most notably the City Fair, The fair each year attracts new exhibits, concerts and bordes nf people—last year an estimated two million attended the three-day extravaganza. This year's edition is set for Sept. 17 to 19. Visitors to the falr can expect the likes of Irish jigs, used typewriters, the-atrical make-up demonstrations, Polish bot dogs and karate demon-strations. Admission fees have been set at $1.50 general admission; family ticket, $2.50; children under 10 free.

OLD BALTIMORE — Fort Me-Henry, commanding the approach-es to the harbor, was built between 1798 and 1803. During the War of 1812 Fort McHenry's resistance to a 25-hour bombardment by the to a 25-hour bombardment by the British Navy prompted Francis Scott Key to write "The Star-Spangled Banner." The star-shaped fort is open to the public from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. daily through Labor Day, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. the rest of the year. Admission is free. Through Aug. 25 a tattoo is presented by e Marine drum and bugle team every Wednesday from 7 to 8 P.M. A "three-dimensional living-history" program featuring local actors is beld four times daily Wednesday through Saturday through Sept. 6. through Saturday through Sept. 6.
downtown, along lower Howard Street, via the No. 1 bus. The original 30 x 42 foot flag thet flew ovor Fort McHenry was made in a little house at 844 East Pratt Street, which has been preserved as "Flag House," and which includes an 1812 War Museum next door. Open Tnesday through Sat-urday, 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M.; Sun-day from 2 to 4:30 P.M. Admission is $1, children under 16 free, Lexington Market, housed in a new huilding et Lexington and Entaw Streets, on the western fringes of downtown, dates to the Revolu-tionary era, and some of its scores of fresh produce, meat and fish stalls have stayed in the same families for generations. Go for the sights and smells and tastes of what Ralph Waldo Emcrson once called "the Gastronomic Capital of the Universe." Open from 7:36 A.M. to 6 P.M. Monday through Seturday.

SPORTS-While the Bullets (basketball) have moved away and the continued existence of the Clippers (hockey) is in doubt, Baltimore remains big league when it comes to the other major sports. The Orinles (baseball) play at Memorial Stadium, un 33d Street, an easy hop from downtown on the Nn. 3 bus. Reserved seats $2.50 tn $5.50 he purchased at the 7 th $5, can be purchased at the Lord Baltimore Hotel as well as at the stadium. Bleacher seats can still be had for 85 cents, ur 55 cents for children. The season finale comes Sept. 29 with a game against Milthe old Mount Clare Station round-house, at 901 West Pratt Street, just southwest of downtown. Included in its extensive collection. is a replica of Pctor Cooper's Tom Thomb, miniature railroad layouts, dioramas, railroad equipment. Open Wednesday through Sunday, 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for children 6 to 12.

THEATER—The city's theatrical air is charged with excitement these days, and talk abounds of Balti-more's regaining its lost stature as a major try out town for Broad-way. Within city limits alone exist a dozen theater groups, large and small The Theater Project, at 45 West Preston Street, just off Howard offers a stuming variety of dance, avant-garde theater, mime and music brought in from all over the country. Performances generally start at 8 and 10 P.M., and sometimes there's more than one going on et a time. Theater renovations are in progress this summer, so call first at 301-539-3090 to find out what's on tap. Although there is no admission charge, contributions are wel-comed. The Morris Mechanic Theater, in the heart of Charles Center, is one of the few new huilt-from-scratch theaters in the country. It's been lauded for its architecturally hold, quasi-primitive exterior, but chided for its poor sight lines and inferior acon stics. An extensive renovation now under way promises to correct these deficiencies in time for the coming season-which begins in mid-October and includes a string of Broadway hits like "Choros Line" and "Same Time, Next Year." Tho 2:30 P.M. Wednesday and Tho 2:30 P.M. Wednesday and Satorday matinees are offered along with 8:30 performances every night but Sunday. Ticket prices will be right up there with Broadway. For infinimation call 301-727-3924. Center Stage offers locally produced plays at 700 North Calvert, near Mount Vernon Place. once a Jesuit cloister. This fell season's productions, hegiming in October, are not yet firmed up, so October, are not yet firmed np, so call the box office at 301-332-0033 for information. Tickot prices range from $4 tn $8.

MUSIC-Depending on your standards, the Baltimore Symphony Or-chestra is at the huttom of the first rank of major nrchestras nr at the top of the second. During the summer it takes flight from the city and divides its energies between Goucher College in Tow-son and Merriweather Post Pavillion in the "new town" of Columhia (Towson is about eight miles north of Baltimure, Culumbia about 15 to the southwest.) In late September the orchestra returns to its Lyric Theater home, at 120 Muunt Royal Avenue, For ticket and performance information for the summer and fall seasons, call 301-837-5691. Jazz lovers will want to set aside Sunday evenings, from 5 to 9 P.M., for year-round Left Bank Jazz Society concerts, which bring to the Famous Ballroom, at 1717 North Charles Street, some of the biggest names in jazz. It usually costs about $5.50 to get in. Call 301-945-2266 for information.

RESTAURANTS — Part of the mystique of Maryland's famous steamed crabs lies in the ritual of oating them: You're outfitted with a bib, handed a knife and wooden mallet, and the crabs are spread over the table, usually along with pitchers of heer. The heart of erab country is east Baltimore, where two popular seafood restanrants arn Bud's Beer Garden and Gordon's. Bud's, at 3919 East Lombard Street (301-732-4080), is e neighborly sort of place with an enclosed heer garden for outdoor summer eating. Open daily from 8 A.M. to 2 A.M. No reservations. 8 A.M. to 2 A.M. No reservations. A bit elassier choice for seafood, on Patterson Park Avenue and Orleans Street, is Gordon's (301-732-2040). Open from 11 A.M. to 10:30 P.M. Monday through Thursday and Sunday; till 11:30 P.M. on Friday and Saturday. Steamed crabs are normally priced by the dozen, though you needn't order that many. You might, for example, ask for "e half dozen tens," meaning you want six crahs of the size selling for $10 e dozen. At Bud's, crabs range from $6 to $18 a dozen; at Gordou's, they're a flat $18 a dozen. Also in east Baltimore is Heussner's, 3236 Eastern Avenue (301-327-8365), which specializes in seafood, German dishos and art. That's right—art. Not Sunand art. That's right—art. Not Sun-day watercolors, mind you, but Van Dyck, Gainshorough and Rembrandt originals. Entrees run from $3.25 to $10.85. Open 11 A.M. to 11 P.M., closed Sunday and Monday. Hanssner's accepts no credit cards and no reservations; on weekends, be prepared to stand in line. Mar-com's, 106 West Saratoga Street (301-752-9286), is regarded by many as the best dining spot in town. Its continental cuising is served in an unprotentious setting said not to bave changed in 50 years. Fillet of sole served in a dozen different ways is a specialty.
Entrees run up to about $8. Open from noon, Tuesday through Saturday. No seating after 8 P.M., no reservations, no credit cards. At 210 Wost Mnlberry Street, in Baltimore's fragment of a Chinatown, is Mee Jun Low (301-752-9308), a tiny second-floor Chinese restanrant accessible only via a steep stairway. The tasty Cantonese fars more than compensates for its less than elegant setting. Open 6 P.M. to midnight, except until 1 A.M. on Friday and Saturday; clused Monday. Little Italy, just east uf downtown, uffers a wealth of exdowntown, uriers a wealth of ex-cellent Italian restaurants, porhaps the hest being Chiapparelli's, at 237 Sunth High Street (301-585-9822). Entrees range from $6 to $12, Don't fail to order the enor-mous fresh salad served with a superb honse dressing ($1.50). Open daily from 11 A.M. tn 10:30 P.M., except until 2 A.M. on Fri food served in an intimate underground setting uf small, stone-lined aleoves, try Tio Pept's, 10 East Franklin Street (301-539-4675). HOTELS—In a feat of legislative legerdemain, city lobbyists man-aged to push through the state-legislature hond issues for both a hillion dollar plus subway system and a $35-million convention cen-ter. The convention center, duc for completion in 1979, promises to spur construction of e planned 300-room first-class botel over-looking the Incer Harbor. But until then, there'll he a dearth of first-class hotels. The Baltimore Hilton, with 645 rooms starting et $27 for singles and $35 for dou-bles, is e flashy new high rise at 101 West Fayette Street (301-752-1100), Its lobby is a bit blab, but its rooms are large, wide-win-dowed and tastefully furnished. The city's oldest hotel is the Lord Baltimore, Hanover and Baltimore Streets (501-539-8400), which just got a $3-million renovation job. It offers singles at $20 and up, doubles from $29, and boasts a comfy, old-fashioned lobby. Though its rooms are all individually airconditioned, most still have vestigial ventilation gratings in their doors. Holiday Inn/Downtown, at Howard and West Lombard Streets (301-685-3500), makes np for its somewhat unattractive location with a rotating rooftop res-taurant, a pool and the Baltimore Arts tower right across the street. Rooms—some of which, at this writing, look ont unto an adjacent demnlitium site—gn for $25 and np for singles, $34 and np for donbles. Ontside downtown, but still fairly convenient to many city spots, are the Cross Keys Iun, 5100 Falls Road, and the Sheraton Inn-Baltimore, Broadway and Orleans Street.
Cross Keys Inn (301-532-6900), accessible via the Junes Falls Expressway (Culd Spring Lane exit), is about five unles nurth of downtown. Singles start at $29, dnnbles at $36. The Sheraton Inn-Baltimorc (301-675-6800) is convenient to the east Baltimure neighbor-hoods of Highlandtown, Fells Puint and Little Italy, as well as the Johns Hopkins medical complex. Room rates: $26 and up fur singles, from $33 fur doubles.

"National told Daddy he can stay for $53 when we go to Walt Disney World. And I can stay for free!"

Families are saying, "National Airlines, take me, I'm yours," when they hear about our special tours to Orlando. They're one reason 3 out of 4 of our passengers have flown with us before.

ORLANDO FOR GROWN-UPS: $53-$120 per person, double occupancy, 3 nights. Plus air fare.

For just $53, you can stay three nights in a fine Orlando hotel. And that includes a book of 8 exciting attraction tickets at Walt Disney World! That also includes all transfers between the airport, hotel and park. And up to two children (aged 3-11) free in your room!

If you don't want to miss any of the action, stay right inside Walt Disney World's own on-site hotels for only $120 per adult. And again, the same things are included, and much more. We've got lots and lots of other Orlando packages, too. Of course, all air fares are extra. And all prices are valid through December 15, 1976. For more information about all of National's Orlando packages and for reservations, just call your travel agent at The Vacation Store, or National Airlines at 697-9000. And say, "National Airlines, take me, I'm yours."

OR the family that is not prepared to rush ioto canoeing—and that probably applies to most-there are a growing oumber of comprehensive livery services that offer an introduction to some of the natioo's most exciting waterways without any significant investment of money. One of them is run by Bob Trowbridge, who keeps about 500 canoes oo the Russian River, just north of Sao Francisco. His phooe number is 707-542-0598. He bas arranged to have buses bring in canceists from San Francisco in the morning, then meet them downstream at the end of the day. As one observer put it, the canoes begin "as if they were waiting for the opening gun at Le Mans," but soon spread out for a remarkably tranquil run down the

Within a two-bour drive of New York City, George Mick runs a livery service in the Wharton State Forest in New Jersey about 25 miles from Atlantic City, His number is 609-726-1380. He offers wilderness canoeing on four different rivers, for periods ranging from several hours to two Canoeists who prefer wider waters can consider the Delaware River, which hecomes more placid as it moves south. Starting from the north, among the best equipped liveries are Landers Canoes in Narrowsburg, N.Y. (tel: 914-252-7101); Kittatiny Canoes in Dingmans Ferry, Pa. (717-828-2700). (609-737-3446).

dense, woodland. Occasionally the mountains would come right down to the river bank, or we would confront a sheer rock formation. Now and then the country to the right or left would shift to farmland or to pasture.

Frequently a herd of cattle, too hot on the river bank, would join us in the river. We saw deer and turtles and beaver and an otter (at least, I think it was an otter) while fish leaped ceaselessly around the boat.

We saw very few buildings along the river, even fewer people and no oeoo signs, gas stations or souvenir shops. The only sounds we heard were the mooing of the cowa and the rippling of the water, except for the frolicking voices of my own kids and, twice, the distant hoot of a locomotive. Occasicoally, wheo we stopped on the river bank to rest or to eat, another silver. canoe would overtake us, and its inhabitants would wave a greeting as they glided by. But, mostly, it was a solitary experience, wild and hushed. Each night, when we reached camp, the kids' first chore was to go out in search of water to reful our canteens. My assignment was to cook the dinner, and I was glad I had brought the Sterno stoves, for I was too tired to fight with chips and kindling to get a wood fire started.

Both nights we started dinner by tearing open an envelope to make hot soup, which we drank greedily from

The Big Daddy of the business is Bill Rom, who for years has run Canoe Country Outfitters io Ely, Minn. (218-365-4046). Ely is the center of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area, adiaceot to the Canadian frootier. For about $16 a day, Mr. Rom provides a canoe and paddles, a tent and sleeping bag and food for three meals with cooking utensils. During the summer. he keeps about 600 canoes a day filled mostly with families.

In the Smokles in North Carolina, Payson Kennedy (704-488-6407) has an extensive operation on the Nantahala River, about 150 miles from Atlanta. He conducts weekend and five-day canos clinics where a novice can get Instructioo, a guide, meals and lodgings and evening classes on canoe theory-all for $30 a day.

Mr. Kennedy uses not only the Nantahala hut the Chattooga River, which acquired fame as the river on which the movie "Deliverance" was filmed. Mr. Kennedy was, in fact, a stand-in for Jon Voigt in the canoe scenes. Some people in the business credit "Deliverance" for the surge in interest In canoeing, hut Mr. Kennedy is skeptical, his own experience being, he says, that the show of interest started well before the movie.

What "Deliverance" did do, according to Gall Cowart, training director for the American Canoe Association, was to tempt adventurers onto white water they could not handle, Canoeing erance" almost tripled, he says.

Yet canoeing is not particularly dangerous, according to its practitioners, so long as canoeists use prudence and keep withio their capacity. Canoe Magazine finds that most fatalities-of which there are about 150 a yearoccur in the early spring, when streams are paralyzingly cold. Accidents in warmer weather and in slower moving water are extremely few, according to the magazine.

For those who do want to try white water, it is waiting oo the Housatonic, fust below Falls Village, Conn. Canoes are available there from River Run Outfitters (203-824-5579).

Canoe rentals at commerical liveries usually run from $8 to $10 a day, including paddles and life jackets. Many liveries permit canoeists to rent a boat. pack it oo top of their own car and go off to try any river they like. For a family of four, with their own sleeping bags but no boat, a three-day canoe vacation should run less than.

Equipment

Since the development of the aluminum canoe by Gurmman in 1945, canoeing's basic item of equipment bas been virtually indestructible. The more bought for $25. Pretty good canoe also be obtained through Canoe Magarecent Fiberglas canoe appears equally durable. Both are priced at about $350.

At 75 pounds for the standard 17foot model, the aluminum canoe is a little lighter, which makes it easier to put atop a car. The Fiberglas version is a little more slippery, which while afloat allows it to glance off rocks that teod to cling to metal. Fiberglas canoes come in attractive colors; aluminum ones take a coat of paint, but scratches teod to show. The alumioum canoe has traditionally enjoyed a three-to-one advantage in sales, Both boats can lie out in the backyard all winter without damage.

The traditional-minded may save up their money to huy an old-fashioned wood-and-canvas job, which is handmade and costs nearly $1,000. A few experts might select custom-built models, crafted in a dozen small factories around the country, at even higher prices. But canoes, unlike skis or guns, are not cult objects, revered for their. peculiar powers and virtues. Some 90. percent of buyers are happy to bave the standard model.

Guidebooks

Canoe Magazine offers a moothly review of canoe guides, which are currently appearing in profusion. The books reviewed in the August issue include, for example, 'Adirondak Canoe Waters" by Paul F. Jamiesoo and "New England Whitewater Guide" hy Ray Gabler.

The American Canoe Association, the magazine's pareot, also publishes a list of available guides, which includes "Exploring the Little Rivers of New Jersey" and . "Maryland-Pennsylvania Canoe Trails." There are also guides, for example, for families who want to take organized trips or want to take a warm-weather canoe vacation in the wintertime.

Almost all guides are locally written. by canoeists with long experience in the waters on which they report. Canoeists are not necessarily writers, and the guides are not of uniformly high quality. Almost all of them contain maps with descriptions of the canoe courses, with greater or lesser, attention to the hazards. The good ones also provide information on nearby food and equipment suppliers. campsites, parking and put-in and will improvise arrangement

"The community has been getting on us because many tubers don't have life preservers as canocists do," says Bill Aumick of Deer Park Sports Center in Port Jervis. The canoe crowd have to wear life preservers-it's a state law. But some tubers don't wear anything but a bathing suit. If the tube gets a hole in it what do you do?"

On the Toms River in New Jersey you can begin your journey at Whitesville, flow southeast past Pleasant Plains and the nearby Veterans of All Wars Memorial to the town of South Toms River and then into the Atlantic. Also in New Jersey, the Passaic River, running from Millington (south of Mor, "Seminaryson, the west wither ristown) to Singac is a splendid stream it passes the Campgaw Mount for navigating in the spring and fall, following the early spring and late summer rains. Campsites are available along the run, as well as views of Great Swamp National Wildlife Reftubing, a tractor trailer tube will cost you about $14, new, and $6, used. In New York City, both kinds are sold at General Tire, 835 11th Avenue, and VHE Standard Inc., 261 Delancey Street, in Manhattan, and Liben-Hansel Tire Corporation, 1732 Webster Avenue, Bronx. For rentals, one must go to tubing country. In Phoenicia, N.Y., the Four Seasons Sporting Goods store charges $3 a day for truck tubes and $2 for smaller models. In the Catskills, try the Camper Center, White Plains Road, Tarrytown. Arlington Sporting Goods has two locations in Poughkeepsie (on Main Street and on the Main Mall). In the Delaware region: Deer Park Sports Center, Port Jervis, and Barryville Kayak in Barryville. On Long Island, Extrasport Inc. in Halesite specializes in kayalters' equipment. In New Jersey, Pineland Canoes, on State Route 527 in Toms River, stocks whitewater gear.

A life preserver retails from $7, for the bulky, older "Mas" West" type, to $38 for the sleeker version favored by water skiers. A rubberized wet suit costs about $50; or you could settle for a shirt and, for about $17 an item, wet-suit gloves and boots. On a rough river, the tuber also needs a helmet. A. knyaker's padded helmet is $22 to $26, but a good hockey helmet at $18 to $21 will also do the job. Another worthwhile extra. especially in white water, is a paddle. A laminated kayak paddie runs anywhere from $19 to $75; plastic ones can be had for $3 to $9.

Accommodations. Many tubers head for campgrounds, but longings can usually be found near the rivers. In the Esopus area, the Mount Pleasant Lodge (914-688-2278) on State Route 28 near

I have hosted many receptions to pacify such guests. and the reactions are predictahle. "I paid to come to an exclusive resort. Why am I kept awake by loud car salesmen who insist on partying until 3 A.M.?" Or, "This is a lovely resort, but before I book for next year I am going to make sure you haven't booked a group."

Given the different types of group, whether it be via an established tour operator, incentive travel organization, or even a club that owns its own aircraft, hotel arrangements are very much the same. Group check-ins, welcoming parties and farewell dinners are standard routines. What makes one tour more enjoyable for the guest than another is the calibre of the tour operator; they differ vastiv. I have experienced tour operators' representatives who arrive at the hotel barely one day before the arrival of the charter flight without any idea of the group's needs. Yet there are those who arrive at the hotel several weeks in advance to finalize arrangements so that they can print programs for their clients and mail them in advance. The hotels need the business whether it be from group packages or individuals who are prepared to pay the full rate.

A rare chance to enjoy a 12-day Gulf cruise— with all the comforts of a round-the-world vessel.

There is something special about the elegance of a round-the-world vessel. You sense It on no other ship. There is an uncrowded vastness to its decks and lounges. A comfortable spaciousness to its limited number of cabins. A deft, nimble graciousness to its seasoned crew.

Most people who take short cruises rarely experience the exhilarating pleasure of such a vessel. But this fall you can sample it to the full. For 12 glorious days. Aboard the Royal Viking Sea.

Before leaving on her third round-theworld cruise in January, 1977, the Sea will take two 12-day Gulf/Caribbean cruises. Here is your chance to combine the convenience of a short cruise with the luxury of a long cruise. Even people who have sailed these waters a dozen times before will find the experience extraordinary.

There are a mere 289 cabins, all First Class. 94% of all passengers enjoy sweeping. outside views. With fewer people aboard than ordinary short-cruise vessels, the 300-man crew has ample time to care for

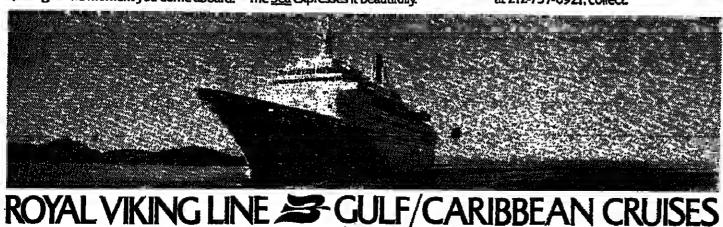

The experience continues throughout the ship, thanks to a spaciousness that lets you live your days as actively or as quietly as you choose. There are deck games, and quiet out-of-the-way lounges. There is a swimming pool large enough for swimming, and decks quiet enough for dreaming. There is rousing evening entertainment, and deserted moonlit railings. The dining room, set high on an upper deck, is large enough to serve everyone at a single, relaxed seating. This freedom to vary your pace to match your moods is the halimark of luxurious, lengthy cruising. . It begins the moment you come aboard. The Sea expresses it beautifully.

Along the way you will visit Playa del Carmen and Cozumel, Mexico. Georgetown, Grand Cayman, Montego Bay, Jamaica. And Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Ports carefully chosen to offer you a variety of shore amusements: beach-strolling, sightseeing, shopping. If you are thinking of taking a short cruise this fall, here is a marvelous opportunity to take it with long-cruise luxury. Aboard the round-the-world Royal Viking Sea. Of Norwegian registry. And spirit.

Each cruise offers a choice of embarkation ports. The first departs Fort Lauderdale November 16, and New Orleans November 19. The second departs Fort Lauderdale November 29, and New Orleans December 2.

3 CRUISES ON THE s.s. ROTTERDAM TO WARM YOUR BODY AS WELL AS YOUR SPIRITS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

This winter during the holiday season, Holland America's world cruise ship, the s.s. Rotterdam, will be circling the world of the Caribbean from the West Indies to the East Andes.

And being a world cruise ship, the s.s. Rotterdam is one of the most luxurious resorts you'll find on land or sea. Which means you'll enjoy all the comforts of home as well as the facilities and entertainment of an international resort.

Your vacation takes off the minute you board in New York. And as you vacation, ports like Jamaica, Aruba, Grenada, Caracas and Mexicos Cozumel come right up to you. There's no packing and unpacking, no checking in and out of hotels and no getting held up in holding patterns over airports. And no tipping required.

In between you can drive golf balls, shoot skeet, sunbathe and rest assured the nightlife won't put you to sleep.

So make Holland America your home for the holidays and enjoy the experience of acruise line that's been cruising the world for 103 years. Call your travel agent or check the coupon and mail it with your name and address to Holland America Cruises, 2 Penn Plaza, New York 10001. Or call (212) 760-3880. The s.s. Rotterdam is registered in the Netherlands Antilles.

Fly every Saturday direct from New York!

A 7-day fly/cruise on the new Cunard Countess.

Newest ship for your Caribbean cruise.

Because she's brand-new, the Cunard Countess has exclusive features no other popularly priced cruise ship can match. Like her "suspended" decks which absorb noise

More and bigger public rooms. More open deck space with a glamorous Lido/Pool area. Plus 4 bars, 3 nightclubs, casino, cinema, sauna, shopping arcade and a restaurant in the sky.

Two "rooms" in one.

Perhaps the single most unique feanire of the new Countess is her one-room "suites." In seconds each bed slips out of sight. In its place is an upholstered sofa. Suddenly, your bedroom is a living room and you're ready for entertaining friends.

South America, plus five ports.

A new ship deserves a great itinerary. Six exciting ports in 7 days: Caracas (La Guaira), Venezuela, Grenada, Barbados, St. Lucia, St. Thomas, San Juan. No onc-week Miamibased cruise can offer as much.

More value for your dollar. Two "rooms" for the price of one. More, and better priced, outside cabins.

cial value. You enjoy the best itinerary in the Caribbean. And service in the 136-year Cunard tradition.

TRAVEL

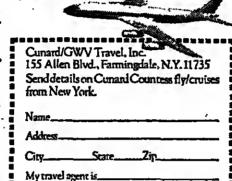

This great value sails every Saturday right from San Juan. Rates include mund trip jet air fare, four superb meals daily and all entertainment aboard, port taxes and transfer between San Juan airport and the ship. Fly/cruise rates are only $555-$920*. Per person, double occupancy.

Fourteen-day fly/cruise/ resort option.

You can leave the ship for a week at Cunard's lovely Hotel La Toc on St. Lucia or the Paradise Beach Hotel on Barbados. The Cunard Countess will pick you up the following week.

Twn-week fly/cruise/resort package: $770-$1,010*. Per person, double occupancy. (Meals extra at resort.) See your travel agent, call Cunard/GWV Travel, Inc. at (212) 983-2510 or mail coupon. Va Overseus National Airways, a U.S.-certificated sandeme ral air carrier: travel arranged

M.S. Mermoz turns a Caribbean Cruise into a French Rendezvous. Any Sunday from San Juan.

If you want to spend all of your Sundays at home with a newspaper, please turn the page. But if, just for once, you'd like to take off on a Caribbean Cruise with an out-of-this-world

French ship, please read on.

Her name is M. S. Mermoz. She's registered in France, She's the one and only French cruise ship sailing from San Juan. And she not only has the French flair for dawn-to-dawn fun, she has the French touch for complimentary wines and continental cuisine.

So let the wines tease your tastebuds. Let the Crêpes Suzette light up your eyes. And prepare to discover another you.

For M. S. Mermoz is a world all your own. Yon can walk a mile or two on her open decks. Swim a lap or three in her outdoor pools. Pick up a terry robe, a deck chair and a beach mat for free. And take some lessons in tennis and golf.

Have lunch at her poolside buffet or her Café de la Paix. Shop for duty-free buys in her Boutique. Save your grandest entrance for her Grand Salon. Catch a film in her widescreen Cinema. Bring on the musicians, the entertainers and the dancers in her Cabaret. Dance the night away in her Discothèque. . And wake up to croissants and steaming coffee in a double cabin with two who-wants-to-get-up lower beds and someone you love.

So let that certain someone help you choose between two Rendezvous Cruises.

Rendezvous I is a 7-day cruise to Barbados, the British word for paradise. Trinidad, where the calypso was born. St. Vincent, the garden of the Grenadines. Guadeloupe, the green-and-

How the jet set turned a 7th century European city into the 8th wonder of the world. Dubrovnik.

Sophisticated Europeans have made this charming old city the new place to go. A white-washed playground set along the blues and greens of the Adriatic. Shaped by ancient fortifications, with a backdrop of craggy cliffs civilized by sculptured greenery and softened by dunes of sun-washed sand. In the distance, the soaring silhouettes of mountain peaks rising to dizzying heights above the red tiled roofs, then plunging headlong to the wave-curled floor of the sea. Here, the sun is king. And rain clouds rarely cast their grey shadows across the warm tracts of Dubrovnik is a summer fesival — all year round. There are swinging night clubs and quiet restaurants, charming museums and colorful galleries. Try your hand at bacarat in the elegant casino. Or your feet at dancing on the candle-lit terrace of a discotheque.

The daytime sports program is equally impressive. Swing your racquet on a clay-floored court tucked in a fragrant pine grove. Or swing your skis against the curl of a gentle wave. Raise a sail amidst islands blessed by a steady breeze. Or lower yourself into the clear waters of the Adriatic-or your hotel swimming pool.

And while Dubrovnik is a vacation paradise, her prices are still distinctly down-to-earth. There are 2500 fashionable deluxe and first-class hotel rooms at old-fashioned prices. The beautiful Babin Kuk Hotel offers a room, an American style breakfast and dinner (or lunch), plus a beautiful seaview terrace to enjoy it on, for $13 to $24 (depending on the season) per person double occupancy.

The bargains don't end with your bed and board. A taxi ride from Dubrovnik Airport to your See as enery evening them 7:30 to 8:00 P.M.
